Announcement was made yesterday by the talen committee in charge of the cast for "Bimbo" the American Legion's annual musical production, that Miss Eunice Taft would appear in the prima donna role. Miss Taft is well known in musical circles in this city as the possessor of a splendid voice and in addition a charming personality which makes her admirably suited to a role of this character. Miss Taft will be seen in the role of "Sylvia Vandervear," an American heiress who is vacationing on the South Sea Island of "Bimbo" where she meets her "ideal," in the person of an American engineer who is engaged in building a railroad across the island. Complications resulting from a promise to her dying father keep the interest of their courtship at a high tension, but the young engineer solves the puzzle which makes everything come out right in the end. This charming romance in the heart of the story of the play and Miss Taft's performance of the heroine is proving most popular at rehearsals.

The reserved seat exchange opens at Engler's drug store on Saturday morning at nine o'clock. The ticket committee reports a heavy advance sale of the pasteboards and record crowds are expected to greet the Legion's second annual show at the Palace on next Tuesday and Wednesday.

All big time B. F. Keith vaudeville acts make the program at the Broadway theater, the last half of this week, the vaudeville treat of the season. It is a bill of infinite variety and if you'll take our advice you'll not miss it.

Breed Theater

Viola Dana has scored again. The little Metro-Goldwyn star once more proved she is the premier comedienne of the screen when she appeared in her newest picture, The Beauty Prize, last night at the Breed theater. This delightful human interest film was made from the Saturday Evening Post story of the same name by Nina Wilcox Putnam, and gave Miss Dana one of the best vehicles she has had in a long, long time.

Last night's audience was pleased not only with Miss Dana, but also with the beauty contest, which showed how the winner of the national title, Miss America, is selected. It seemed as if the Metro-Goldwyn company must have conducted a contest of their own, for more than fifty pretty girls very used, and they added a great deal of attractiveness to the picture.

The Beauty Prize will be shown again today and other pictures on the bill include Bennie Leonard in Bout of Flying Fists, the Fox news and a Sunshine comedy.

Strand

One of the best of the season was the verdict pronounced by the big audience at the Strand yesterday to witness the first showing of Milton Sills in Why Women Remarry. The production made special appeal because of the novelty of the story, the excellent cast and splendid direction.

The associate feature now showing at the Strand was Lee Maloney in a thrilling western comedy drama of ranch life Payable On Demand a five reel feature portraying the life of a poor ranch owner. Syd Smith in his new comedy The Night Watch contains many good laughs and the above program will be repeated at the Strand for the last time today. Manager MacNaughton of the Strand in announcing the double feature attraction at this theater for Friday and Saturday is quite elated over the fact that Norwich will have the first public screening of Pearl White in her very latest feature Perils of Paris. Franklin Farnum in The Gamblin Fool will be the companion feature for Friday and Saturday and with two attractions as these the Strand will no doubt be taxed to capacity.

Palace

When Elda Vettori, a slim youthful girl from St. Louis, Mo., came to the Palace theater there as the leading prima donna of the San Carlo Grand Opera Company, on February 9th, local music followers will have their first opportunity to witness and listen to the girl who has upset all musical traditions in the United States. Singing but her second year of grand opera, Mme. Vettori is one of the most talked-of-prima donnas in the world, and musical critics from New York to San Francisco have rendered a verdict as to her ability which has been seconded by the audiences wherever she has sung. She will sing the leading role, that of Lady Leonora in the opera Il Trovatore.

Just about a year ago, a slim beautiful girl stepped out on the stage of the vast Century theatre in New York, to sing her debut as Santuzza in the opera Cavalleria Rusticana. There had been no advance heralding of the new artist—no one, not even the critics who were there in full array, had heard much about her. Their first amazement was at her beauty, for it is not every opera singer who combines loveliness of face and form with a gorgeous voice. Then she began her famous Santuzza's Air number.

As she completed her aria, she leaned weakly on a table on the stage, her face white with fear at what was to be the reception of the number. For a single moment there was absolute silence in the majestic opera house, then a volume of applause, mounting to a roar, attested to the fact that a new sensation had been discovered. The entire audience, jewelled and bedecked in society's finest raiments, rose to its feet and applauded for a full five minutes until the artist had to repeat her aria. Thus Elda Vettori arrived. Throughout the national tour, and the printed verdict of the leading musical critics support these statements, this young girl, heretofore unknown, scored individual triumphs. She immediately was made the leading dramatic prima donna of the entire San Carlo forces.

Motorcycle Policeman William Buckley, making a night patrol, saved Charles Georgas, his wife Aspasia, and their child from death in a fire which broke out in Georgas' restaurant in Stratford.

TAFTVILLE

Every few months there comes a time when a great deal of foreign money is circulated in the village. One of the most popular coins at present is the new nickle issued by the Dominion of Canada. There are a great many Canadian families residing in the town, and Canadian money has generally circulated pretty freely here, even bank notes. One of the main objections to the old Canadian nickel was that it looked very much like an American dime and often passed for one. The nickle is a very different looking coin, being the size of a United States buffalo nickel. Sometime ago Italian lire were passed freely for quarters, although their value was much less, and small copper coins of the Scandinavian countries were being offered and accepted as pennies.

Most of the Taftville people who claim to be weather prophets are warning against believing too strongly in the ground hog myth. When the first bluebird arrives is a sure sign of spring they say.

Castle Perilous, No. 3747, K. O. K. A. held a conclave for knights, esquires and pages in the vestry of the Taftville Congregational church Wednesday evening. The reading of the Arthurian legend was continued, and various items of business were disposed of. After the conclave, the members enjoyed a social hour in the recreation rooms in the basement of the building.

J. Odilon Dugas of Shetucket street, Norwich was a caller in the village Tuesday evening.

Fire company No. 2 of Merchants avenue responded to a small fire in a shed on Hunters avenue, Wednesday afternoon about 1 o'clock. Their prompt work extinguished the blaze and prevented it from spreading to nearby buildings.

The French speaking society of Children of Mary held a meeting Wednesday evening at Sacred Heart Church.

A special collection for the work in the south of the American Mission Association is to be taken next Sunday at the Taftville Congregational church school.

St. Veronica's T. A. and B. Society held a meeting Wednesday evening in their rooms on Providence street, with the president, Miss Louis White in the chair. This being the monthly business meeting of the society, the reports of the secretary and treasurer were read and approved. There was also a volume of other business disposed of. After the business session refreshments were served by a special committee appointed at the last monthly meeting. The attendance was large.

Miss Fannie Fink has resigned her position with the weaving department of the Penemah company.

The minstrel show that the Taftville Social and Football club gave in Penemah hall last week, is to be given at the State Tuberculosis Sanaterium Friday evening for the enjoyment of the patients.

Given Farewell Party.

There was a farewell party Friday evening at the home of the Misses Jeane and Marguerite Dunion, in honor of Miss Grace McSheffersy of 344 Central avenue as she was to leave for Hartford Monday to enter St. Francis' Training School for Nurses. There were many of her girl friends present. Miss Julia Wilton presented Miss McSheffersy a gold piece in behalf of those present.

MRS. JOHN LAIDLAW BUEL
Guest of D. A. R. Chapter

Mrs. John Laidlaw Buel of Litchfield, honorary state president and vice president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution, was the guest of Faith Trumbull chapter and the speaker at its February meeting Wednesday afternoon, held at the Wauregan house ball room with an attendance of about 125.

Mrs. Buel spoke upon what Connecticut is doing for delinquent women through the state farm for women at East Lyme and she warned the members of the chapter that they ought to work to prevent the passage of house bill No. 41, which, if passed, would destroy the whole influence and opportunity of reformation of delinquent women, who are committed to the state farm. This is largely because it provides for short term commitments instead of the three year commitment under the present law. Mrs. Buel is one of the members of the state committee on delinquent women.

The regent, Mrs. George A. Ashbey, opened the meeting in usual form with singing of America, the Lord's prayer and the salute to the flag. Miss Annie E. Vaughn was at the piano. The usual reports were omitted but a report was made by Miss Barbara Allen, chairman of the ways and means committee, on the bridge-luncheon which is to be given in the community house. The sum of $5 was voted to a scholarship that is being raised in the United States to enable Philippine girls to come to the United States for a course in nursing.

Delegates Elected

Mrs. Herzekiah Perkins was elected the chapter delegate to the Continental Congress in Washington, April 20 to 25. The alternates elected were, Mrs. William H. Dooley, Mrs. Robert W. Otis, Mrs. E. Allen Bidwell, Mrs. W. Tyler Browne, Mrs. Arthur H. Lathrop, Mrs. George A. Haskell, Miss Carrie S. Rogers, Mrs. Owen S. Smith, Mrs. George C. Preston, Miss Susan L. Gallup.

The chapter elected Mrs. H. W. Gallup and Mrs. A. N. H. Vaughn delegates to the annual state meeting at Ansonia, March 25 and 26, with the following alternates: Mrs. Roy D. Judd and Mrs. Arthur Harvey Lathrop.

The need of a fireproof building in Norwich as a museum for the many curios and beautiful antique furniture owned by the chapter was spoken of by Mrs. William Tyler Browne, chairman of the museum committee.

Mrs. Buel Speaks

Mrs. Buel was introduced by the regent, Mrs. Ashbey and she spoke at length upon the state farm for women and the child labor amendment. Modern methods in penology, she said, aimed at reformation, giving the woman committed to the state farm another chance, it is not a display of weak, maudlin sympathy, but the use of reason and common sense towards those who repent and want to do better. The state farm gives the women another chance, physically, mentally and morally. The methods used appeal to the best in them and the result has been a complete rehabilitation for the largest percentage of delinquent women who are committed to the state farm. The Connecticut practice compares well with other states.

Mrs. Buel spoke of the building needs of the state farm at present and warned the members against allowing house bill No. 41 to be passed.

Speaking of the child labor amendment, Mrs. Buel said that this is an evasion of the fundamental principles of state government and proposed to give to congress a sweeping power which would not be safe in their hands. Many believe this is not the method to get at abuses of child labor in states where it exists. She quoted Victor Berger's endorsement of the proposed child labor amendment and said it was plainly a social measure one effect of which would be to bring about a state of enforced idleness for thousands who might better be at work.

Musical Numbers

A musical programme that was greatly enjoyed was given by Charles J. Dyer and Henry J. LaFontaine, the former singing a number of old English songs, including "Thy Ars You Wandering Here, I Pray. There is a Lady, and Drink to Me Only. Mr. La Fontaine delighted his audience with Tchaikowski number, Etude de Concert, for left hand alone.

Following the program tea was served by the following hostesses Mrs. Arthur Harvey Lathrop, Mrs. Elijah Birdsell, Mrs. Franklin Wilcox, Mrs. Henry Lanz, Mrs. Elisha Rogers, Mrs. Charles J. Twist, Mrs. E. Allen Bidwell, Mrs. George L. Ingalls, Mrs. William H. Oat, Mrs. Harvey M. Briggs, Mrs. Arthur M. Thompson, Mrs. Herbert M. Leron, Mrs. J. J. Donahue, Mrs. C. Edward Carpenter, Mrs. H. E. Higgins, Miss Susan Gallup, Miss Faith Bonfoey, Miss Louis A. Wheeler, Mrs. F. Leon Hutchins, Mrs. E. A. Cudworth, Mrs. Charles S. Holbrook, Misses Bennett.

The program of the afternoon was arranged by a committee, the chairman of which was Mrs. Arthur Harvey Lathrop.

REVENUE COLLECTOR GIVES HINTS FOR TAXPAYERS

The U. S. internal revenue office located in the court house, Norwich, will be open daily from Feb. 24 to March 15 inclusive. Taxpayers are obliged by law to make out their returns but if in need of assistance deputy collectors will be at office for that duty.

Several hints for taxpayers are given by Deputy Revenue Collector Geo. M. Charbonneau as follows:

Taxpayers should bear in mind that in order to claim charitable and religious contributions they must show an established record of such contributions. It is a matter of fact and not guess work.

Do not come to this office to make out a return unless you have a list of your receipts and expenses prepared, as the department will not do your preparatory work for you. This applies particularly to people in business.

Forms this year require more time to fill out than last year and consequently this means more work.

COMPETITION FOR EXPORT OF CANADIAN SOFT WOOD LUMBER

Quebec, Feb. 4—Competition from Europe and western states has threatened the principal export market for Canadian soft wood lumber in New England, George W. Grier, president of the Canadian Lumberman's Association, today told the organization's convention.

"We need the United States market more than they need our lumber today," Mr. Grier said, "and to hold it we must manufacture and distribute at the lowest possible costs and be content with narrow profits. Our competitors are willing to cut prices and to furnish the grades and sizes demanded by the trade."

Mr. Grier rebuked the Canadian public and the lumber dealers who, he said, "were still under the delusion that the United States must have our lumber at any price and take what we offer in the way of grade."

UNCASVILLE COUPLE'S SILVER WEDDING DAY

JONATHAN TRUMBULL ROAD WOULD BE FINE MEMORIAL

Co-operation of the federal government in the improvement of the Jonathan Trumbull Memorial Highway in Connecticut is sought in a petition which the state highway department has submitted to congress through Congressman E. Hart Fenn. This is in conformity with the act establishing such a memorial highway which is designed as a tribute to the services of Jonathan Trumbull to the national government during the Revolutionary war.

About twelve miles of the route to be designated as the memorial highway remain uncompleted. The unfinished section is in the vicinity of Lebanon, the scene of Trumbull's activities for many years and close to the cemetery in which he is buried.

The route described as the memorial highway begins at the Connecticut-New York state line in Salisbury, extending through North Canaan, Norfolk, Winchester, New Milford, Canton and Hartford then following the present trunk line through East Hartford, Manchester, Bolton and Andover, and then cutting through Columbia and Lebanon Centers and intersecting the present trunk line from Norwich to Willimantic at or near Yantic, then through Norwich over the Westerly trunk line route to its intersection with the New London-Westerly highway at the Rhode Island state line.

In its petition asking the government to share the expense of completing this route, the highway department's petition says:

"This is not the place to recite at length the great services rendered our general government by that distinguished man. It is enough to say that during the period of the Revolution he was for years at the head of the war department of our government. To his, more than any other man, Washington ascribed the credit of maintaining our armies in the field during the most depressing years of the Revolutionary War. But up to the present time, no memorial has been erected in his honor."

CHARITABLE CIRCLE ELECTS NEW OFFICERS

With a good sized attendance Charitable Circle of The King's Daughters held its annual meeting in the parlors of the United church Tuesday evening and heard interesting reports of the treasurer and work committee. The election of officers for the ensuing year resulted as follows: Leader, Miss Clara E. Griswold; vice leader, Miss Bessie Wilbur; secretary, Miss Nellie Howie; treasurer, Miss Hattie Carter.

The remainder of the evening was spent in a social way, ice cream, wafers and candy being served.

BLIND POLISH DOCTOR ARRIVES IN NORWICH

Dr. Melanie Lipinska, of Poland, noted blind author, lecturer and medical authority arrived in Norwich on Wednesday and is to lecture to the Polish residents of Norwich on Hygiene of Mind and Nutrition.

Dr. Lipinska, is a world famous authority on medicine and psychology of the blind. She has been blind since she was 19 years of age and most of her professional studies and all of her literary work has been done since she was blind. She is traveling in the United States entirely in the interest of the blind and is a representative of the Polish Oculist Society of, Warsaw and many societies of France, Belgium and England, representing societies with a membership of over 20,000. As an author Dr. Lipinska is noted for her book entitled Women Doctors Through the Ages and many other writings, including Student Polish Life in Foreign Countries. For these literary works she has received prizes in money and recognition from the French societies.

For the benefit of medicine Dr. Lipinska once fasted for 40 days, going without water for 30 days and living on water and orange juice for 10 days, this to prove that the system can take up water from the atmosphere, through bathing and compresses. In the interest of science this proved that ulcerations of the stomach and intestines could be healed, not being hurt by solid foods of any kinds during the fasting period.

Dr. Lipinska is travelling through America as a representative of Poland to study the newest methods for the blind in this country. Her view of blindness is optimistic and she claims that the blind can see, the deaf hear and the dumb speak, if the mind is centered on this and there is sufficient professional training. Dr. Lipinska claims that we possess every office in the subconscious mind and that these forces become more powerful when one sense is lost.

Since coming to America Dr. Lipinska has lectured in many of the larger cities of the country, being greeted by large audiences, many prominent medical authorities hearing her. She also attended the convention for prevention of the blind held at New York and while in that city was received by the late President Harding, former Ambassador Jusserand of France and many other notables.

Dr. Lipinska will remain in Norwich until Monday when she leaves for Washington, D. C., to leave shortly for Europe and Poland.

MYSTIC WORSTED MILL IS RESUMING BUSINESS

The plant of the Mystic Manufacturing company in Greenmanville, Mystic, which has been closed since early in November and had been operating three months prior to that with a greatly reduced force, has been reorganized by a group of New London business men and will be known hereafter as the Mystic Worsted company. A number of the pattern looms have been started up and the broad looms are being made ready for the weavers.

After weeks of idleness the old hands are being called back a few each day and the assurance is given out that it will not be many days before the welcome sound of the morning whistle will reverberate from shore to shore of the Mystic river, calling to work the many skilled employes who have been marking time since the plant went into receivership.

The woolen mill has for many years been one of the largest employers of skilled labor in Mystic.

POETRY

LARDIE

Lowly the soul that waits
At the white, celestial gates,
A threshold soul to greet
Beloved feet.

Down the streets that are beams of sun
Cherubim children run;
They welcome it from the wall;
Their voices call.

But the Warder saith: "Nay, this Is the City of Holy Bliss.
What claim canst thou make good
To angelhood?"

"Joy," answereth it from eyes
That are amber ecstasies,
Listening, alert, elate,
Before the gate.

Oh, how the feats feet
On lonely memory beat!
What rapture in a run
'Twixt snow and sun!

"Nay, brother of the sod,
What part hast thou in God?
What spirit art thou of?"
It answers: "Love."

Lifting its head, no less
Cajoling a caress,
Our winsome collie wraith,
Than in glad faith

The door will open wide,
Or kind voice bid: "Abide,
A threshold soul to greet
The longed-for feet."

Ah, Keeper of the Portal,
If Love be not immortal,
If Joy be not divine,
What prayer is mine?
—Katharine Lee Bates.

MEMNON.

Why dost thou hail with songful lips ac
nuss
The glorious sunrise?—Why is Memnon mute
Whose voice was tuned as is the silvery flute
When Thebes sat queenly by the Nile's low shore?
No longer shrines are raised to man and brute,
Yet dawn by dawn the sun thou didst salute
Gives thee the greeting that it gave of yore.
What nameless spell is on thee? Dost thou wait
(Hoping and yearning through the years forlorn)
The old-time splendor and the regal state,
The glory and the power of an empire shorn?
Oh, break the silence deep, defying fate
And cry again melodious to the morn!
—Clinton Scollard.

SENATE HAS CONFIRMED NOMINATION OF STONE

Last Night Approved, 71 to 6, His Appointment to Be a Supreme Court Justice—Vote Was Taken After Six Hours of Debate—President Coolidge Had Submitted the Appointment of Attorney General Stone to the Senate a Month Ago.

Washington, Feb. 5.—The senate tonight confirmed the nomination of Attorney General Stone to be a supreme court justice, 71 to 6, a month to the day after the submission of his appointment by President Coolidge.

The vote was taken after six hours of debate, largely on the Wheeler and Ownbey cases around which the opposition has centered. The discussion held the attention of an unusually large number of senators, many members of the house, and crowded galleries.

Only two senators—Heflin, democrat, Alabama, and Norris, republican, Nebraska—argued against confirmation, but senators on both sides expressed opposition to establishment of a precedent in the Wheeler case that would let the government could bring an action in the District of Columbia, instead of in the home state of the accused.

Besides Heflin and Norris, senators voting against confirmation were Frazier, republican, North Dakota; Trammell, democrat, Florida, and Shipstead, farmer-labor, Minnesota. It was announced that had Senator LaFollette, republican, Wisconsin, been present, he, too, would have voted in the negative.

Senator Wheeler, democrat, Montana, and his colleague, Senator Walsh, withheld their votes, the latter announcing that he did so because he is counsel for Senator Wheeler in the proceedings brought here and in Montana.

When Senator Heflin attacked Mr. Stone for the position he took as counsel in the supreme court hearings in the case of the executors of the estate of J. Pierpont Morgan, against James A. Ownbey, Colorado banker, Senator Norris made the opposition the viewpoint that Mr. Stone must have forgotten his long service as counsel.

Paying high tribute to the character and ability of Mr. Stone, Senator Borah, republican, Idaho, and Senator Reed, democrat, Missouri, entered their protest against the theory that the department had a moral right to withhold counsel. They also took occasion to say that the Stone nomination should not be held up because of an effort to conduct a member of the senate Bruce, democrat, Maryland, joined his protest to those of these two senators, declaring that the fact that Senator Wheeler had requested an inquiry into the administration of the department of justice constituted an added reason why he should not be brought to trial in the district of Columbia, where the department of government is "preeminent present."

Senator Borah in opening the debate immediately after the senate convened, Caraway, democrat, Arkansas, and Reed, of Missouri, members of the judiciary committee, told the senate that they had been unable to find Mr. Stone's conduct criticised in the Ownbey case which in any way justify votes against his confirmation.

A wide divergence of view was expressed by Senator Heflin, who condemned the Morgan executors, although not for judgment they obtained in Colorado, had brought new action in Delaware, which is where Ownbey's bail there could not furnish bond which would prevent him from entering any defense.

His argument was that, when Mr. Stone was retained to argue the case in the supreme court, he must have become acquainted with all the facts and had thus known that Ownbey had "been denied justice." Senators Borah and Reed disagreed with this view, the former accusing Senator Heflin of misstating the facts and the latter pointing to Mr. Stone's statement before the judiciary committee that he knew none of the facts prior to the Colorado proceedings.

Much of Senator Walsh's address was given to a reply to newspaper attacks on him in connection with the delay in acting on Mr. Stone's nomination and in cross-examining the attorney general when he appeared before the judiciary committee last week to explain the new proceedings brought against Senator Wheeler here.

The Montana senator said he had interrogated Mr. Stone because the attorney general, with reference to the Wheeler case in Montana, had not in his judgment given all of the facts. He paid high tribute to Mr. Stone's character and ability but expressed the belief that he had breathed "the perfervid atmosphere of the department of justice for the past year," and had been surrounded there by appointees and personal friends of Harry M. Daugherty.

Senator Walsh declared there were circumstances which bade him "be cautious for perjured testimony in this case."

In opposing Mr. Stone's nomination, Senator Norris assailed the appointments by President Coolidge generally, declaring he could not recall one of importance where there had not been selected a man who had "the viewpoint of the monopoly and of the trust."

"The people of this country," he said, "refrained from putting a Morgan attorney in the White House; they preferred a Vermont farmer. But they did not know then that instead of putting in the White House for four years an attorney of Morgan and company, their votes meant the putting of an attorney of Morgan & Co., on the supreme court for life.

"They didn't know that Mr. Warren, tainted with the sugar trust, was going to be appointed attorney general. They did not know that a railroad man, Mr. Woodlock, his pen still dripping with ink from writing editorials for the Wall Street Journal, was going to be put on the interstate commerce commission. They did not know that a reactionary, Mr. Humphrey, was going to be appointed to the federal trade commission. All of these are honorable men, I concede, able men, but all have the big business viewpoint."

Senator Borah also defended Senator Walsh from attacks in connection with the Stone nomination, declaring his conduct in the matter had been "above reproach." He added that the country would not overestimate the value of the services Senator Walsh had rendered in helping "to uncover one of the most contemptible and rotten conditions that ever disgraced the national capital."

ALLEGED POISONING CASES AT OHIO UNIVERSITY

Columbus, O., Feb. 5 (By the A. P.).—Another capsuit containing nothing but poison was found today in the investigation of the recent sudden deaths of two Ohio State university students and the violent illness of at least three others.

Questioning of 23 students of the 64 who have worked in the pharmacy college dispensary, from which the medicine was issued, however, failed to suggest even the hint of a possible clue as to how the poison got into the bottle supposedly containing nothing but capsules of quinine.

Outstanding developments of the day were:

Calling in of state pharmacy board officials to make a check of the dispensing of the poison in question in the last year.

Participation by county officials in the investigation.

Discovery of the second capsule came during the afternoon in the course of an examination by Dr. Clayton S. Smith of the college of medicine of prescriptions turned back by students in response to the request made yesterday by President W. O. Thompson of the university. The capsule was among those given to David I. Puskin of Canton, who died suddenly Sunday.

Examination of the capsule found in Puskin's room after his death, by Dr. W. H. Humphrey, who attended him, showed that it contained four grains of the poison, or enough to kill four ordinary persons. The only other capsule, out of perhaps 300 in the bottle analyzed chemically by university officials and found to contain paison, was one turned in by Timothy J. McCarthy of Fremont, O., the first to be taken violently ill.

Investigation, however, has disclosed the probable existence of at least eight of the capsules in the bottle. One of these is believed to have caused the death of Puskin. Another is now believed to have been the cause of the death of Charles H. Huls of Logan, O., the first student to die, whose death was ascribed originally to tetanus.

A fourth was among those in McCarthy's possession, and a fifth is believed to have been the one which made him ill. A sixth probably caused the violent illness Monday of George Thompson, also of Canton, and a seventh the illness of Harold Gillis of Tiffin, O. An eighth, said to have been among those in Gillis' prescription, was reported today to have been found. It is in private hands, however.

LEGAL CONTEST OVER RADIO PATENT RIGHTS

Wilmington, Del., Feb. 5.—Judge Hugh M. Morris, in the United States district court, has granted a preliminary injunction to the DeForrest Radio Telephone and Telegraph company against the Radio Corporation of America, it was learned tonight. The plaintiffs alleged that the Audion tubes sold by the defendant company infringed on their patent rights.

The plaintiff had also sought an injunction against the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company but this was denied. The court, in handing down the decision, enjoined the sale of tubes as manufactured by the Westinghouse Lamp company, a subsidiary of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company.

It was alleged in the suits that radio receiving equipment in thousands of homes is involved and that a conspiracy existed to further the distribution of radio equipment infringing on the DeForrest patents between the defendant company and the Westinghouse Lamp company.

The patents on the electric audion tube it was stated today, will expire on February 15, of this year.

TRUCE SIGNED IN HERRIN, BY KLANSMEN AND ANTIS

Springfield, Ills., Feb. 5 (By the A. P.)—George Galligan, sheriff of Williamson county, late today was a virtual exile from home for the sake of peace in Herrin.

Five supervisors of Williamson county turned homeward, satisfied that withdrawal of the sheriff will be the means of bringing tranquility and peace in a county and city that have held a large place in the public eye for more than two years for violence and bloodshed.

They all put their names to an agreement, along with Governor Len Small, Attorney General Oscar E. Carlstrom, and Adjutant General Carlos E. Black that will put an effective end to gun toting in their county, if lived up to. Sheriff Galligan promised to revoke all the special deputy warrants outstanding except those issued men guarding coal mines and cemeteries, and in return, the representatives of the board of supervisors pledged themselves to secure revocation of licenses carrying arms, and further pledged that they would require that all guns be deposited in a public place for safe keeping or be disposed of immediately.

Sheriff Galligan promised to remove his personal effects from the jail as soon as possible, get out of the county and stay out, as long as his absence seems desirable.

Sheriff Galligan was unbending in his refusal to resign. He is openly anti-klan and gave as one reason for his refusal, the fact that if he withdrew the county coroner would automatically succeed him and the coroner, he said, is a klansman.

The agreement signed this afternoon was taken as a compromise of klan and anti-klan elements.

PROTEST PROPOSED TAX OF CANADIAN WOOD PULP

New York, Feb. 5.—Resolutions protesting against Canadas proposed tax of pulpwood exportations were adopted by member of the American Paper and Pulp association at their annual convention today.

The resolution also urged association members to "use their best efforts with their representatives in Washington to have our government take such action as may be necessary to protect the interests of the pulp and paper industry of the United States."

Dr. Hugh P. Baker, secretary of the organization, told the delegates that the pulpwood interests of Canada were behind the proposed tax for selfish purposes and not for purposes of conservation, as they have claimed.

APPEARED AS WITNESS AGAINST HER MOTHER

Coshocton, Ohio, Feb. 5.—Mrs. Myrtle Maxton, daughter of Mrs. Clara S. McCurdy, aged 63, appeared as a witness today against her mother, who is charged with the murder of her husband, William A. McCurdy. The daughter testified that she saw her mother put a white powder in her father's medicine and that she later found a small packet labelled poison in the pantry of her parents' home. She said powder tasted like baking powder and that she destroyed it and substituted first flour, and then baking powder. Later, she said she accused her mother of poisoning her father.

SIX DEATHS RESULT FROM DIPHTHERIA IN NOME

Bone stating that the "situation does not warrant immediate use of airplanes," to bring diphtheria antitoxin here was considered, Mayor G. S. Maynard issued a statement saying: "This is a matter of life and death, not dollars and cents."

Julius Fleischmann Dies on Polo Field

Millionaire Sportsman Had Just Dismounted From His Pony at Flamingo Field, Miami.

Miami, Fla., Feb. 5—Julius Fleischmann, yeast king, millionaire philanthropist and sportsman, fell dead on the Flamingo polo field here late today. He had just finished playing the fourth chukker of a polo game.

Mr. Fleischmann fell just as he dismounted from his pony in the game between the Pastimes of which he was a member and the Rovers.

Friends who were playing with Mr. Fleischmann noticed that he suddenly became weak. Bringing his pony to a halt he dismounted and immediately threw up his hands and fell forward. The other players rushed to his assistance, physicians were called but it was said Mr. Fleischmann was dead before they arrived.

For several years he had an intense interest in polo. He maintained a polo stable here and took an active part in the game, despite the fact that he was in his 53rd year and weighed almost 200 pounds.

Last season Mr. Fleischmann fell from his pony and broke his collar bone during a game on a field adjoining that whereon he met death today but the accident did not deter him from continuing in the game. He was taking part in his first match game since the accident last year.

Before today's contest, in which he played number one position on the "Pastimers" team, he appeared to be in the best of spirits and was laughing and joking with friends. He had invited several of them to join him after the game at his new Spanish-type home, one of the show places of Miami Beach, which he was just completing.

During the contest Mr. Fleischmann appeared to be playing his usual hard game. He was not regarded as a star, being somewhat erratic. But he loved the excitement of the contest and seemed to feel a zest in it that he had found in few other sports.

After a spirited contest in the fourth chukker there was a pause during which the players and their ponies had a breathing spell.

Mr. Fleischmann dismounted, leaned against the saddle and then started toward the sidelines and fell or slid to the ground. Friends, thinking he had been struck by a mallet, rushed to him and, finding him unconscious, called to know if there was a physician among the spectators. Dr. Augustus J. Mitchell of Newark, N. J., who responded sought to give the millionaire sportsman aid, but found him dead.

Mr. Fleischmann formerly was mayor of Cincinnati, but made his home in New York city the last several years. He was connected with the Fleischmann Distillery as president for a number of years, and while in the Ohio city was prominent in republican politics.

The body was at once removed to an undertakers' in an ambulance to be prepared for the journey north for burial.

Mr. Fleischmann was one of the best known men in America in the field of manufacture, finance and sports. His name was known throughout the country as the founder of the famous New York "bread line." He was 53 years old.

Fleischmann was born in Cincinnati in 1872, the eldest son of Charles and Henrietta Fleischmann. He was mayor of Cincinnati for two terms, having elected first in 1899.

He was the youngest man to hold the chief executiveship of the city. Following his second term he was active in republican politics for a time but business interests gradually absorbed more and more of his time.

At the time of his death, Julius Fleischmann was president of the Fleischmann company and of the Hatfield Reliance Coal Company of Cincinnati. He was heavily interested in many other industries.

FATALLY INJURED IN PRACTICE BOXING BOUT

The fatal injury was not a direct result of a blow, it was said, but resulted from Stever's fall during the bout, his head striking sharply against the floor.

No formal statement was issued by Chancellor Charles W. Flint, but it was said unofficially the tragedy probably would result in an immediate discontinuance of boxing as a Syracuse university sport.

RUSSIA NOT TO DEPORT REV. DANIEL HURLEY

Washington, Feb. 5.—The Rumanian government has reversed its decision concerning the deportation of the Rev. Daniel Hurley, American Baptist missionary teacher, who was ordered to leave the country by Feb. 15, and will allow him to continue to reside in Rumania. It was stated in advices received today by the Rumanian legation.

The Rumanian government, it is understood, realized that though it could exercise the acknowledged right of any country to expel any foreigner who might prove undesirable, such action, nevertheless would be considered as a very unfriendly action towards all American welfare workers in Rumania.

Developments in The Aircraft Controversy

House Aircraft Committee Has Cited General Mitchell to Resume Witness Stand Today.

Washington, Feb. 5.—The deluge of charges and contradictions in army and navy circles over the question of aircraft, resulted today in a decision of the house aircraft committee to recall to the witness stand tomorrow Brigadier General Mitchell, assistant chief of the army airservice, and Brigadier General Drum, of the general staff.

General Mitchell has been called upon by Secretary Weeks to explain a statement that officers are are afraid "to tell the truth," for fear of being disciplined indirectly, while General Drum has asserted the war secretary permitted much freedom to officers in expressing their views.

The committee today also took up in executive session letters from Secretary Wilbur and Rear Admiral Moffett, chief of the naval air service, both of which flatly denied charges that the navy department attempted to "muzzle" the testimony of officers and declared they were free to express their views.

The committee took no action on a a resolution to express its opposition to a possible removal of the assistant army air chief from his present position and thereby return him to his former rank of colonel.

For the second successive day, the subject spread today to the floor of the house, which temporarily suspended other business to hear an address by Representative McClintick, of Oklahoma, a democratic member of the naval committee, who charged the navy department "with deliberately attempting to mislead," the country as to the facts concerning the recent bombing of the unfinished battleship Washington by airplanes.

Representative LaGuardia, republican, New York, asserted that Secretary Wilbur, in recent testimony before the naval committee, did not give personal "expert knowledge" on the bombinb tests, and insisted that congress was entitled to such information.

Secretary Wilbur, in his letter to Chairman Lambert, of the aircraft committee, said naval officers "are perfectly at liberty" to state their "personal opinions," even though "they be at variance with the plans of the department." The secretary added, however, that if the personal opinions of officers differed from those of the department, they should make it clear they were not giving the judgment of the department.

Admiral Moffett in a letter also addressed to Mr. Lampert said:

"Since my testimony given your committee, I understand that testimony has been given to the general effect that younger officers in the naval air service have been intimidated on one way or another and are not allowed to express their views with regard to a single air service.

"I desire to state most emphatically that to the best of my knowledge and belief, there is absolutely no foundation for such a statement. As chief of the bureau of aeronautics, I can assure you that neither by word nor deed have I in anyway interfered with the fullest expression of opinion by the officers of the naval air service with regard to any matter whatsoever.

"Furthermore, to the best of my knowledge, and belief, no officer of the navy has at any time in any way intimidated or repressed the expression of opinion of any officer of the naval air service."

JACK NUTTING, ABDUCTED, FOUND IN ST. AUGUSTINE

St. Augustine, Fla., Feb. 5.—Jack Nutting, 12-year-old son of Captain William Washburn Nutting, Arctic explorer, was found tonight by the police in the room of Selwin Smith, who registered at the Alhambra hotel here on November 13 from Cass Lake, Minn. The boy had been missing five days, and was last seen yesterday afternoon, riding in a car with four men.

Mrs. Nutting indicated that charges would be filed against Smith, and police, who released Smith tonight, said he probably would be given a hearing before Judge George Jackson in city court tomorrow morning. Smith denied that he had any intention of kidnapping the boy and said that the lad had told him his parents were in Miami and that he had no place to go.

WOULD CONFINE SUPREME COURT TO IMPORTANT CASES

New York, Feb. 5.—Solicitor-General James M. Beck at a dinner given him by the New York City Bar association tonight, said that the energies of the supreme court should be confined to cases of "great public importance" instead of the numerous petty cases congesting its calendar now.

Because of the steadily increasing number of cases taken to the tribunal, he said, the time allowed for arguments has been restricted. This, he declared, is unfortunate in cases of constitutional law, when the court determines the form of government for this and future generations.

CHANCES FOR RESCUE OF COLLINS GROWING REMOTE

There Has Been No Word From Cave Imprisoned Man Since 4 A. M. Yesterday—Passage to the Cave Was Obliterated Yesterday by an Uplift of the Floor—Collins Has Been Pinioned in the Cave For a Week—Has Not Tasted Food or Coffee For 36 Hours.

Cave City, Ky., Feb. —(By the A. P.)—Floyd Collins, if he is not already dead in his Sand cave tomb, faces death in so many forms that his chances of being brought out alive are exceedingly remote.

No word from him or to him has passed since 4 o'clock this morning and he has not tasted food or coffee for 36 hours. Tonight his imprisonment lacked only a few hours of being a week long and his rescue was farther away than on the morning his plight was discovered. The passage to his cave was sealed today when an uplift of the floor obliterated all trace of a cave at a point 45 feet or more from the imprisoned man. How extensive the earth movement was, has not been determined. It may have engulfed Collins and crushed him. It may have cut off his air supply and left him to the torture of sffocation.

If he survived both dangers, he may starve to death before miners, sinking a shaft from above are able to reach him, probably two days from now. He may succumb to the shock and its attendant utter loneliness in constantly dripping water. Or his weakened strength may prove insufficient to withstand the ravage of pneumonia.

Lieutenant Governor H. H. Denhardt, in command of a military detachment in charge of Sand Cave, knows of all the odds against the struggle for Collins' life, but Ben K. Well, of Ogden university, one of the rescue leaders, has expressed the situation in these words: "We do not know whether Collins is alive or dead, but as far as we are concerned, he is alive until we reach him and a physician officially pronounces him dead."

Twenty feet back from the cave entrance, where the ground level is but four feet higher than at the ledge overhanging Sand cave, a mine is penetrating the rocky earth. It was ten feet deep this afternoon, with 45 more to go before rescuers expect to tap the cave bind Collins. An electric lighting system was hurried to the scene so that night word need not be interrupted for lack of illumination.

The excavation now under way, while extremely hazardous to Collins' safety, is not without peril to miners who may strike the huge cavern Collins said he found and instantly plunge eighty feet or more into the depths of its darkness.

Federal engineers reaching here from Indiana today, state mine inspectors, a University of Kentucky geologist, military authorities and old-time cave men of the vicinity all agree that a shaft is the only solution to their quest for the cavern's victim.

Mr. Denhardt says it will require 24 to 36 hours to sink the mine. The federal engineers, not so optimistic, place the time at 36 to 72 hours.

Mine machinery to combat heavy rocks has been rushed to Cave City by rail from Nashville, Tenn., by motor, from Louisville, and by wagon and boat from Kyroc, Ky. a score of miles away. Smaller implements designed to be used in the cave have been received from various parts of the nation. The cave, however, is now closed, both by military command and by the upheaval which cut off Collins from communication with his rescuers.

Dr. William Hazlett, who came from Chicago to amputate Collins' feet, found that dozens of other members of his profession had volunteered to do the same thing if it were possible to reach their man. There was not room for an amputation to be performed, however.

Seventy-five men were in the crew which started the shaft. The mouth of the mine will be double or more the size of the hole when it reaches the 50 foot level. An automatic air compressor and drill, brought to Cave City Monday by Lieutenant Robert urdon of the Louisville fire department, will be brought into play when miners hit the expected solid rock.

Lee Collins, father of the victim, surveyed the situation today with sorrow. His money gone—gone for food and overalls for the volunteer workers who have been into the cave again and again since last Saturday. An appeal for financial aid was made today by Ray Turner, magistrate, A. C. Young, in behalf of the rescuers, and Cave City residents. S. D. Caldwell, president of the People's bank, was designated treasurer of the fund.

Electricity is still being sent into the cave through a wire which was attached to heat pads placed around Collins. If the prisoner lives and the wire was not severed by today's uplift, there may be heat and light for Collins. At 7:30 this morning he repeatedly mumbled "I am covered with dirt" and called for his mother who is dead, and his brothers. An hour and a half later a worker reported having heard Collins call, "Oh, God, help me."

SINKING SHAFT TO REACH COLLINS, DEAD OR ALIVE

Cave City, Ky., Feb. 5.—(By The A. P.)—With volunteers digging away at comparatively loose rock and experienced miners in reserve, the shaft being sunk on a hillside as the final effort to reach Floyd Collins, dead or alive, in his sand cave prison, was slowly eating into the depths of more solid rock where progress becomes difficult.

No word has been heard from Collins for more than 18 hours and none is expected for some hours more. His only comfort, if he lived, is his electric light and electric heating pads which were still using current when a test was made tonight.

The cave as a passageway to Collins was abandoned early today when an uplift of earth pushed the floor against the ceiling, completely obliterating all traces of the natural tunnel except for the place where the wire seems to enter into solid rock.

Military officers in charge of the camp have placed their men in tents which dot the hillside and are prepared for a stay of several days, which probably will be necessary before the trapped man can be reached.

The Red Cross established a complete hospital until this afternoon with cots, a doctor, stretchers and volunteer stretcher bearers. They plan to take care of any workers who may meet injury in the mining now under way.

Two steam drills reached Sand cave this afternoon and will be placed in operation when the rock strata in the shaft becomes too solid to be moved with crowbars or picks. Plans to blast were discussed, with the understanding that only small charges of powder could be used without danger of vibration jarring down boulders within the cavern.

Fear of dropping into the huge underground hall, which Collins told his rescuers he had found a short distance behind where he was caught, has been offset somewhat by a scheme evolved to meet the situation. Miners working in the shaft will be placed in hammocks and cradles suspended from above to protect them in case the bottom of the mine drops into a cavern of unknown depth.

According to a Boston despatch new interests have acquired control of the Richmond Radiator Co., of which there is a branch in this city and have elected Lloyd G. A committee, it was learned, was soon formed, representing George H. Burr and Co., W. A. Harriman and Co., Inc., and Moors and Cabot of Boston. The support of this committee which obtained proxies for more than two thirds of the stock resulted in Mr. McCrum's election as head of the company.

The committee also elected four new directors to represent their interests. They are Noble Crandall, Hamilton Pell, James F. Curtis and Floyd W. Parsons, succeeding F. C. Allen, P. S. Kaufman, Frederick R. Kennedy and John J. Duffy. CAUSE OF DECLINE OF THE UNIVERSITY OF WISCONSIN

Milwaukee, Wis., Feb. 5—Theodore Kronshage, president of the Board of Regents of the University of Wisconsin, declared here today that the lack of appropriations for the University of Wisconsin had caused that institution to fall from its position of one of the leading universities of the country.

A New York sporting paper carries a column of interesting facts concerning Professor Billy McLean, 91-year-old pugilist. Billy McLean is the father of Lieutenant Frank McLean, of the local police department. The story is written as told to Damon Runyon by an Old Sport who is acquainted with McLean and saw him in action, years ago.

Billy McLean is the oldest ex-pugilist living and his life covers nearly all of the fistic history of the United States. McLean entered the ring with the pugilistic history-makers of half a century and more ago. With blackened gloves he faced the great John L. Sullivan at the Academy of Music in Philadelphia and his cleverness left Sullivan a much disgusted fighter at the close of the bout. McLean was forced out of the ring when he was seized with hemorrhages at the age of 27. Doctors gave him but a few years to live provided he received the best of care and was naturally fortunate. Undaunted, McLean studied the science of systematic physical exercise and as he approaches the century mark he is one of the most active men of his age in the country. He devoted many years of his lifetime to conducting a boxing school and the sons of prominent and wealthy families about Philadelphia studied the manly art under him. McLean moulded McKeevers, now dead, who appeared as one of the principals in the first real boxing show ever staged in Delaware county, Pennsylvania. At the age of 75 Billy McLean was still donning the gloves and sent many young pupils to "rest-a-while" on the canvas. Professor McLean is an annual visitor to this city and has many local friends.

The rising temperature Thursday came as balm to irritated automobile drivers who have been breaking their springs, chain links and fenders while traveling over the rutted roads during the past two weeks. For a driver to state that the roads and highways have offered poor traveling does not call for any show of imagination. Even the city streets caught it. With the ice caked into a solid mass, but little could be accomplished in the way of improvement. Workmen of the street department have been busy digging up the gutters to allow free flowage for thawing ice and snow and that is about all that could be done.

Sensible mothers have learned how to keep skin from chapping

THE delicate skin of a child was never meant to be rough, reddened, chapped and cracked. Tender skin receives tender care from loving mothers.

Mothers who know Lifebuoy tell us that its constant use in winter keeps the skin soft, smooth and healthy.

You know, too, that colds are caused by germs which are carried to nose or mouth, usually by the hands.

If children will use Lifebuoy when they get up, before meals, after play or school and before going to bed, they will avoid many colds and their skin will be radiantly healthy.

CONSTITUTION HAS BEEN TAMPERED WITH ENOUGH

New York, Feb. 5—Addison Pierce Munroe, of Providence, governor general of the General Society of Mayflower Descendants, tonight urged members of the organization "militantly to combat the wave of radicalism, bloshevism, pacifism and all the other diabolical "isms" so prevalent in this country today."

Speaking at the annual dinner of the New York Society in the Baltimore, Mr. Munroe said it was the "specific duty of the Mayflower descendants to defend and maintain the constitution of the United States" against all such attacks, "whether preached by the soap box orator or by the parlor socialist."

The present mode of attack on the constitution is by the amendment method, Mr. Monroe continued, asserting that in his opinion some of the amendments adopted in the past twelve years have been of no benefit to the country.

"Let us leave the constitut on alone," he pleaded, "it has been tampered with enough."

The speaker touched briefly on immigration, saying:

"I believe that an immigrant, after living here a certain length of time, long enough to learn the language, customs and principles on which our country is founded, should either become a naturalized citizen or be returned to the country from whence he came.

SHARING SAME HUSBAND WOMEN REMAIN CHUMS

New York, Feb. 5—Six years ago Cammilla Fitzgerald and Ann McCormick shared a room at Sacred Heart Academy, East Boston. Today, in court, they discovered they had been sharing the same husband for many months. But they still are chums.

Cammilla met Francis Kelly in Boston and married him on November 22, 1923. They have one child. Ann, while visiting near Boston, met a man who called himself Francis Landon. Last September "Landon" came to New York, married Ann and they went to live at her home in the Bronx. Cammilla's husband had also come to New York in September and shortly afterward stopped sending money. She came here and discovered that her husband had changed his name to Landon and was married again.

And then in court Cammilla found that his new wife was her old roommate. Each girl testified that Kelly was kind and considerate, and nobody seemed to bear anyone else ill-will.

Kelly pleaded guilty to bigamy. Magistrate Marsh held him in $2,500 bail for the grand jury.

MOST SOUTHERNMOST RADIO STATION IN THE WORLD

Buenos Aires, Feb. 5—Radio fans, who pick up the signal LRT will be in communication with the world's most southernmost radio station, which is about to be set up in the South Orkney Islands where the Argentine government maintains a meteorological observatory.

With the installation of the new radio station the men on the lonely island job will be able to while away the long Antarctic nights by listening to Buenos Aires operas, tangos and perhaps sprightly jazz broadcast from the top of the world.

COLONY AWAITING END OF THE WORLD TODAY

Washington, Feb. 5—The little colony here of former members of the Seventh Day Adventa denomination who are awaiting the end of the world tomorrow prepared themselves today and tonight with cottage prayer meetings, in the face of repeated statements from the church that their belief is "fanatical."

A great "aurora borealis," effect will accompany the "second coming of Christ," some of those awaiting the end declared, but there was a difference of opinion as to whether it would take place at midnight, tonight, or sometime Friday night. Some of them contended that the termination of the world would require three days.

There have been a few defections from the ranks of those awaiting the end here, many of whom have disposed of their property. Frank Smith, a carpenter, has returned to his job, he said, believing "the Lord would rather find me driving nails and sawing wood and doing the best job I could do as a good carpenter."

One of the leaders in the group is living in a garage, explaining that he thought it useless to prepare a home under the circumstances.

All men may be born free and equal, but it's a waste of time trying to prove it to the satisfaction of a woman.

Why Millions of Mothers Now Rely Upon Vicks

An "Outside" Treatment Bringing Quick Relief for Colds and Croup Without Internal Dosing

Vicks comes in salve form and is applied externally—can be freely used without the slightest harmful effect.

For croup and children's colds you just rub Vicks over throat and chest and cover with a warm flannel cloth. The ingredients — Menthol, Camphor, Eucalyptus, Thyme and Turpentine — are released as vapors by the body heat and inhaled with every breath all night long. At the same time Vicks is absorbed through and stimulates the skin like a poultice or plaster.

Colds go overnight, croup is generally relieved within 15 minutes.

What happens to people when they step on acknowledged laws, demonstrated from the masculine side by Rod La Rocque in The Ten Commandments, now has its feminine explanation in Cecil B. De Mille's newest Paramount picture, The Golden Bed, screen play by Jeannie Macpherson from Wallace Irwin's novel which also ran serially in Pictorial Review magazine.

Flora Lee Peake and Rod La Rocque as Adman Holts, "poor white trash," risen to wealth, and Vera Reynolds younger daughter of the aristocratic house of Peake, have the principal roles in this colorful De Mille social satire. Others featured in the all-star cast are Warner Baxter, Theodore Kosloff and Julia Faye. Playing in support are Henry Walthall, Robert Edeson, Robert Cain, Jacquelinne Wells, Mary Jane Irving, Dan Marion and Charles Clary.

Quite a line-up!

Concert in New London

Fritz Kreisler, who will give a concert in New London on February 18th, is a remarkable scholar as well as a great artist. He is a tireless reader and student and speaks several languages. Both Mr. Kreisler and his accompanist, Carl Lamson, are ardent Greek scholars and speak that language together as ordinarily traveled and educated men speak English or French.

Kreisler is far from being exclusively a "high-brow" scholar and musician though and he reveals his sincerity in the concert hall. Courteously considerate of the desires of his hearers, so long as he can keep his own fine standards, he reveals himself first by the choice of the programme, which ranges from gravely beautiful and exacting numbers, through romantic compositions to the light, fanciful items inviting a delicate dexterity. As musician again he plays every one of these pieces with a sense of its particular quality and style.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Lyceum-New London

Michael Mindlin rose quickly to theatrical fame when he startled Broadway with his sensational mystery play, The Last Warning, at the Klaw theater two seasons ago. From that initial success he has moved cautiously and now again produces what he calls a great love drama in Heaven of Sand by Marion Burton. It will be seen and heard here at the Lyceum New London, the two nights and Saturday matinee, beginning Friday, Feb 6th.

Mindlin already has stamped his individuality on the theater. He is the champion of the composite cast of best actors hireable. He will not unbalance a performance with a star in a star part. The Four Horsemen of Notre Dame, he said the other day will go down in history as the best back field, together not individually, in football history, and any company I organize will be noted for the total whole of their acting.

Bimbo.

William Mitchell, "Billy" to his friends, town comic extraordinary, has been billed in one of the leading comedy roles in the American Legion's annual show which is to be presented at the Palace theatre next Tuesday and Wednesday evenings. Billy" needs no introduction to local amateur theatrical patrons for he has appeared in most of the worthwhile productions that have been staged here in the past several seasons. Last year as "Teckley Bramble" in "Kathleen" "Billy" scored one of the most outstanding personal "hits" of the production. His performance is that of an "old timer," professional and finished far beyond the average amateur and if there is a laurel in a line "Billy" is sure to get in the role of "Bimbo" a photographer who is mistaken on his arrival on the island of "Bimbo" for the expected new governor and who is placed in the worthy's chair before he has a chance to protest. This well known comedian has a most facile role and that he is getting the most out of the opportunities presented is being shown nightly at rehearsals.

The "South Sea Island Belles" group of talented young ladies will appear in a novel dance number of the peppy kind. "Jingle Jungle Melody" a tinkling tune that strums in every mind that has heard it, will be represented by the Misses Elaine Wilson Virginia Haggerty, Veronica Haggerty, Mary Sheridan, Mary MacInnes Phillys Brown.

Breed Theater

Size has nothing to do with ability. Mariar Nixon, petite Wampas Baby Star, now playing opposite Charles Jones in his newest picture The Vagabond Trail, proves it. Marian is five feet one, in the picture she portrays the role of a fearless young girl who lives among miscellaneous mining and western types, and she must know how to shoot. Charles Jones, Fox star, volunteered to be her instructor.

To Jones' surprise, Marian not only learned the intricacies of handling a weapon, but when tested the little leading lady scored a bull's eye two times out of five. Marian says she's going to be a cowgirl yet, one of these days, even though she does hail originally from Minneapolis.

The Vagabond Trail opens a two day run at the Breed theater today and other pictures on the bill include Days of 49, the Pathe news and a Sunshine comedy.

Strand Theater

In Perils of Paris the new Pearl White picture of feature length which is one of the attractions at the Strand today and Saturday those who go to this popular picture theater will see this American screen dare devil go through many thrilling scenes where many a man would hesitate. For instance when you see the star lowered into the sewers of Paris, you can be sure this is the real thing as Perils in Paris was made in Paris, France. You are sure to like this picture for two reasons, first because it is new, second because in Perils of Paris Pearl White has the best starring vehicle of her career. This feature, in many theaters would be the star attraction but today and Saturday the Strand will also show Franklin Farnum in The Gamblin Fool, a six reel feature showing Farnum as the gallant hero ready to help a lady in distress, as well as to beat up a man in fair fight be it with cards or fists. Jim Aubrey in a new comedy will round out the program at the Strand today and Saturday and performances at this theater Saturday will be continuous from two until ten thirty P. M.

That all-in, dragged-out feeling

What a way to go through life—dragging through each day, tired after a night's sleep, listless, just going on from one day to the next. In nine cases out of ten, such a condition is the result of constipation. Only ALL-BRAN brings sure, safe relief from this disease.

Fired because he was always tired

"DROWSY BILL," they called him—a lifeless, eternally tired, old-young man. He tried hard enough, but his energies always sagged before the job was done. One day Bill was missing . . . fired.

In every walk of life you'll find men and women who are fighting constipation—the dread disease which robs the body of its energy and strength. But thank goodness, there is pleasant, safe, permanent relief from constipation—Kellogg's ALL-BRAN.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is what doctors call a bulk food. As it journeys through the body its fiber remains unchanged. Therefore, it can sweep the intestine clean. ALL-BRAN also absorbs and carries moisture through the intestinal tract, thus stimulating regular, healthy action. ALL-BRAN urges nature to act normally—something that habit-forming pills and drugs can never do.

You'll like Kellogg's ALL-BRAN. Serve it with milk or cream, sprinkled over other cereals or cooked with hot cereals. Delicious with fruits. Try it in soups too. Also use the many recipes given on every package. If eaten regularly, Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is guaranteed to bring permanent relief or the grocer returns the purchase price. Eat two tablespoonfuls daily—in chronic cases, with every meal.

KNOW THE TRUTH ABOUT BRAN

To be effective, bran fiber must go through the various digestive processes without submitting to any of them. It must pass through the entire alimentary tract without its form being changed.

What happens when a bran food is eaten?

After the saliva has acted upon it, it passes through the stomach and into the intestines where every part which is not fiber is absorbed.

In ALL-BRAN the quantity of fiber is so great that it furnishes bulk enough to prevent and relieve constipation.

In a part-bran food, the quantity of fiber is so small that there is only a puny amount to do a herculean task.

ALL-BRAN brings sure results. Demand it.

Be careful! Only ALL-BRAN brings sure results. Be sure to get Kellogg's ALL-BRAN. A part-bran product is only partially effective—maybe not at all.

Kellogg's is the original and only ALL-BRAN. Doctors recommend it. All grocers sell it. Buy a package today. Note how much better you'll feel in a week. Also served in leading restaurants.

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

Indicative of the manner in which the Connecticut Mills company has recovered from the severe reverses it experienced, in common with scores of other textile concerns, during the nation-wide business crash in 1920, is the announcement that the stockholders' committee, having served the purpose for which it was formed in April, 1922, has withdrawn from further participation in the affairs of the company.

When this committee was formed first preferred stockholders of the mill company deposited their stock and received in lieu thereof certificates of deposits. The committee, in cooperation with the mill officials, functioned so successfully that dividend payments were resumed on the first preferred stock in 1923, and within the past few months the mill company paid all dividends that were in arrears on this issue. The latest dividend on the first preferred has just been declared and paid, minus certain charges incident to the maintenance of the stockholders' committee until February 1, 1929, but the recovery of the company has been so complete that the agreement has been terminated.

At present the mill company owes all dividends on its second preferred stock which have come due since 1921. It is not indicated in any statement of the company that is available at this time when these dividends will be paid, but it is believed that they will be paid in due time, the burden of paying the accumulated dividends on the first preferred stock having been relieved.

First preferred stockholders are now to turn in their certificates of deposit and receive in return the stock they turned over to the stockholders' committee when it was formed.

Feeding of game birds has been undertaken by some individuals in outlying sections of the town, it appears, though the work is not as well organized hereabouts as was the case last year.

Expression of opinion from various sources would tend to indicate that the town of Killingly is not in the mood just now to make such a heavy appropriation as the erection of a gymnasium and domestic arts department addition at the high school would entail, as desiable as this would be. This does not indicate by any means that Killingly will not do so in the not distant future. The gymnasium will come eventually, but there appears to be a feeling that the town is not prepared just now to spend as much money as one would cost.

Announcement Thursday morning that Herbert J. Barnett had bought the Frank A. Davis property extending through from Railroad square to Water street was of very special interest to the public as it forecasts eventual developments of a very desirable and centrally located area. CARGILL TRUST COMPANY OFFERS HISTORY PRIZES

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Putnam, Feb. 5.—The Cargill Trust company will give three cash prizes to pupils of the high school for the best three essays on the founding and history of Putnam. C. A. Boyce gave a short talk at the high school in which he outlined the proposition. He said:

"The Cargill Trust company was named for one of the early settlers of Putnam, Capt. Robert Cargill, and the directors of the bank felt that his character and record as perpetuated would mean a good connection for this bank to make with the early history of our town, and so we chose the name. We are also greatly interested in the history of Putnam and believe that the present generation of high school pupils should know more of history; so, to make it of some terest to the students in Putnam high school, the directors have authorized me to offer the following prizes: $10 for the best essay, $5 for the second best, and $2.50 for the third best essay on the founding and early history of Putnam. These essays must be of at least 500 words and be presented in person at the banking rooms on Union street on or before April 1st. The essays are to be written on one side of the paper only and signed by the writer. Shortly after the 1st of April a committee of three judges chosen by the bank will carefully examine each essay and render their decision to the bank. We will then announce to the school the winners and present the prizes. We do not want to make this a matter of mere routine to you, but hope that you will gain in your research some inspiration to make each of you a better American citizen."

USING TREASURY FUNDS.

When State Treasurer Rogers took office he was bound to face the conditions that were disclosed as the result of the conduct of a former treasurer. It doesn't appear that the state has lost anything from former methods or practices but the chance to prevent any such loss has been revealed and it is but natural that certain reforms should be instituted.

For the accommodation of state employes the treasurer's office has been in former years accustomed to cashing checks. It was done to make it a bit more convenient for the employes and no ill effects were suffered. But there was a chance that there might and inasmuch as no provision had been made for the use of the state's money in this manner Treasurer Rogers obtained the advice of the attorney general, which was to the effect that it was not in the power of the state treasurer to make such use of state funds.

Recognizing the inconvenience that this would be to those who had been depending upon the state treasurer's office, the state treasurer has established a fund in the office out of his own private capital for the purpose of continuing the accommodation which has for so long been provided. It comes entirely from the goodness of his heart. He gets nothing from it; perhaps not a thank you. There is a chance that he may lose something, but he is entirely willing to take that chance and to sacrifice the interest on such a sum. It doesn't appear that this has anything to do with the state funds. It is simply a personal matter with the state treasurer who is willing to cash state employes' checks for the help that it will be to them. It eliminates the use of the state's money in a manner unauthorized by the law and should mean no small debt of gratitude to those benefitted. Aside from that the outstanding feature of the change is that there is neither a stretching nor a violation of the law under such a procedure.

HUGHES VS. JOHNSON.

Senator Johnson of California has thrown his hands up in great alarm over the agreement into which this country entered at Paris concerning the payments by Germany and the share which this country will receive of them in settlement of our claims. He offers no suggestion that we should abandon our claims, but because we have done as we have done and arranged for payments under a method, that is considered satisfactory by all concerned, and according to a plan which it is believed Germany can meet, he tears his hair and weeps crocodile tears about the frightful danger of becoming so entangled that we face the danger of getting into another European war.

When he says he wants to keep this country from European wars and politics, he voices a sentiment that represents the big majority of the people of the country. But when he says that the agreement concerning the payments by Germany is going to bring that about he runs up squarely against the opinion of Secretary Hughes, than whom there is probably no one in better touch in this country with the said agreement or the steps leading up to it.

Senator Johnson is endeavoring to undermine the foreign policy of the administration it would appear, but his emotional claims melt as snow under a strong February sun when response thereto is made by the statements of the secretary of state.

If it is a case of deciding between the views of Secretary Hughes and Senator Johnson, as to the effects of the agreement reached at Paris, there can be no question where the judgment of the country will rest. Senator Johnson hasn't as yet succeeded in undermining the reassurances of one of the country's greatest secretaries of state and there is no reason to believe that there are any chances that he will. Much better headway could be made and more confidence inspired by the work of the California senator if he would devote his efforts to aiding necessary legislation instead of devoting his efforts to the tactics of an obstructionist.

PUBLIC BUILDINGS.

New methods have characterized the manner in which business has been conducted at Washington for some time. There is noticed with much satisfaction that there is not only an insistence upon the exercise of businesslike methods but that there is a growing disposition on the part of congress to yield to what is regarded as a crying need. There is no better time than now to stop the reckless expenditure of money and keep within the bounds of reason and revenue. The budget system is not only accomplishing just what was expected of it, but it has directed attention to the need of applying it in all directions where government funds are involved.

It is particularly interesting that such an attitude is being displayed in connection with the general public buildings bill which has been approved by the lower house of congress. The sum authorized by the bill would be $150,000,000, but it is not proposed to proceed to make such an outlay in one fell swoop. The money would be employed in such a manner that the expenditure would cover a period of five or six years. It would mean that the public buildings needs which are imperative could be met, that those who are of secondary importance would be delayed and that which might fall under the old scheme of log rolling, whereby voting for a new building in a certain locality would impose the obligation to provide others elsewhere, would be eliminated.

Likewise the decision as to where the outlay would be made would rest with the postmaster general and the secretary of the treasury. Public buildings have been receiving little attention for the past several years. There are many demands for them. Washington alone could use a third of the entire amount mentioned in the bill, while big cities which have outgrown present quarters are demanding enlargements. The list of those places which would like government buildings is almost endless. Based on actual needs, the unwise results of hit or miss appropriations would be happily eliminated.

STONE'S CONFIRMATION.

Delayed and belated though the confirmation of Attorney General Stone for the vacant seat on the United States supreme court bench is, it was the inevitable outcome, and the insignificant opposition indicates how great the ado was about nothing.

Not in any respect, however, has it changed public opinion concerning the fitness of the man for the office. Rather has it served to strengthen the belief that he is just the one needed, and thus emphasized the excellence of the choice that has been made by President Coolidge.

There are those in the senate who have been trying to embarrass the administration. Their efforts have gone for naught. They have wasted time only to make the country more certain than ever that Harlan Stone is in possession of the very qualifications that should be found in a person filling such an important office.

The outcome creates no surprise. It was an effort by a small minority, which recognized its chance to bother and made the most of it. Much time has been wasted that should have been devoted to constructive legislative action. For this it is not difficult to place the blame and as the result of the overwhelming vote of confirmation it is to be hoped that such methods will be eliminated during the short period that remains of the present session of congress. Other confirmations that are needed should now be speedily disposed of.

ANOTHER INDICTMENT.

Many complaints have been lodged against the automobile because of the recklessness of the drivers and the speed that is made. Deaths and accidents galore can be pointed to as following the violation of restrictions and the disregard of the rights of others. The situation has existed for a long time and there is no assurance that it will not continue with the prospects of increasing in number if not in percentage as the number of motor vehicles increases.

But a new complaint is that which comes from Professor Stoner of Iowa who has been studying the casualties among vertebrae life of the countryside and who points out that on a trip of over 600 miles he found 225 instances where 29 different kinds of birds, reptiles and mammals were killed by automobiles. Perhaps it wouldn't be possible to attribute all these cases to speed, and it might be a bit difficult to say that there could not be brought a charge of negligence against many of the victims.

That the farmers should be up in arms against the automobilists that deplete their supply of chickens is natural, but the automobile drivers probably insist that the highway isn't a poultry yard and a hen is its own worst enemy.

The depletion of the birds and animals that are killed by the autos may be considerable. Highways show evidence to support such a contention, but it is not likely that there will be a successful fight made in their behalf any more than there will be against the cat that goes out and catches its prey, whether it brings home snakes, toads and birds to play with or to consume. Speed is exacting a big toll in many directions, but when it is impossible to cut down the human death rate as the result of it there is little chance that the killing of birds and small animals will get much attention.

DOES IT GET AROUND

Scene: The spacious bedroom of an extremely pretty and wealthy young woman. Painted gray furniture, lavendar taffeta cushions and freakish bric-a-brac about the room, which has eighteen mirrors. The owner of the room has, with difficulty, disentangled the telephone from the weird contraption in silk and feathers which disguises it as a doll and is speaking into the mouthpiece.

The Young Woman—"Savage? My dear, simply barbaric. Jack is so frightfully jealous. I simply tremble when I think what Gertrude Pickens would say if she heard of it—or, Nancy Taylor. Those girls hear everything. Oh, Laura, of course I know you wouldn't tell. Oh, certainly. Good-by, dear; it's done me so much good to talk to you. Yes, yes. See you soon. Good-by."

The young woman hangs up the receiver with a reluctant hand, sighs happily and crosses to her dressing table, where she powders her nose. In the mirror her eyes become thoughtful and she returns to the telepone.

The Young Woman (after getting her number)—"Hello, Maidee. Very well, thank you, considering the awful mess I was in last night. What? Oh, my dear. And I'm so worried about Jack I don't know what to do. Not that Atwood Dinwoodie is in any better condition. I simply can't tell you. How dreadful of you—of course I know you never gossip. Promise you won't tell—you must promise. Well, my dear, I went to dinner last night with Jack and who should should come in but Atwood. You know Atwood, how he simply spoils for a fight every minute that he breathes. Jack was simply livid. And before I knew it they had got into a row about some silly thing and were fighting! I never was so terrified in my life! No, there wasn't a soul there that I knew. What? Oh, not a chance of keeping still. You know Helen Hollis, Atwood's sister, is the worst gossip in town. See you soon, I hope. Good-by."

She hangs up the receive and is on the point of slipping off her negligee before a long mirror when she is called to the telephone by a loud ringing from the figurine.

The Young Woman—Hello! Oh, Clarice. How are you, dear? Thursday? So sweet of you to think of me. I wish I could, but I'm going to dinner at Atwood Dinwoodie's and to the concert, afterward with him and his mother. Yes, not that. Don't dread it after the mess last night. Oh, I am really relieved to think you haven't heard about it. Oh, it's nothing. What? Jack? O, Yes, Jack is in it. I suppose I might as well tell you since you've practically guessed. Jack and Atwood had a fight last night, my dear, over me! Yes! I know you won't tell a soul. Terrific. Yes, barbaric—neolithic, my dear, perfectly neolithic Good-by, dear. Yes, I'm sorry about Thursday."

Thoughtfully she calls another number.

The Young Woman—Clotilde? My dear, I've called you up to say that I simply can't come to luncheon today. I know you'll excuse me. The gossip, I can't face it. Oh, you're sweet, but I know every one is talking about Jack and Atwood. I can't understand how gossip spreads so quickly in this town. Goodness. Oh, don't ask me. Yes, a fist fight. Well, good-by, dear."

She makes another call. "Hello, is Mrs. Hollis in? Hello, Helen! Have you heard how Atwood is? What, my dear, didn't you know he was in a fight last night? Certainly. Jack Beaver almost murdered him. Well, he almost murdered Jack, too. He was simply livid. It's queer Atwood didn't tell you this morning when you saw him. Well, I'm glad he's all right. Are you going to the symphony on Thursday? Good. I'll see you Thursday. Good-by."

She is almost ready for her morning bath when the telephone calls her again.

The Young Woman—"Hello. Why Nancy Taylor, how are you? I haven't heard from you in ages. How screaming! (She listens for a long time to a long tale.) My dear, where did you ever hear such a perfectly killing thing about her? Yes, this town is simply a hotbed of scandal. Listen, dear. Can't you come over for luncheon? Yes, I'll get Gertrude Pickens and we can talk things over. I've such a lot to tell you and such a horrible thing happened to me last night. Yes, I can't wait to tell you. All right, dear. See you at 1 o'clock."—Chicago News.

YOUR INCOME TAX

Admission Taxes

Admission taxes are deductible from gross income in determining net income, but the taxpayer must show that account has been kept of the amount paid during the year. Mere guesswork will not be accepted. Under the revenue act of 1924, the tax applies only to admissions in excess of 50 cents; while under the preceding act it applied to admissions of 10 cents or more.

Taxes are deductible as such only by the persons upon whom they are imposed. Thus the excise taxes imposed upon sales by the manufacturer of automobile truck or wagon chassis, cameras, firearms, etc., are not deductible by the individual purchaser, even though such taxes are acually billed to him as separate items. Automobile license fees are ordinarily regarded as taxes, and the amount thereof may be deducted. Custom duties paid by a person on articles which he imports for his own use are deductible.

License fees levied by the state or city upon certain businesses are deductible as taxes. The levy may be based upon gross income of the business, during a certain period, or upon the nature of the business (each different kind having a different rate) on the location of the business, or it may be a flat rate applying in the same manner to each and every licensed business.

The revenue act of 1924 imposes stamp taxes on bond issues, issues of capital stock, sales and transfers of stock, sales of products for future delivery, etc. These taxes are allowable as deductions from gross income either as a business expense or as taxes paid. If deducted, of course, under one heading, they can not be claimed under the other.

Fulton, the "Dull" Pupil

Sensitive and of frail health, Robert Fulton, the Irish tailor's son, was backward in his lessons in the Quaker school at Lancaster, Pa., and was called "dull" by his teacher.

The boy liked to draw and to work in mechanics. Born on a small farm near little Britain, he had studied at home and helped his father until the family moved to Lancaster. Soon after he had entered school his father died.

Eager to be an artist, he went to Philadelphia at 17 and apprenticed himself to a jeweler. In spare time he painted miniature portraits and landscapes and sold enough to buy a farm for his mother and to pay his way, at 22, to Europe to study under the court artist, Benjamin West.

Finally giving up art for mechanics, he invented inclined planes to take the place of locks for the canal constructed by the Duke of Bridgewater. Later he invented a mill for sawing marble, devised a new method for making ropes and became noted as an inventor. His interest aroused in steam navigation, he went to Paris at 31. In all, he devoted 14 years exclusively to the problem of steam navigation.

After he had invented the Nautilus, a submarine that carried torpedoes for warfare, he interested the French government in his steamboat, but the vessel did not work well on its trial trip and the government withdrew its support.

After many disappointments he believed he could construct a steamboat that would run. Backed by Rober Livingston, then Minister to France, Fulton came to America and after four years of effort, launched the Clermont, which was derisively called "Fulton's Folly." Soon after leaving its moorings in the Hudson river at New York the boat stopped and Fulton's heart sank. After minor repairs it steamed up the river, at five miles an hour, to Albany.

Fulton and Livingston were granted a government monopoly and built many ships. Then came long suits over the patents. Fulton planned a steam warship, but the war of 1812 stopped his experiments.

Today the world honors Fulton as the man who made steam navigation a success.

MY OWN HILLS

Why is it that my own hills seem lovelier to me?
Why is it that my old trees stand statelier in the sun?
I, who have climbed the heights in distant Italy,
Come back again to my own hills—and bless them, every one!

They are not tall—my own hills; they do not kiss the sky,
Yet a softer green is over them, and gold is on their head;
And I would rather call their names when evening passes by
Than all the names of proud hills in countries old and dead.

My own hills—my simple hills! How glad I am of you!
And I return to look upon the velvet and the blue,
And on my heart a peace is laid for the old sweet scene.

Glory floods the world afar when morning spills its wine,
But my soul is yours, my own hills, veiled in sudden rain,
And I am true forever to the hills that I call mine.

—By Charles Hanson Towne.

Stories That Recall Others

Mixing Things Up

Mr. and Mrs. came down town on an evening car and arrived when there was a crush at the square. As they were leaving a stranger stepped in front of Mrs., just back of Mr. The latter, with his eye on traffic and engrossed in the problem of safely reaching the sidewalk with Mrs. failed to notice the substitution, and taking the strange lady's arm hurried her to the curb, where her husband was waiting for her. The husband bawled out Mr. with "where are you taking her to, the drug store?" while Mrs. bewildered at the turn of events forgetful of the others about and said, "Honey, you've got the wrong woman."

His Idea of Riches

A young man who eats his noon lunch at a small lunch counter happened at that hour the other day to be passing a restaurant that caters to the fat pursed traveling public. He entered.

He ordered a light, frugal meal. The waiter's check was 95 cents. When he recovered from the sudden chill, he said:

"Thanks, old man, if ever you come to New York call me up."

"I'll do it," answered the waiter; "who'll I call?"

"Pierpont Morgan."

The Leaf-Cutting Bee.

Many a gardener has gone to his rosebushes on a spring morning to find that some ticket-puncher has passed down the aisle and punched all the leaves. It is the leaf-cutting bee, an interesting species, whose punch is in its mandibles.

Now this leaf-cutting is one of the so-called "solitary" bees. It makes its home in a burrow that it cuts in some piece of rotting wood. If you examine one of the burrows you will find that the place is full of thimble-shaped cells, each made of a piece of rose leaf. Within each cell there is an egg and a supply of honey for the larva to live on when it comes to life. The way in which the bee proceeds to work to prepare this fragrant and luxurious house for its young is most interesting.

After the bee has driven a hole into a wooden post or tree it seeks out a rosebush and alights on a leaf. With its legs it seizes that part of the leaf which it intends to cut and quickly makes a curving slash with its mandibles. Just as the last shred is severed the bee's wings begin to vibrate, and it flies away, holding its prize firmly beneath its body.

The first piece it takes are roughly lozenge-shaped, and these it pushes and crowds into the tunnel. After it has filled the bit of leaf with pollen and honey it lays an egg and closes the end of the cell with smaller circular leaf cuttings. The little creature needs at least four circular pieces and seven lozenge-shaped pieces to complete a single cell.

Quaint Pine Tree.

The Torrey pine for the most part hugs the ground with its quaintly twisted branches, says Nature Magazine. It is remarkable for its needles, 8 to 12 inches long. This vanishing tree is found only in the Monterey peninsula.

Turquoise Charm.

A curious belief of the thirteenth century was that the owner of a true turquoise set in gold would not injure any of hi slimbs while walking or riding so long as he had the stone with him.

Volcano Is Lighthouse

On the island of San Salvador there is a volcano that provides mariners of that vicinity with a natural lighthouse. This volcano is about eight miles from the port of Acajutla, and it is said to be a pillar of cloud by day and a flash of light by night. It has served mariners for several centuries, it is said.

Shocked Elephant

The wheels of four factories in Roubaix, France, were stopped from turning by the picketing of a circus elephant to an iron stake which had been driven into the ground so deeply that it touched the tranmission cable. And the elephant did not like it either, but the shock was not fatal.

NORWICH LIONS HEAR TALKS ON HOW TO IMPROVE MILK SITUATION

A splendid and very interesting talk on the question of improving the milk supply was given Thursday evening by Dairy and Food Commissioner Thomas Holt of Hartford at the weekly meeting of the Norwich Lions club at the Wauregan hotel. The meeting was held at 6.30 o'clock instead of at the regular noon hour and opened with a luncheon. Present as guests were city officials, local physicians, representatives of the United Workers, Secretary John J. O'Rourke of the Norwich Chamber of Commerce, Dr. Hugh B. Campbell of the Norwich State Tuberculosis Sanatorium.

Commissioner Holt and Dr. Knowlton of the state health department spoke interestingly on the present milk situation and of means of improving the condition of the milk supply. Mayor Milo R. Waters, Dr. A. C. Freeman, formerly Norwich milk inspector, Dr. Gray, Dr. Hugh B. Campbell, Mrs. A. H. Chase, Mrs. Witter K. Tingley and Miss Kate MacKenzie, superintendent of the United Workers Public Health Nursing Department, also spoke along general lines on the milk question.

D'Atri's Wauregan Hotel orchestra provided a concert programme during the evening under the leadership of Edgar J. Carn. Their numbers included Eliza, Tell Me, Dreamy Eyes, Follow the Swallow, All Alone, Where is My Sweetie Hiding, Dear One and Hard Hearted Hannah. President C. E. Carpenter was the toastmaster and the song leader was Lion George Madden. The meeting came to a close about 8.45 o'clock with the singing of the Star Spangled Banner.

WILL ADDRESS MERCHANTS ON CREDIT RATING

The Norwich Credit Exchange will hold an evening meeting in the Wauregan Hotel on February 20th which will be addressed by Alfred C. Moreau formerly credit manager of the E. S. Brown company of Fall River, Mass., and now the credit manager of the Hartford, Credit Rating Bureau. Mr. Moreau has had wide experience in credit work and is a most capable and efficient credit manager. A few weeks ago he addressed a number of merchants in Middletown which resulted in the formation of a credit rating bureau in that thriving Connecticut community.

The need for credit rating bureaus is becoming more and more apparent throughout the country. The purpose of these bureaus is to exchange credit information among its members and to adopt such measures as will work for uniformity and protection in the granting of credits. The local exchange has had communications from nearly every section of the country inquiring as to the credit standing of former Norwich residents. The local exchange also answers during the course of a month many requests for information concerning the credit standing of Norwich people from Providence, Hartford, Springfield, Worcester, Boston, New York and other smaller cities in this section of the United States. If a reputation for credit is good in Norwich it means a great deal for a person looking for credit in other cities and conversely it is also true that if the credit reputation is bad it will be practically impossible to secure credit in some other city. The business houses of all the cities in New England and throughout the country support credit rating bureaus as a means of safeguarding themselves and also as a means of protecting the buying public.

There are some who abuse the privilege of credit and seem to have no conception whatever of the financial obligations incurred when a buyer seeks to purchase goods on credit. In some cases it is merely negligence and in other cases it is an attempt to evade the responsibilities of paying their just debts. Credit is granted to a customer upon the faith the merchant has in the customer to pay the account according to the terms agreed upon. If a person pays his bills promptly and if through circumstances he is obliged to defer the prompt payment of his bills and after telling his creditor of the circumstances, his credit remains good. Unless a customer pays cash in another city his credit in his home city is always investigated regardless of the fact that where a customer may make an effort to establish credit outside of his home city.

Mr. Moreau will speak to the local merchants regarding this subject of credits and the meeting will be both interesting and instructive.

WOULD ADMIT TEACHER TO RETIREMENT FUND

The story of a woman who taught the youth of New London for 19 years, never receiving more than $450 a year from the city on which she supported herself and an insane husband, and who, because the war fever led to the dropping of German from the curriculum at Bulkeley school for boys in New London and her forced retirement from the faculty three months before the teachers' retirement took effect there, unfolded to the legislative committee on education this afternoon at the capitol. The committee had under consideration a bill which would permit her to enter the teachers' retirement fund, which was supported by State Treasurer Rogers, Senator Cronin and Representatives Troland and Sisson, of New London and Burrows of Groton, besides one of her former pupils, who said he spoke for all of them. There was no opposition, although the recitation of her needs caused Frau Adelheid Moll, the subject of the bill, to frequently wipe away her tears.

CATHOLIC WOMEN'S CLUB TO SEW IN SCHOOL ROOM

Very favorable reports from Tuesday night's card party were received Thursday afternoon, when the Catholic Women's club of St. Patrick's church met in the rooms of the Ladies of Columbus. The president, Mrs. Daniel J. McGillicuddy, presided. While no definite figure was announced, it was stated that the evening social at the Wauregan House would probably net even a larger sum than was cleared last year.

Arrangements were made to begin with the coming week to sew for the parish poor, meeting in the assembly room at St. Patrick's school. The meetings will be held every Thursday afternoon. Mrs. D. J. Hayes is chairman of the sewing committee.

For the usual social hour following the well attended business meeting the arrangements were in charge of Mrs Thomas McVeigh, Mrs. M. J. Foley, and Mrs. Thomas O'Rourke. The tea table appointments were in pink and white.

ST. JOSEPH'S CHOIR HELD SUCCESSFUL DANCE

Over 500 people attended the dance held Thursday evening at Pulaski hall under the auspices of the choir of St. Joseph's church. Music was furnished by Stanley Biernacki's orchestra and dancing lasted from 8.30 until midnight.

The dance was held for the purpose of increasing the fund for the handsome and modern 17 class school which the rector, Rev. S. A. Ciek, is planning to have erected, to replace the present school. The affair was highly successful and the evening thoroughly enjoyed by all present.

Joe Portugiel was in charge of the box office and the ticket man in charge of the door was Stanley Stanilonis. Rev. Father Ciek assisted the choir members in the general supervision of the dance.

During the early evening Rev. Father Ciek introduced Mayor Milo R. Waters who addressed the large sized gathering briefly complimenting the rector and the parish on the spirit they are showing in replacing their present school building with a modern and much larger building.

HALLVILLE BUS CAUGHT FIRE ON BATH STREET

The Norwich-Hallville bus caught fire Thursday night about 10.30 o'clock as the bus was being driven up Bath street preparatory to leaving for Hallville. The driver noticed smoke around the engine as the bus neared Bailey's garage. He immediately stopped, discharged his passengers, and sent in a telephone call to the fire department.

Squad A and the deputy chief's car responded and the fire was quickly extinguished. The damage was slight. The fire which temporarily put the bus out of commission, was caused by a short circuit.

SEEK NEW NAME FOR SANATORIUM

The state tuberculosis commission on Thursday announced that it would award $25 to the Connecticut pupil of grammar or high school grade who submitted before April 12 the most attractive future name for the Norwich state tuberculosis sanatorium.

Last year the state tuberculosis commission asked the children of the grammar and high schools of Connecticut to suggest new and attractive names for three of the state's tuberculosis sanatoria, Shelton, Hartford and Norwich, and offered a little prize to the boy or girl who made the most acceptable suggestion. The prizes at that time were awarded for the names which were suggested for Shelton, Laurel Heights, and Hartford, Cedarcrest.

No name which was suggested for the Norwich sanatorium was considered satisfactory, but announcement was then made by the state tuberculosis commission that this year another opportunity would be given to Connecticut children to find a suitable name for the institution.

The announcement of the commission said:

"The sanatorium is located on a hill beside the river Thames, south of Norwich. It is near to the old reservation of the famous Mohican Indians. It was there that a famous Indian battle was fought. It is one of the best tuberculosis sanitaria in America.

"The name should not suggest sickness. It should not be River View, nor a commonplace reference to the Rose of New England. It should be brief, original, euphonious, pat, and, if possible, picturseque.

"The commission will give $25 to the winner of the contest, which will be open to any pupil of a Connecticut private or public school of the grammar or high school grades.

"1. The competition will begin Feb. 10 and end Easter Sundys, April 12.

"2. Names or titles should be sent to the State Tuberculosis Commission, State Capitol, Hartford.

"3. The members of the commission will act as judges in deciding the contest.

"4. Communications should contain the name, address and school grade of the competitor.

"5. An explanatory statement of not more than 50 words may be sent with the suggested title, giving reasons for the selection.

"6. Any number of titles may be submitted by any individual competitor.

"In the competition last year nearly 1,000 names were suggested for the Hartford and Shelton sanatoriums."

PROCESS IN SOLUTION OF MYSTERIOUS PISTOL DUEL

Lexington, Mass., Feb. 5.—Progress in the solution of the mystery surrounding the pistol duel in North Lexington last Monday in which George Traveline, correspondence school detective was killed and Joseph Statsky a high school senior whom the police believe was in his spare moments a bootlegger was wounded, was further complicated by the finding of a "22 calibre unexploded cartridge near the scene of the shooting and the statement by physicians that the bullet lodged behind Statsky's rib could not be extracted. Statsky is in an Arlington hospital under police guard charged with murder.

The police, having four pistols in their possession, one found on the body of Traveline and three in or near the Statsky home, hoped to determine which gun fired the shot which wounded Statsky.

Alfred Johnson, aged 4, turned over to the police a .22 calibre cartridge which he found near the spot where Traveline's body was found. A .32 calibre pistol was lying on the body of Travelene; a .22 revolver was found in the safe in the Statsky house; a .32 pistol, similar to that found on Travelene's body, was discovered near the Statsky home; and a .22 automatic pistol was taken from Statsky at the time of his arrest.

The police believe that Travelene, posing as a detective, may have taunted Statsky with being a bootlegger and that the youths had quarreled before the occasion of the shooting.

Statsky's account of the affair to the police has varied but he has maintained that Travelen, displaying a detective's badge, held him up with a revolver and forced him to give over $15 and then tried to take from him a bundle, which Statsky declared containe dan accordian. A scuffle followed, according to Statsky's story to the police and Travelene fired one shot. Statsky said that he returned the fire and the Travelene dropped.

An autopsy performed on Travelene's body showed two bullets, similar in calibre to those fitting the pistol taken from Statsky when he was arrested, lodged in his brain.

REQUESTED DECENT EPITAPH BE CUT ON HIS GRAVESTONE

Worcester, Mass., Feb. 5.—"I give my soul to God; my body to the grave Let a decent epitaph be cut on my gravestone," and a list of prices as to what the cost of his funeral should be, are contained on a sheet of letter paper and dated January 2, 1920, filed for probate today. The estate, the value of which is not indicated, is to be equally divided among nieces and nephews, who reside 'probably in Canada" and who number more than twenty.

The will directs that not more than $75 be paid for Mr. LaFlamme's casket, and that the funeral mass and the anniversary mass for the repose of his soul shall not cost more than $25.

Grade A Milk

Milk is graded according to bacteriological content; not, as many people think, according to the amount of cream it contains. This statement is made by the Scientific American in answer to a query. In other words, grade A milk is not necessarily richer in cream than the B or C grades, contrary to general opinion. It is the number of bacteria found in milk which determines how it is graded. Grade A milk contains the fewest bacteria; there being no more than 30,000 per cubic centimeter in this grade after pasteurization. In Grade B, milk there are no more than 100,000 bacteria per cubic centimeter. In Grade C milk there are no more than 300,000 bacteria per cubic centimeter.

The Porcupine

The porcupine is the most maligned animal in natural history fiction with the possible exception of the skunk, according to Guy Powers, United States forest ranger in Glacier National park. "Many stories have been told about porky throwing his quills at people and animals from a distance of several feet," he says. "As a matter of fact, no porcupine ever threw a quill at anybody in his life, and couldn't if he tried. If you took hold of a porcupine the quills which k the very lightly fixed in skin, will come out and stick in your hand, but that isn't porky's fault. If you took hold of a live wire, you must expect to get burned. The skunk also is a much abused animal. I never heard of him annoying any one unless others annoyed him. If let alone he is perfectly willing not to create a stir, and will even make friends if opportunity offers. On many occasions I have had skunks come into camps for food, and I even made a pet of one and carried him around for weeks without disastrous results."

Austria May Have a New Coin Unit

Austria is taking another important step in currency reform. By a bill introduced in the National Council the shilling will take the place of the crown as a unit of currency. For the present banks and business houses may continue to keep accounts in crowns. The Austrian shilling is equal to 10,000 paper crowns, but in future the fineness of silver coins of one shilling, of which the gross weight remains three grammes, will be reduced from 800 to 640 in 1,000 parts.

A Lost Island.

In the far south Pacific is a forgotten isle called Bardoo, which is ruled over by a widow of an Australian, who went there originally in the hope that missionary work would assuage her grief over the loss of her husband. She is now the supreme ruler of the island, which contains only three other whites.

FAST BOUTS FEATURE CARD AT THE DANIELSON CASINO LAST EVENING

Danielson, Feb. 5.—Billy Ryan of Providence, a college boy, won a popular decision over Willie Garvey of Worcester in the main bout at the Casino Arena here tonight. Ryan, who was out of Providence, weighed 149 1-2, conceding 10 1-2 pounds to Garvey, who was taller, and also had the longer reach. Both Ryan and Garvey were substitute fighters, Garvey replacing Tony Smith, who was injured in a bout a week ago, and Ryan replacing Lew Gates, the Mohawk Indian, who is suffering from an attack of appendicitis. The fans, however, lost nothing by the substitution. Ryan put up a wonderful fight all through the eight rounds for which the bout was scheduled, and at various times belted Garvey into the corners or up against the ropes.

At the opening of the bout the crowd pleaded with Garvey to let Ryan stay a round or two, but they need not have been so solicitous. Ryan quickly demonstrated that he was amply able to take care of himself even against a heavier opponent. As Ryan's right hand was raised in victory by Referee Billy Conway of Hartford the crowd gave him an ovation.

In the semi-final, which went the limit of eight rounds, Charlie Ricardi of Worcester, weighing in at 138 1-2 pounds, won a close decision over Mike Scrola, the Fall River Iron Man. Scrola weighed 130 pounds, but he gave Ricardi a tough battle all the way.

Edward Kearney, recent winner of the welterweight championship at the submarine base, achieved a record in the ring annals of Danielson. He managed to get knocked flatter than a flounder and stayed down for the count of 10, although he tried valiantly to get to his feet, after 25 seconds of fighting in the first round. Sailor Andre of Hartford put Kearney away in the record time with four or five right and left hooks that had the power of the proverbial pile driver in back of them. A right to the jaw finished Kearney. He tottered and his head struck the canvas with a bang and the bugler played Taps. Andre weighed 152, Kearney 141.

In the preliminary, a six-round affair, Jimmy Grocia of Worcester won a decision over Teddy Darr of Norwich. The bout went the limit. Grocia weighed 126 1-2 and Darr 128 1-4. Darr was aggressive throughout the entire fight, but he lacked the necessary punch that means victory.

On the whole the card of bouts was very satisfactory to the attendants.

WOMEN SKATERS GATHER FOR CHAMPIONSHIP MEET

New York, Feb. 5.—Twenty-four of the leading women skaters in the United States and Canada are entered in the women's international speed skating championships to be held at the Jackson Heights, L. I., rink Saturday. Miss Ellie Muller, leading American woman skater, and favorite to win the title, will meet strong opposition in Miss Lelia Brooks, Canadian champion, who last Saturday broke four world's records.

Miss Gladys Robinson of Toronto, Can., 1924 champion, will not defend her title, as she has become a professional since her triumph last year.

Four events constitute the program, including the 220, 440 yards, half-mile and three-quarters of a mile.

In addition to the international events, there will be invitation races for men in which Joe Moore, William Murphy and some of the leading national skaters will compete.

SUNDAY BASEBALL FIGHT IS ON IN MASSACHUSETTS

Boston, Feb. 5.—A lengthy hearing on a bill to legalize the charging of admission to Sunday baseball and "certain other sports and games" was at the State House by the joint legislative committee on legal affairs. Among those to appear in favor of the bill, which was introduced by initiative petition, were former Mayor John F. Fitzgerald of Boston, Brigadier General Charles H. Cole, former Mayor Charles H. Ashley of New Bedford, and William Betty, secretary of the New Bedford textile council.

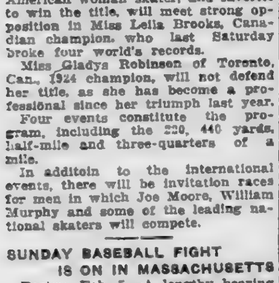
The bill is sponsored by Alfred G. Doe of Atlantic, for 25 years a baseball player in minor leagues, who said he represented 500 amateur clubs, 200 American Legion teams, 200 clubs of factory and business employes, 61 teams of Elks, 61 soccer football clubs. The hearing was not completed.

RITOLA HOPES TO HUMBLE NURMI IN MEET SATURDAY

New York, Feb. 5.—(By The A. P.)—Willie Ritola, co-star of the Finish athletic constelation with Nurmi will rival the "iron man" performances of Peerless Paavo next Saturday when he competes in two races at the Wilco A. C. games.

Ritola announced today that in addition to starting in a one mile handicap race, scheduled at 2.30 o'clock, he will compete an hour and a half later in the special two mile race in which Nurmi will attempt to lower four world's records and breast the tape in the unprecedented time of nine minutes for the full route. Joie Ray now holds the two mile record of 9:08 2-5.

Lumbago



End it now

The aching begins to ease up—the stiffness to relax—the moment you use Sloan's. It needs no rubbing. The liniment itself sends fresh blood tingling through the affected spot. In no time—you're free of pain. All druggists—35 cents.

Sloan's Liniment —kills pain!

Ritola feels that he is "ripe" now for his big test with Nurmi and their struggle Saturday promises to be the keenest of any they have ever staged. Willie has run lately in scarcely less spectacular form than his more famous countryman, in addition to which he has developed a closing sprint which will make him more dangerous than ever.

Ritola has never beaten Nurmi and his fondest ambition is to achieve that distinction. They have met twice before during the present indoor campaign, at the Finnish-American games that marked Nurmi's debut to American running, and again at the Municipal A. C. games, both in Madison Square Garden. Nurmi won handily both times at distances of 5,000 and 3,000 metres.

Prospects of another meeting between Willie Plant, American walking ace, and Ugo Frigerio, Olympic champion, at the Wilco games vanished today, when Frigerio declined to race the American again at any distance under four miles. They were scheduled to have met at two miles on Saturday, but Plant now will compete in this race against other opposition in an attempt to set records for 3,000 metres and two miles. Frigerio will confine his efforts to a handicap exhibition at four miles.

RUPPERT MAKES SWEEPING PREDICTION FOR YANKEES

New York, Feb. 5.—Colonel Jacob Ruppert, owner of the New York Yankees, "can't see" any other pennant possibilities in the American League outside of his former world's champion outfit. When asked what he thought of the 1925 race, Ruppert said today:

"Most certainly the Yankees will regain the American League championship, and very likely the world's title as well. I say this in all sincerity and not merely because I am a club owner. Any unbiased critic will agree that the Yankees were beaten in 1924 by a team which was inferior in every quality but gameness, hustle and ambition. The New York club fell down because it suffered from the ailment which in time attacks all champions —overconfidence.

"The Yankees were a better ball club than the Senators. But the Yankees took their time about starting in dead earnest, while Washington got the jump and worked like beavers from the opening day. The Yankees figured they could overtake them any old time, but soon the Senators gathered great momentum and got the advantage of a psychology which cannot be beaten. Last fall I was pretty sore about losing the pennant, but right now I realize that it was a good thing for the game and that the Yankees are in a fine position to begin a new string of victories.

"The players know that they lost by their lackadaisical attitude and will pursue different tactics this time. I believe they held a meeting late last season and made some fine resolutions."

WANTS TO KNOW WHY BARBER IS BARRED FROM TOURNEY

A letter received Thursday from a local bowling enthusiast asks why Frankie Barber is barred from the Eastern Connecticut bowling tournament. In his letter he says he understands that Barber is willing to enter the tourney with his brother Tony. The letter which follows is self explanatory:

Sporting Editor:—

For many years I have been an ardent follower of the bowling game here and elsewhere and I say that I know a good bowler when I see one. Now I saw the match last Tuesday evening between Barber and Fillmore and the team from Hartford. Let me say that I consider that match one of the best that has ever been rolled in Norwich, and furthermore that I have never seen two smoother bowlers than the two boys who represented the Aetna alleys.

Now I come to the object of my letter. Why is not Frank Barber and his brother Tony in the Eastern Connecticut two-man bowling tournament? I noticed that the directors of the league wanted another team, but for some reason that I do not know passed up the Barber brothers. Why? Is Barber barred from the league or are the other bowlers in the association afraid of the Danielson boys? Barber is a nice bowler and always appeared to be a pretty good sport. I know that bowling fans turned out in larger numbers when he rolled in Norwich than for any other bowler. He also was Eastern Connecticut champion for several years. Through an unofficial source I find that Barber is willing to bowl, so why not invite him into the league? Maybe you, or Mr. Barber himself, can throw some light on the matter. People are asking why?

A BOWLING FAN.

TRAVERS WON TECHNICAL K. O. OVER RITCHIE

New Haven, Feb. 5.—Tony Travers, of New Haven, won a technical knockout over Joe Ritchie, of Newark, N. J., after 25 seconds fighting in the third round of the scheduled six-round star bout under the auspices of the Nutmeg A. C. here tonight. Ritchie's second tossed a towel into the ring and the referee stopped the bout, giving the decision to Travers. Travers weighed 130 pounds and Ritchie 126 1-2. The state boxing commission will investigate the status of Ritchie as a suitable opponent for Travers and pending the result of the inquiry, Ritchie's money is being held up, it was learned tonight.

MRS. MALLORY WINS WAY TO THE SEMI-FINALS

New York, Feb. 5.—Mrs. Molla B. Mallory, former tennis champion, stroked with all the power of her old form today and won through to the semi-finals of the invitation tournament of the Heights Casino in Brooklyn by defeating Miss Helen Hooker of New York, 6-1, 6-0.

If Mrs. Mallory can conquer Miss Anna Fuller of Boston tomorrow, she will meet Mrs. John D. Carbiere of Boston in the finals on Saturday. Mrs. Carbiere gained her position by defeating Mrs. Bernard F. Stens of New York in a brilliantly played match, 6-3, 8-6, 7-5.

Genaro Signed for Two Bouts.

New York, Feb. 5.—Frankie Genaro, American flyweight champion, has been signed for two matches this month, but his title will not be at stake in either encounter. Genaro will meet Kid Wolfe at Philadelphia Feb. 16 in a 10-round match, while on Feb. 26 he will fight Eddie O'Dowd of Columbus, O., at Youngstown, O., in a 12-round match.

BOUT BETWEEN KAPLAN AND MASCART FOR TITLE IS PRACTICALLY ASSURED

New York, Feb. 5. — Negotiations practically have been completed for a fifteen-round match for the world's featherweight title at Madison Square Garden on March 20 between Louis (Kid) Kaplan of Meriden, Conn., recognized as world's titleholder as a result of his victory in the recent tournament conducted by the New York State Athletic Commission and Edouard Mascart of France, champion of Europe.

This announcement was made today by Sparrow Robertson, Paris sporting writer who is here as American representative of Mascart in the negotiations with Rickard. Robertson came to a tentative agreement with the promoter today but explained that it must be approved by Mascart before articles are signed. The terms were cabled tonight to the French fighter and Robertson expressed belief that they would be quickly approved.

Kaplan, who is fighting on the Pacific Coast this month, is understood to have come to an agreement already with Rickard for the fight.

The fight would constitute a real world's title contest, Robertson pointed out, since Kaplan and Mascart are recognized kings of their division here and abroad. It also would mark the third Franco-American battle for the featherweight crown in a few years. Eugene Criqui, French war hero, won the crown from Johnny Kilbane at the Polo Grounds in the summer of 1922 but lost it two months later to Johnny Dundee, who forfeited the crown last year because he could not make the weight.

BARBARIAN REFUSES TO BOX IN LIGHTWEIGHT TOURNEY

New York, Feb. 5.—(By the A. P.)—Sir Barbarian of Detroit today announced his withdrawal from the lightweight boxing tournament to be conducted by the New York state athletic commission in seeking a successor to the championship recently vacated by Benny Leonard. Barbarian explained that he has bouts scheduled on the Pacific coast within the next few weeks and will be unable to participate, but several men high in boxing circles said today that in all probability the percentage of receipts to be gained by participating in the first rounds of the tournament influenced the Detroit representative in his decision.

The commission has ruled that the combatants in the first round will receive 7 1-2 per cent from the boxer's point of view this allotment for a contest in Madison Square Garden would be considerable, although participants in the recent featherweight eliminations were awarded ten per cent. All of the featherweight contests were staged in the garden, where the capacity is approximately 13,000.

The lightweight matches, however, may be awarded to the smaller clubs in Manhattan, the commission has decreed, and there have been reports that several of the sixteen men named for the competitions would withdraw and stand ready to meet the champion when one is named.

BULKELEY PLAYS BRANFORD HIGH ON SATURDAY

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, Feb. 5.—Two good games will be played Saturday with the Bulkeley five playing the fast Branford High five at the Y. M. C. A. Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock, and on the night of the same day, the submarine Base will entertain the fast stepping Atlas Five of Manchester at the state armory.

It will be Bulkeley's first home appearance in three weeks, the team having traveled away from home, finding the traveling rather rough going, losing all of their games. With the new improvement noted in the functioning of the quintet, the Orange and Black is expected to hit its winning stride again. Huck Taylor has come dangerously near overhauling the high point scorer on the Bulkeley five, and his work on Saturday afternoon will especially be noted.

The Base will have their hands full with the Atlas five of Manchester, as the Manchester five has been going at a fast clip in its past games. The Sub Base gained a one-point decision against Colchester on Wednesday, and are showing better basketball than previously in the season. The game will get under way at 8 o'clock and dancing will follow after the game.

WALKER UNABLE TO BOX IN EXHIBITION

Washington, Feb. 5.—On the advice of physicians, Mickey Walker, welterweight champion, did not participate in his scheduled eight-round exhibition tonight at the Congressional Country club, but acted as referee in a bout between Jimmy Waterman of the Mayflower, and a boxer from a local Athletic club.

It was explained that Walker got of a sick bed to keep his engagement here, and in a ringside speech, he said his reception had not been surpassed in all his travels. He was especially pleased with his meeting today with President Coolidge. When presented by Walker with a pair of five-ounce boxing gloves, the president wanted to know what he should do with them.

"Use 'em on your next congress," Mickey said he told the executive, and drew a grin for reward.

Walker is slated to appear before the doughboy veterans at Walter Reed hospital tomorrow morning before he leaves at night, via New Orleans, for Los Angeles, where he is to fight February 24.

BIALIS TAKES LEAD IN SKATING TOURNEY

Saranac Lake, N. Y., Feb. 5.—Valentine Bialis of Lake Placid, winning the two-mile event and placing second in the three-quarter mile, took the lead in the contest for the international amateur outdoor speed skating championship with 70 points here today.

Bialis tonight was leading the field with 70 points, Allen had 60, and Richard Donovan of Saranac Lake 50. The others were trailing. Ideal ice and weather favored the skaters.

CHAPMAN PLAYS SOUTH WILLINGTON TEAM TONIGHT

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, Feb. 5.—With a makeshift team, caused by the suspension from school of two regulars and one substitute, Chapman Tech departs for South Willington, where the high school team of that town will be opposed at the Y. M. C. A. on this (Friday) evening. With a good deal of her effectiveness lost due to the suspension of both Hicks and Hewitt, the former a forward and the latter center on the first team, Chapman Tech faces its toughest problem in weeks to come out the winner. Much depends upon the showing on Friday evening to insure future victories.

With the announcement of the suspension of both Hewitt and Hicks, Coach Weaver has been sparing little time to groom two new men for the suspended players' positions. The change in the lineup found Zaparonick being placed in the place of Hicks at right forward, and L. Hewitt, a brother to the suspended captain and center to the place of pivot. Andrews, who has been regular on the five for the past two years, was elected captain in the place of Hewitt and he will hold down the berth to which he has been accustomed. In the back court, the same two players will be found, Knox at right guard and Montgomery at left guard with a possibility that Martin a bespelected player, will probably be thrown into the weak position of center.

Bulkeley to Enter Tournament.

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, Feb. 5.—Formal announcement that the Bulkeley basketball team would enter in the tournament to be held at Connecticut Aggies on March 13-14, was made today. Having received the invitation to participate with other high schools in this section of the state, Bulkeley will enter her name for the first time in any interscholastic tourneys. The schedule which would partly inflict upon this course, if it is to be followed out, will be altered as the occasion demands to allow the team to take part in the tournament.

Chapman Technical High, last year winner of the tourney, had also made preparations to enter the tournament but may change her mind with the suspension of three of the players of the squad.

DOLAN TO CONTINUE FIGHT TO CLEAR HIS NAME

New York, Feb. 5.—Cozy Dolan, blacklisted former coach of the New York Giants, announced today upon a visit to the offices of the local national league club that he intended to renew his fight to clear his name of connection with the bribery attempt of Jimmy O'Connell.

Dolan, in a brief talk with Giant officials, insisted he is innocent of any connection with the deal, as charged by O'Connell, and declared that he intended to pursue his case with Commissioner Landis in an attempt to gain reinstatement. Dolan said he would not resort to legal action, but hoped to convince Landis of his innocense.

Although the report of the district attorney's investigation into the scandal made public yesterday, pointed out that the impression of Dolan's evasiveness in the case had not been removed, Dolan insisted today that this inquiry added further strength to the clear record he claims.

TIPLITZ REFUSES TO BOX IN BOSTON BOUT

Boston, Feb. 5.—Joe Tiplitz, Philadelphia, lightweight, left the hall tonight before his scheduled 10-round bout with Jack Zivic, of Pittsburgh. State Boxing Commissioner Eugene Buckley said afterwards that club officials who overtook Tiplitz at the South station were informed by the boxer that the house was too small.

The action of Tiplitz, according to Commissioner Buckley, is unprecedented in the history of the Massachusetts boxing commission and will result in his automatic suspension in Massachusetts, New York and Pennsylvania.

Tommy Duffy of Revere outpointed Tony Mandell, Worcester, bantamweight, in an eight-round preliminary bout. Bart O'Neil, Roxbury middleweight, won from Al Sears of Boston in the eight-round semi-final.

TERDIS AND MANDELL TO MEET IN BOUT TONIGHT

New York, Feb. 5.—Sid Terris, New York lightweight, and Sammy Mandell of Rockford, Ill., will meet in a 15-round match at Madison Square Garden tomorrow night. Both principals have been named by the New York state athletic commission as competitors in the lightweight elimination tournament, and the commission let it be known today that in the event either is decisively defeated, the vanquished one will likely be tossed from the competition and one of the alternates substituted.

Terris, known in ring parlance as the "Dancing Master," is one of the fastest individuals in active pugilism. Mandell is a rugged lightweight, a fighter rather than a boxer, and this combination has attracted one of the largest crowds of the season at the Garden.

M'GRAW SIGNS SIX PLAYERS AND RELEASE FLORENCE

New York, Feb. 5.—Before leaving tonight to pave the way for his spring training campaign at Saratoga, Fla., John McGraw, veteran pilot of the New York Giants, announced the signing of six of his 1925 squad and the release of Paul Florence, former Georgetown catcher, to the Indianapolis club of the American association.

Assistant Manager Hugh Jennings and Ross Young, right fielder, are two veterans who signed contract. Thes others signed are Mickey Devine, catcher from Newark, N. J., Ralph Fraser, Rookie outfielder, and John Manners and Ralph Conners, recruit pitchers.

Frank Frisch, captain and second baseman, conferred with McGraw, but has not yet signed a contract.

MacDonald Smith, of San Francisco, with a score of 286 was second and Harry Cooper, Dallas, Texas, finished third with 292. All the winners are professionals.

Harris and Todt Sign Contracts.

Boston, Feb. 5.—The signed contracts of Joe Harris and Phil Todt, both first basemen, were received today at the office of the Boston Red Sox, Secretary Price announced tonight. The contract of Curtie Fullerton, pitcher, was the first turned in.

McGinley will be graduated from Pennsylvania this spring and will assume his coaching duties next fall.

SPORTING NOTES

Three players from the same semi-pro club in Detroit, have signed contracts to play in organized ball this year. Eddie Drinkert, a catcher, and Walter Hayden, a third baseman, will be given trials with the Atlanta Southern League club. Walter Kemp the third player, will join the Cedar Rapids club of the Mississippi Valley league. All three played on the Sales club last year.

Steady improvement in the condition of Wilbert Robinson, manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers, is reported from the Union Memorial hospital, at Baltimore, where Robinson has been a patient for several weeks. Since two operations were performed for complications following an attack of pleurisy, a gradual change for the better has been noted. Although confined to his bed, Robbie has shown interest in baseball affairs, and expects to head the Brooklyn club to its training quarters at Clearwater, Fla., next month.

Henry J. Simons, former widely known baseball player, died suddenly after a heart attack in a store at Albany, N. Y., on January 2. He was 60 years of age and resided in Utica, N. Y. During his playing days Simons was with the Brooklyn Nationals and Albany, Utica and Syracuse of the New York State League. He retired from the game in 1905.

The Pittsburgh Pirates will leave for their training camp at Paso Robles, Cal., on February 24. Three weeks of practice will be followed by a series of exhibition games with the San Francisco, Los Angeles and Vernon clubs. The return east will be started on April 6, with a number of other pre-season contests booked before arrival at Chicago for the opening game of the season. A series of ten games will be played with San Francisco from March 21 to 29, with double-headers on the two Sundays. The Pirates then meet Vernon in a three-game series, March 31, April 1 and 2, and will close training on the Coast with three games with Los Angeles, April 3, 4 and 5. Exhibition games arranged on the way east are: April 8-9, Oklahoma City; April 10, Little Rock; April 11 and 12, Memphis.

Birmingham fans will have the opportunity of seeing six major league clubs and two Class AA outfits in action during the spring exhibition season. Brooklyn and New York Yankees open the season in a two-game series on March 30. The St. Louis Browns meet Birmingham on April 2-3. On April 4, Buffalo ties up with the Barons. The main attraction will be staged on April 6 when the New York Giants and Washington renew their world's series struggle April 7, Cincinnati stops off and the following day Columbus of the American association, begin a four-game series.

H. A. Sanders, who played ball with the Mexia club in the West Texas league last season, and C. W. Johnson, semi-pro from Denver, have been signed to pitch for the Los Angeles club this year.

Harry A. Williams, president of the Pacific Coast League, has signed two new umpires for the coming season. Ed Teck, who handled the indicator in the New England league and Charley Schmidt, who caught for the Detroit Tigers for several years, are the new members of his staff. Williams also announced that Bill McGowan of the Southern league, has applied for a position on the staff. The report is out that Bill Guthrie, Billy Phyle, Joe Becker and Jack Carroll may not be in the Coast League this year.

Otto Vogel, Chicago Cub outfielder and former University of Illinois athlete, has been named head baseball coach of Iowa University. Vogel will ask to be placed on the voluntarily retired list of the National league, as he does not expect to re-enter professional ball, as his position at Iowa calls for his presence the entire school year.

Three-I League baseball was saved for Decatur when A. E. Staley, head of the starch works bearing his name rescinded his decision to dismantle Staley Field, the home of the Commies. A plea was made by President John H. McEvoy of the Association of Commerce, and Staley agreed to allow the Decatur Fans' Association the use of the field for 1925. In the meantime plans will go forward to have a new municipal athletic field for 1926.

Uncle Nick Altrock, baseball comedian par excellent and coach for the fighting Griffs, champions of the world, won't be able to get into the lineup next season. He pitched against the Red Sox in the final game of the 1924 campaign, poling a triple for a season's average of 1,000, by the way. That was because he was listed as a player. In his zeal to win a second successive pennant, Manager Harris wants Altrock to sign a coach's contract, thus permitting Harris to carry the full 25 active players. Both Altrock and Schact, his partner in comedy, will be listed as coaches in 1925.

ORGANIZED COOPERATION FOR FARMERS' TROUBLES.

(Written Specially for The Bulletin.)

Of course, being farmers, you all of you read the report of Connecticut's farm production in 1924, summarized in The Bulletin of Jan. 29.

Assuming that you did, it is also to be assumed that you noticed one recurrent note in it, a note repeating itself again and again, as crop after crop was reported on.

Dairy products, for instance. Prices for milk held up better in Connecticut than in any other New England state, but they "declined somewhat." On the other hand, "prices for grain which the Connecticut dairyman has to buy have risen sharply during 1924."

Tobacco, for another product and the leading cash crop of the state. There was hail and there were droughts and the quality as well as the gross production was hurt. "Prices for the 1924 crop seem likely to average considerably below those for the 1923 crop."

Potatoes. Owing to large crops elsewhere "prices have been much lower than in 1923." Though three thousand acres more were planted the crop had to sell for $1,850,000 less than in the previous year.

Peaches. "Peaches were a good crop. Prices, however, were considerably lower than in 1923." "Pears were an abundant crop and sold at low prices." Apples produced a six per cent bigger crop than in 1923, and sold for one and a half per cent less. A year ago 1,600,000 bushels brought the farmers $2,400,000, while 1924's crop of 1,700,000 bushels brought in $77,000 less.

There's something irritating, almost maddening in that steady reiteration of "lower prices," "lower prices" for almost everything the farmer has to sell. In the meantime, the cost of necessary feed-stuffs for the dairy has gone up; the price of gasoline for the truck and tractor has gone up; the prices of flour and coffee and beef have gone up; statisticians report that the "index figure" of living costs has advanced perceptibly. The wave of prosperity which is buoying up western wheat and corn farmers doesn't reach us soil-grubbers of New England. Its waves are running away from us, not towards us.

By the way, and quite as a side issue, I noticed that the amount paid for Connecticut apples gave the growers an average of a little over $1.40 a bushel. Also, I noted in the same issue that Connecticut apples were retailing to city customers at 60 cents a peck, or $2.40 a bushel. This seems like a rather generous "spread" on the price of a staple fruit. But never mind that, just now. It shows that the much- bewailing consumer could have bought his apples of the apple-grower for a little over $1.40 a bushel. He, however, found that took "too much trouble." So he now pays a dollar more for his bushel to the middleman who took the necessary trouble. And then he bawls and bellers and snivels and whimpers over "the high cost of living."

Mr. Consumer, he hadn't enough foresight to lay in his apples when they were cheap; the retailer had. He, Mr. Consumer, hadn't gumption enough to see and seize the opportunity for saving money; the retailer did. He, Mr. Consumer, was too dum lazy, anyway, and too busy dodging trouble in shop or office deliberately to take extra trouble just for thrift's sake. The retailer wasn't. He was "on his job," with his eyes open, his hand out, and his purse ready. Does Mr. Consumer, or Mrs. Consumer either, think he really ought to take no pay for his work and his trouble and the exercise of his gumption and the investment of his capital? If he hadn't done as he did, they, Mr. and Mrs. Consumer, thriftless, hand-to-mouth, trouble-hating and ease-chasing sybarites, would be on short commons about now.

I rather think, if I were a retail dealer in provisions and had to do all the planning for a bunch of customers too lazy to plan for themselves; and use all the gumption I had to prepare for their future demands, they themselves being to all appearance utterly gumptionless; and take a lot of trouble and do a lot of hard work in their behalf, they being too shiftless to take the trouble or do the work themselves; and invest my capital and strain my credit laying in stocks they might have laid in for themselves had they not been too improvident to do so,—I say I think, under those circumstances, I should be strongly inclined to charge all the traffic would bear. And so would you under like conditions. Don't make any smugly, hypocritical pretense that you wouldn't!

It isn't the middleman who is to be blamed for taking advantage of the opportunities which the lack of gumption among producers and the absence of thrift among consumers fairly thrust upon him. He's really as human as you or I and as much interested in Number One. And he's really much less to be blamed than the producers who sell without shrewdness and the consumers who buy without thrift,—and then snarl and snivel over paying him for his services.

If we are, whether producer or consumer, truly anxious to avoid paying the middleman for his work and his pains, we can only do so through some form of co-operation and some system of distribution which shall make his work and pains unnecessary. It's just Hobson's choice with us.

President Coolidge's conference on agricultural legislation, which has been painstakingly studying all the nostrums invented by politicians and all the devices suggested by granges and farm bureaus and other farm organizations, has recently sent in a preliminary report. Its members come back, as it was inevitable from the outset they'd have to, to the idea of co-operation between producers, consumers and distributors. Did you read the summary of their report? If you didn't let me say that it provides for the setting up of a federal co-operative marketing board of five members. The secretaries of agriculture and commerce are to be two of the five, the other three to be appointed by the president from "commodity organizations." The general principles to be applied,—all voluntarily, if you please,—are summarized in the Washington dispatches as follows:

"(1) formation of pools and exchange of information by associations; (2) producers to be aided in organization by the government; (3) federal audit of accounts semi-annually, similarly to bank examinations; (4) setting of grades and standards; (5) registered exchanges with inspection service; (6) federal information on questions of production, financing and marketing when requested."

Of course, the above is just a telegraphic and much condensed summary. I don't quite understand just how Nos. (1) and (5), for example, would work out. The one fact is clear, however, that this conference of agricultural experts, made up of the shrewdest and broadest minds the canny farmer-boy in the white house could call to his counsel, after long and patient study of all the medicines and tonics and panaceas suggested or concocted, come back to a form of farm co-operation as the first item in their course of treatment.—They make several other minor suggestions, it is true, but all are plainly and confessedly of secondary importance. It is in co-operation, in some form of organization by which production and distribution and marketing can be regulated and directed and facilitated, that they see the first imperative need of the farming industry.

Well, what do you think of it? I'd be willing to bet a cookie that your first mental reaction is "agin it." In the first place, being a dyed-in-the-wool farmer, you're an individualist. You like to see a tub that will stand on its own bottom and a farmer who will stand on his own legs, or, at least, lean on his own hoe-handle for assistance. Perhaps you've seen the failure of some badly planned and weakly executed attempt at co-operation in the dairy or the marketing line. You're naturally and justifiably shy of organizations in which petty grafters and self-seeking incapables are always struggling after—and too often attaining,—control. Besides, with all your own farm-work crowding on you and no adequate help obtainable, how can you find time to do your share in this somewhat altruistic and community service?

You're dead right, too,—as far as you go. But please go on a step or two farther.

You're an individualist. Leaving out all theories as to the correctness of individualism, please observe one crushing fact: of all the important industries of the world, yours is the only one which isn't organized. You're surrounded on every side by organized and disciplined and hostile hosts, intent solely on their own advantage and regarding your interests, your welfare, your very existence, no more than the upper and nether millstones regard the wheat berries being ground between them. It's a condition, not a theory, which confronts you. You've simply got to meet organization with organization or continue to be beaten and crushed.

You dislike organization because it so often works out for the glory and emolument of those on top, at the expense of the mass. But reflect a moment more. It is true that it is the scum which rises to the surface on stagnant swamp pools. It is just as truly the cream which rises on the pans of freshly drawn and properly cared for milk. Whether it shall be scum or cream depends on what the fluid mass is composed of. Are you really willing to assume that a body os associated farmers is more likely to produce scum and less likely to produce cream than one of business men or of plumbers or of locomotive engineers?

Why are wheat and corn high today? Simply because, as the year turned out, not enough was put in last spring. Why are potatoes too low to pay the cost of production? Simply because, as the year turned out, too many were planted. We can't foresee a season's weather in advance, or control it if we could see it. Of course not. But such a degree of foresight as we can attain and such a grouping of interests as we can ensure would help amazingly.

Organized co-operation is no divine and infallible cure for all economic troubles. But it's the best medicine the wisest minds can compound for what happens to all us, just now.

Government can help somewhat in starting and steering the co-operative fleet on its course. But the success or failure of its voyage will depend mainly on the crew. That's us. If we mutiny, that ends the adventure. If we "sodger," we invite failure. If we all insist upon steering in different directions, we had better stay tied up at the wharf to rot in supine stagnation, for we shall never get anywhere.

"Two heads are better than one, even if one is a cabbage-head," is a trite saying you've all heard many times. "In the multitude of counsellors there is safety," said a very wise man centuries ago.

"If one prevail against him, two shall withstand him, and a three-fold cord is not quickly broken," said the same Solomon.

THE FARMER.

CONNECTICUT SHIPPERS ARE SLOW ABOUT CONTRIBUTING

At a meeting of the traffic committee of the Manufacturers Association of Connecticut, J. F. Atwater, chairman of the sub-committee on rates, pointed out the fact that to date Connecticut shippers and receivers of freight have subscribed only $2,900 to the total fund of $20,000 which is being raised by New England and metropolitan New York in connection with the eastern class rate investigation case, which the interstate commerce commission took up for consideration on Feb. 4.

The New England Traffic League, the Manufacturers Association of Connecticut, and the Merchants Association of New York have joined hands in opposing the increases proposed by the carriers in official classification territory, the territory east of the Mississippi and north of the Ohio and Potomac rivers, which would result in a general increase in freight rates of approximately 15 per cent.

It has been pointed out by the Manufacturers Association of Connecticut that the contemplated increases would seriously affect the ability of Connecticut manufacturers to compete with southern and middle western manufacturers. Likewise, living costs would be raised because of the inability of Connecticut merchants to secure merchandise at former prices.

The organizations named have retained counsel but unless shippers and receivers of freight respond more completely to the appeal for contributions, the program of the defense cannot be carried out.

They reported favorably and a ballot was taken and the nomination was confirmed by a vote of 199 to 1.

The nomination of Judge Walter M. Pickett of New Haven as a judge of the court of common pleas for New Haven was confirmed by a vote of 189 to 2. The action on the nominations was under suspension of the rules, transmitted to the office of the secretary of state.

Whittier, commemorative of the event, and the dark day when Davenport directed that candles be brought in that the business of the assembly might continue. Mr. Wheeler was applauded. House Leader Alling gave notice that the assembly would meet four days each week until further notice.

BANDIT "BIG MIKE" FIRED BULLET INTO HIS OWN BRAIN

Bridgeport, Feb. 5.—Michael Riccitelli, the Post road bandit, who was captured in Stratford yesterday by Chief of Police William B. Nichols and Patrolman Patrick J. Flanagan, fired a bullet into his brain from one of his own .38 calibre revolvers when he saw that "the game was up."

This hitherto unsuspected fact was revealed in the autopsy performed today by Medical Examiner H. LeBaron Peters. Dr. Peters removed from Riccitelli's brain a .38 calibre bullet, which fitted the single empty shell found in one of the bandit's revolvers picked up from the ground near the spot where he had fallen.

Riccitelli undoubtedly decided to deliver his own "coup de grace," the final shot which would put him beyond the law, when he saw that capture was inevitable. Already mortally wounded by the charges of buckshot which had torn through his lungs as he was running up the hill from the railroad tracks, the pursuing officers 100 feet behind him, he dropped out of sight of the officers for a few seconds as he staggered over the summit of Sherman Street hill.

As he dropped down out of sight of Chief Nichols and Patrolman Flanagan, it is believed he placed the muzzle of one of his revolvers to his temple and pulled the trigger. When the policemen came over the brow of the hill they found him prostrate on the ground. They assumed that it was their shots alone which had brought the bandit down. The empty shell found in Riccitelli's still warm revolver they believed had held a bullet which the bandit had fired at them without their being aware of it. They never thought the outlaw had shot himself.

In firing a bullet into his brain when he saw that his capture was certain, Riccitelli carried out a threat made weeks ago when he was traveling around with Philip Tomassi, one of his accomplices in the Russo bank robbery in New Haven, it was made known today.

"I'll never be taken alive if I can help it," he said at that time. "I'll shoot myself before I'll consent to be taken." With at least two murder charges facing him, as well as a long list of other crimes to be answered for, he probably decided to end it all when he saw that he was fairly trapped.

Town Manager R. H. Hunter said today that he will make every effort to collect for the Stratford policemen the various rewards offered for the capture of the Post road bandit. These rewards, including the $1,000 reward offered by the town of Stratford, the rewards offered by the Atlantic & Pacific Tea company and the town of Darien for the capture of the slayer of Herbert J. May, and other rewards offered by companies and municipalities for the capture of the Post road bandit are expected to total in the neighborhood of $8,000 or $10,000.

Buenos Aires, Feb. 5.—The most powerful lighthouse in South America, located on the island of El Rincon, off Bahia Blanca, Argentina, was placed in operation last night. MAGNESIA BEST FOR YOUR INDIGESTION

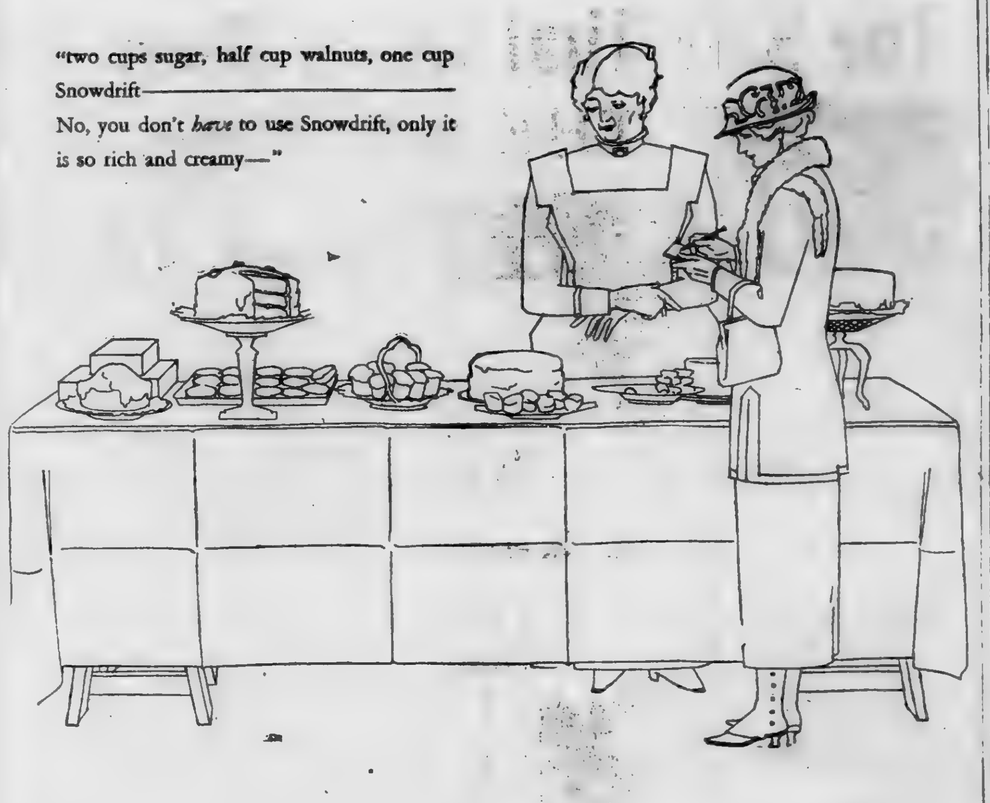
Warns Against Doping Stomach With Artificial Digestents

Most people who suffer, either occasionally or chronically, from gas, sourness and indigestion, have now discontinued disagreeable diets, patent foods and the use of harmful drugs, stomach tonics, medicines and artificial digestents, and instead, following the advice so often given in these columns, take a teaspoonful or two tablets of Bisurated Magnesia in a little water after meals with the result that their stomach no longer troubles them, they are able to eat as they please and they enjoy much better health. Those who use Bisurated Magnesia never dread the approach of meal time because they know this wonderful anti-acid and food corrective, which can be obtained from any good drug store, will instantly neutralize the stomach acidity, sweeten the stomach, prevent food fermentation, and without the slightest pain or discomfort. Try this plan yourself, but be certain to get pure Bisurated Magnesia especially prepared for stomach use.

"two cups sugar, half cup walnuts, one cup Snowdrift——————

No, you don't have to use Snowdrift, only it is so rich and creamy—"



Snowdrift is made by the Wesson Oil people out of oil as good as fine salad oil—hardened and whipped into a creamy white fat—and packed in an airtight can to keep it as sweet and fresh as the day it was made. There couldn't be anything nicer or more wholesome for making cake, biscuit or pie crust or for frying.

AWAITING DEMOLITION OF WORLD AT MIDNIGHT TODAY

Patchague N. Y., Feb. 5.—This is Doomsday Eve to about 35 residents of various Long Island communities.

Firmly convinced that demolition of the temporal world will begin at midnight tomorrow with the advent of the millennium, these followers of Mrs. Margaret W. Rowen of Hollywood awaited fate calmly. All have sold their possessions and have applied the receipts to liquidation of their debts. Although adamant in their conviction that they have but a few more hours of temporal life, there was little apparent change in their attitude toward things in general. They read their Bibles a little more, contented themselves with a diet of carrots and water and sang hymns.

Robert Reidt, a stolid little paperhanger of German birth, is the local leader of the band. He spent what he considered his penultimate day on earth in diligent efforts to sell his last possession, a rather dingy automobile. He wanted $310 for it, explaining that he owed just that sum and wanted to clean the slate before boarding a cloud with his placid wife and their four children. This cloud, he insisted, is due over his hillside home at midnight tomorrow. Wrapped in light blinding to all eyes but those of the elect, this chariot, he is convinced, is to bear his family to a mountain near San Diego, Calif., where he and his 144,000 brethren are to watch the destruction of the world.

Reidt and has family spent tonight in their cabin-like home reading the Bible and singing hymns. Others of the Seventh Day Adventist Reforme church, as they call themselves, will await the millennium in their own homes. There is to be no general gathering in any one place, Reidt announced, although it had first been planned that he and his followers would await the "sign in the sky."

OFFERS PRIZE FOR NAME FOR NORWICH SANATORIUM

The state tuberculosis commission announced Thursday that it would award $25 to the Connecticut pupil of grammar or high school grade who submitted before April 12 the most attractive future name for the Norwich state tuberculosis sanatorium.

Last year the state tuberculosis commission asked the children of the grammar and high schools of Connecticut to suggest new and attractive names for three of the state's tuberculosis sanatoria, Shelton, Hartford and Norwich, and offered a little prize to the boy or girl who made the most acceptable suggestion. The prizes at that time were awarded for the names which were suggested for Shelton, "Laurel Heights," and Hartford, "Cedarcrest."

No name which was suggested for the Norwich sanatorium was considered satisfactory but announcement was then made by the state tuberculosis commission that this year another effort would be given to Connecticut children to find a suitable name for the institution.

The announcement of the commission says:

The sanatorium is located on a hill beside the river Thames, south of Norwich. It is near to the old reservation of the famous Mohican Indians. It was there that a famous Indian battle was fought. It is one of the best tuberculosis sanatoria in America.

The name should not suggest sickness. It should not be "River View" nor a commonplace reference to the Rose of New England. It should be brief, original, euphonious, pat, and, if possible, picturesque.

The commission will give $25 to the winner of the contest, which will be open to any pupil of a Connecticut private or public school of the grammar or high school grades.

2. Names or titles should be sent to the state tuberculosis commission, state capitol, Hartford.

3. The members of the commission will act as judges in deciding the contest.

4. Communications should contain the name, address and school grade of the competitor.

5. An explanatory statement of not more than 50 words may be sent with the suggested title, giving reasons for the selection.

6. Any number of titles may be submitted by any individual competitor.

In the competition last year nearly 1,000 names were suggested for the Hartford and Shelton sanatoria.

Bread still is selling at the same prices on Hartford retail shelves. There is no prospect for a price advancement.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

MARKET WAS BULLISH.

New York, Feb. 5.—Bullish operations were resumed with increased vigor in today's stock market, 43 issues being elevated to their highest levels in two years or more. Total sales exceeded the two million share mark for the first time since the middle of January.

The demand for stock was stimulated by a reduction in the call money rate, Secretary Mellon's interpretation of the railroad traffic increase for January as a general progression of the country's business which should steadily gain with the advent of the new season; a sharp reduction of nearly 50,000 barrels in daily average domestic crude production and publication of several favorable earnings statements.

Spirited bidding for the railroad shares sent Frisco common and preferred, "Katy" common and preferred, Missouri Pacific common and preferred, Southern Railway, Atlantic Coast Line, Chicago Great Western and Texas and Pacific to new high records, the extreme gains running from 1 to 3 points.

The inquiry for the oil stocks centered largely in the California Producers, which recently announced another advance in crude prices. The Pan-American, Barnsdall and California Petroleum issues, Union Oil, General Petroleum and Texas and Pacific Coal and Oil sold at their highest prices since 1923, or longer.

U. S. Steel common responded to reports that mill operations were running at 94 per cent. of capacity by crossing 128 and then slipping back to 127 3-8, up 1 3-8 on the day. Shippings continued to reflect the reported improvement in ocean freight and passenger traffic. Marine preferred, American International Corporation and Atlantic, Gulf and West Indies common and preferred reaching new high ground.

Copper shares, which have been behind the rest of the list, responded to reports that a marked improvement in the red metal market had taken place in London and this city. American Smelting and Refining crossed 100 and then slipped back to 99 3-4, where it was up 3-4 on the day. Magma closed more than a point higher, but net gains in the other issues were held to fractions. American Locomotive touched another record top at 122 7-8 and then eased to 121 1-2, up two points. Other outstanding strong spots included Colorado Fuel, Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit, Leather preferred, Continental Insurance, Goodrich Rubber, Indian Refining, Laclede Gas, Liggett and Myers A and B stocks, Tidewater Oil, Timken Roller Bearing and United Fruit, all of which closed 2 to 4 points higher.

American Bank Note, Nash Motors and Universal Pipe and Radiator preferred, each soared seven points or more.

The renewal rate on call money was lowered to 3 per cent. which rate was maintained throughout the session. Time money and commercial paper rates were unchanged.

Foreign exchange rates were slightly easier. Demand sterling held fairly steady around $4.78 1-2, but French francs ruled 1 1-2 points lower at 5.40 cents, and nominal recessions took place in the other European currencies.

JAMES BOND, PROMINENT IN NIANTIC DIES SUDDENLY IN NEW LONDON STORE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, Feb. 5—James Bond, about 70, a well known resident of the Black Point section of Niantic, died suddenly of heart disease this afternoon in the market of Peabody Brothers, 438 Bank street. He owned a considerable amount of real estate in Niantic and had resided there the greater part of his life.

Mr. Bond came to New London this afternoon and about 3 o'clock he went to the Peabody market. While there he complained of feeling distressed and believed himself to be suffering from indigestion. He went to a nearby pharmacy where he obtained a small quantity of bicarbonate of soda. Returning to the market Mr. Bond complained of feeling cold and dizzy. Charles Peabody, one of the proprietors of the place, assisted Mr. Bond to the rear of the market and seated the caller beside the stove. A few minutes later Mr. Bond was stricken, becoming unconscious and dying in the chair before medical assistance could be summoned. Medical Examiner Charles Kaufman, after an investigation pronounced death due to heart affection and gave permission for the removal of the body to an undertaking establishment.

Joseph Hiller, of Philadelphia; Mrs. Albert Parks, Uncasville, Mrs. Frank Wargus, Stonington; Mrs. Timothy Driscoll and infant daughter, 71 Colman street, and Hall Lake, 392 Pequot avenue, patients at Lawrence hospital were discharged today.

William Orkney, 122 Baker avenue, Groton, is confined to his home as the result of a fractured collar-bone sustained Tuesday night by falling on the ice while skating on the duck pond of the Plant estate, Eastern Point. Orkney is right halfback on the Rangers soccer team and the injury will prevent his playing the remainder of the season.

Mr. and Mrs. William Connover, 43 Belden street, went to Hartford today where they attended the funeral of their son, Morgan Connover, formerly of New London, whose death occurred in Philadelphia a few days ago.

Mrs. Joseph Smith, of Fishers Island, has entered Lawrence hospital as a medical patient.

Frau Moll, who was the teacher of German at Bulkeley school in this city till prejudice against the German race became so strong after the war that the language was cut from the curriculum, went before a committee of the legislature yesterday to secure an allowance or the pension that is provided for school teachers after a term of service of 20 years. Mrs. Moll served some 19 years before her services were dispensed with, not from her choice but because the study in which she was an instructor was abandoned. She had the support of the senator from this district, Daniel M. Unrain, the representative from New London, George W. Sisson, a former student under the tuition of Mrs. Moll, William Corcoran, an actuary at Hartford, Warren B. Burrows, representative from Groton and many others. Frau Moll has not had a life of affluence, even when she was an instructor, for she then had to support with her earnings those who were not competent to earn. She gave private lessons to help meet her expenses and now she finds that her income is a very scant one. Her case is regarded as deserving by those who have knowledge of the facts.

The mild weather of today came to the assistance of pedestrians on the walks of New London and removed much of the collection of ice that had come with the freezing weather.

The police of the city say they have rarely known more quiet time in the department than they are now experiencing. There had not been an arrest today up to 9 o'clock this evening and there was little prospect that the slow record would be broken during the night. Automobile travel increased because of the mild weather, but that did not serve to bring any activity to the police.

Walter T. Murphy is out today after a few days of confinement to the house because of indisposition.

New London lodge of Elks performed the ceremony of initiation this evening when there were two candidates.

Now that the Hollandersky building on Bank street on the sit of the former Rodewald property, is disclosed to view, it shows one of the handsomest structures on that street. It is of the big city style of architecture and an ornament to the highway.

There is more idle store property on Bank street than has been there in many years. Still a dozen more locations will soon be added to those already there, so that the number of vacant places does not bid fair to decrease. The new places may have the effect of bringing down rent. That effect would cause some of the merchants to rejoice.

Harriet W. C. Newcomb and Elizabeth H. C. Armstrong today sold the residence at the corner of Hempstead and Mercer streets, to William H., and Lillian Lincoln, of Willimantic. The price paid was $13,000.

Both cars were damaged.

FOUND SHOE LOST FROM FOOT OF SLAIN CHILD

Los Angeles, Calif., Feb. 5—Finding of the shoe lost from the foot of Nina Martin, 8 years old, whose body with that of her sister, May, 12, was discovered in a grave yesterday, lent new impetus tonight to the attempt to solve the mystery of the kidnaping, maltreating and killing of the sisters.

That the girls, who disappeared from their homes last August, were held prisoner for some time while a and then later slain and buried, was country-wide search was in progress, a theory of officers working on the case.

It was pointed out that searching parties last summer had several times traversed the territory where the bodies were uncovered. The fact that the shoe missing from Nina's foot was discovered today forty feet away from the grave pointed to its having been thrown there or that it had dropped from the inert foot of the child as her body was borne to the spot.

SUIT FOR DIVORCE FILED BY MRS. MARY SCHLEMMER

New York, Feb. 5.—Mrs. Mary Schlemmer, who in 1923 obtained a separation decree against William F. Schlemmer, millionaire hardware manufacturer, today filed in supreme court a summons and complaint in a suit for divorce against her husband, whom she charged with bigamy.

The complaint recites that Mrs. Schlemmer and the defendant were married in Danbury, Conn., in 1914, and have ever since been "legal spouses." It goes on to assert that Schlemmer recently entered into a "bigamous marriage" with Mrs. Elsie O. Wilkinson and is now living with Mrs. Wilkinson, who is a divorcee. Mrs. Schlemmer denied in her complaint that Mr. Schlemmer had obtained a divorce from her from any court of competent jurisdiction.

According to the eternal fitness of things a contortionist should draw a double salary.

NEVADA SENATE WOULD MODIFY PROHIBITION

Carson, Nev. Feb. 5—A resolution asking congress to call a constitutional convention to consider a modification of the prohibition amendment, was adopted unanimously by the Nevada state senate today.

The resolution was drawn by Frank H. Norcross, former chief justice of the Nevada supreme court, who believes that for the eighteenth amendment to the federal constitution should be substituted a provision empowering congress to prohibit or regulate the importation, manufacture and the sale of liquor.

With such a modification of the amendment, in his opinion, congress would feel free to enact moderate liquor legislation that would command the respect and support of the country at large. Such legislation, he considers, should not permit the return of the saloon, but probably should allow the sale of liquor under some such system as that prevailing in several provinces of Canada.

The resolution adopted by the Nevada senate calls on congress to assemble a national constitutional convention for the specific purpose of amending the eighteenth amendment.

COMMITTEE AT SERVICE OF AGRICULTURAL COMISSION

Washington, Feb. 5.—The house banking and currency committee through Chairman McFadden, today placed itself at the service of the president's agricultural commission inviting it "to make definite recommendations for remedying the defects in rural credits and banking" cited in its reports.

In a letter to Chairman Carey, of the commission, Mr. McFadden declared house leaders would bring in an early vote the recently reported bill of his committee with reference to cooperative marketing. Mr. McFadden said he believed in it "when properly applied" but was "necessarily of the opinion, however, that its usefulness is limited to growing, harvesting, preparing and packing, and loading for marketing."

He was not in sympathy, he added, with the suggestion "to establish a federal agency or board of three members to administer a compulsory organization of, to direct the operations of, or to exercise control" holding that adequate facilities exist in the bureau of markets.

POSTAL BILL TO COME TO VOTE IN HOUSE TUESDAY

Washington, Feb. 5.—The Kelly postal pay and rate increase bill will come to a vote in the house next Tuesday, with three hours of debate limited to less than two hours and a two-thirds majority required for passage, on such a plan agreed upon today by republican leaders.

This procedure has decided upon at a conference between Representative Longworth, of Ohio, the republican leader, and republicans on the rules committee, which sends tomorrow or Saturday to report a resolution giving the bill right of way in the house. The plan also has the approval of republicans on the postoffice committee which reported the bill yesterday and proponents of the measure said they were confident it would receive the necessary two-thirds vote.

NO JURORS ACCEPTED FOR TRIAL OF STOKES

Chicago, Feb. 5.—No new juror wsere accepted by either side today in the trial of W. E. D. Stokes, New York millionaire, who with three others is accused of conspiring to defame Mrs. Helen Elwood Stokes of Denver in order to aid his divorce against her.

Following adjournment, Judge W. N. Gemmill called counsel to the bench and said he had been informed an investigator retained in the case had been seen speaking with jurors. This led to vehement denial, countercharges, and an exchange of warm words between counsel. Judge Gemmill then said he did not know whether the report was true, but cautioned both sides.

Tonight only three jurors had been tentatively accepted.

POTATO GROWERS ADVISED NOT TO REDUCE ACREAGE

Washington, Feb. 5.—Potato growers were advised today by the department of agriculture in the third section of its outlook report to make no further reduction in acreage this year.

The department recommended that no great increase be made in sweet potato acreage, and advised an increased planting of tobacco, sugar beets, beans, peanuts, and citrus fruits, with only a slight increase in flax.

The large potato crop of last year, the report said, "was due to extraordinary yields per acre and not to excessive acreage, and the department believes an acreage even slightly larger than that of 1924 will be profitable to growers."

"Present high prices for sweet potatoes," it continued, "should not influence growers to plant a largely increased acreage of this crop this year. Present prices are more the result of low yields in 1924 than of short acreage. An increase of more than 10 per cent. over 1924 acreage with an average yield is likely to produce more sweet potatoes than can be marketed profitably."

SPOUSE IN DISFAVOR SOUGHT TO MAKE WIFE FEEL SORRY

Chicago, Feb. 5—Police who today rushed to Harvey, a suburb, where word was received that a prisoner had confessed that he was one of three men who three months ago shot and killed Dion O'Banion, Chicago gang leader and hijacker, came back without their man tonight. New York, Feb. 5.—The chamber of commerce of the state of New York today adopted a resolution urging the president and congress to pass legislation enabling the United States to join a permanent court of international justice "that will not involve the participating nations in any association beyond the judicial settlement of international disputes."

STORY OF TRANSFER OF CHAPMAN TO WETHERSFIELD

Hartford, Feb. 5—Gerald Chapman tonight is on Connecticut soil. He faces the death penalty for his alleged killing of Patrolman James P. Skelly, who was shot down in New Britain on Oct. 13, 1924.

Chapman is fugitive no longer but a captive facing the charge of murder with a 25 year prison sentence still to serve for robbery.

Frederick J. Groehl of New York was engaged as Chapman's counsel prior to the departure of the bandit from Atlanta, it is understood. He is expected to come to Hartford shortly for a conference with the prisoner, as a preliminary step in the defense of his client, it is said. While Mr. Groehl could not be reached, Chapman's defense, by virtue of a previous declaration from Chapman himself, is expected to be an alibi.

State's Attorney Hugh M. Alcorn responsible for the sudden shift of the scene in the Chapman case, said that he plans to present the case at the March session of the superior court, even if an extension of the term is necessary.

Exactly 3.05 the clock in the Union station at Hartford recorded when the train ground to a stop here. Seconds after, hustled through the crowd of commuters, handcuffed to the two federal officers who had stood avideeye double guard over him from Atlanta for nearly a thousand miles and for more than thirty-two hours without sleep, Gerald Chapman was riding in a taxicab on the road to the prison at Wethersfield.

Hundreds of passengers rode the same train, little cognizant that the brooding figure in the drawing room of the fast express was that Chapman of whom the world had been talking.

Two hours Chapman handcuffed to his captors waited patiently in the Grand Central terminal at New York for the 11 o'clock New Haven train that was to finish the last lap of steel in the thirty-two hour journey. Hundreds passed him in the course of the crowded terminal. Scarcely a glance the hundreds afforded the two guards and the slight figure who walked between them.

The transfer was shrouded in the deepest secrecy.

Not a newspaper of the contry heralded the slowly opening gates of the Atlanta penitentiary early Wednesday morning.

Staring fixedly and mindless of the scenery outside the window of the drawing room moody and silent Chapman rode the miles to Connecticut. He did not read, he spoke in monosyllables, and he said nothing to his captors, save commonplace. Occasionally at small towns when the train drew to a halt, faces would appear curiously at the windows, Chapman leaning forward would draw the shade, shrinking from sight.

Chapman slept at the prison late tonight in prison garb after his long ride in civilian clothes. He is no different now than any other federal prisoner at Wethersfield, prison authorities said. Tomorrow he will bathe, shave, get clean clothing, a physical and mental examination, be fingerprinted and photographed.

James C. Curry, counsel for Walter E. Shean of Springfield, held on the charge of murder as an accessory after the fact in the filling of Patrolman Skelly, said when reached at the Murray Hill hotel, New York, tonight: "I am extremely glad to hear of Chapman's return. The case is in Mr. Alcorn's hands. He will assist him in every possible way."

He said that he expected Shean to appear as a material witness in the Chapman trial and that Shean may have to stand trial himself in the March court session.

Sensational Sale of New Antiseptic Breaking Record

A Discovery of Vast Benefit to Humanity.

Thousands Using It Give It Unstinted Praise.

Another Public Letter to Lee & Osgood Co. Who Has Already Sold Hundreds of Bottles.

Now that you have had such a wonderful sale of Kojene these last few weeks why not again tell your friends and customers what a wonderful discovery it is?

By so doing you can help many ailing ones and prevent hundreds of others from becoming ill.

Science continues to progress and now it has given us Kojene, the new and only antiseptic known that is neither poisonous, alcoholic, irritant or caustic.

And this non-poisonous antiseptic, so harmless that you can drink it, is four times as powerful as Carbolic Acid.

Yes, and more powerful than Bichloride of Mercury.

Let's go a little further with this new antiseptic that physicians, surgeons and dentists are talking about. Please tell your customers that it is seventy-five times more powerful as a destroyer of germs than most of the popular flavored antiseptics and mouth washes now in use.

Go further and tell them that it is so powerful that one single teaspoonful will make a whole tumbler full of the most effective and pleasant mouth wash money can buy.

A sixty cent bottle will make one-half gallon—Yes! one-half gallon of a better mouth wash than the high priced, ready to use kind.

And while you are talking about the world's most wonderful antiseptic —Kojene—tell them about a few of the many things it has the power to relieve.

Sore throat and Tonsilitis will disappear overnight. In a week chronic nasal Catarrh will be a thing of the past. Old sores, ulcers, boils, carbuncles and blemished skin will clear up like magic.

Eczema and that itching skin that drives one almost mad — two days' treatment is enough.

And that's all—except that women who believe in cleanliness will be glad to know that Kojene will do anything that any other antiseptic will do and do it better.

And it is not poisonous.

Another thing- Kojene has only the most healthful effect on delicate membranes which cannot be said of harsh, poisonous germ killing agents.

A six ounce bottle for 60 cents—and we almost forgot to say that you can give any purchaser the sixty cents back if he or she is not delighted with Kojene.

FIRE LOSS IN THE U. S. IN 1923 AMOUNTED TO $535,372,782

New York, Feb. 5.—Loss of property of fire in the United States in 1923 amounted to $535,372,782, a new record, the national board of fire underwriters announced today. The sum includes the usual allowance of 25 per cent for unreported fires. Losses for the five years ending with 1923 totaled $2,305,746,871.

The chief cause of fires in 1923 was ascribed to careless smokers and their discarded matches and tobacco. The actual destruction charged against them was $23,045,017. Defective chimneys and flues, with a loss of $20,828,162 took second place. Other important causes and their damages, were:

Stoves, furnaces, etc., $18,658,428; spontaneous combustion, $16,910,945; sparks igniting combustible roofs, $15,931,342; electricity, $14,061,759; petroleum and its products, $11,153,421; lightning, $10,922,462; friction sparks from running machinery, $9,499,699; hot ashes and coals and open fireplaces, $5,365,014.

FRANCE IN NO HASTE TO RATIFY LIQUOR TREATY

Paris, Feb. 5—(By the A. P.)—Ratification of the liquor treaty between the United States and France, is likely to be held up for some time in the chamber, by Deputy Valude, of the merchant marine committee, who was designated to report the bill out.

"On examination of the [illegible] of the convention," said M. Valude today, "it is easily seen that the whole question of international maritime rights is under review."

M. Valude, in his report, said:

"The United States seem to wish completely to change the problem of territorial waters. They demand a veritable right of visit aboard all ships destined to their ports, and that is a grave infringement on existing principles."

Recalling the fact that the United States has signed similar conventions with other powers, M. Valude asked:

"Shall France once again be the guardian of principles? France, a great producing nation of wines and spirits, cannot, without serious examination, treat with questions touching that production. She cannot, moreover, admit of any kind of general suspicion of contraband concerning ships flying her flag."

M. Valude found that the American limitation of territorial waters to one hour's steaming distance from shore "is a makeshift method which may lead to many misunderstandings."

"Furthermore," the report continued, in practice, this extension of territoriality the United States pretends to desire to install by saying that ships in contact with buildings ashore are within territorial waters cannot be approved unreservedly." This reference of M. Valude is in regard to ships alongside docks.

M. Valude daily is in consultation with committee colleagues who are urging parliament's "serious examination" of the treaty and insisting that the committee cannot approve of it without "serious discussion."

As the government on such subjects usually follows committee recommendations, it is foreseen in chamber of deputy circles that if the committees make an unfavorable report on the treaty, the chance that France will ratify the maritime contraband convention is likely to be a slim one.

$250,000 DAMAGE CAUSED BY FLOOD IN OREGON

Vale, Ore., Feb. 5—(By the A. P.)—Loss estimated at about $250,000 was caused by a flood at Vale and surrounding country in the Malheur River valley and along Bully Creek early today. No loss of life was reported though there were some narrow escapes.

About three hours after the Bully Creek irrigation dam, 19 miles west of Vale, gave way with about 10,000 acre feet of water impounded, it was estimated that nearly 3,000 sheep, 500 head of cattle, a number fo horses and dogs were drowned.

One band of sheep containing 1200 head was caught on the feed ground within two miles of Vale and drowned. Carcasses of cattle, horses, sheep and hogs are strewn along the state highway from here to the head of the valley. Marks of the high water show that it was over the road to a depth of five feet in places.

The Oregon shot line's Vale-Burns branch was cut by the washing out of a bridge.

STANDING OF AFFAIRS AT OPIUM CONFERENCE

Geneva, Feb. 5—(By the A. P.)—Whether Representative Stephen G. Porter, head of the American delegation to the International Opium Conference, will or will not sign the anti-narcotic convention, may be decided tomorrow.

The delegates today went ahead with their clerical work apathetically because of apprehension in some quarters that America's signature will be lacking.

With Mr. Porter non-committal, the only new feature of the day was an interview which Lord Cecil gave to the American correspondents, in which he defended the anti-narcotic convention as a considerable improvement over the provisions of the present Hague convention and laid special emphasis on what he called the splendid services of the American delegation.

Lord Cecil affirmed that failure of the Americans to sign would constitute a moral blow to the achievements of the conference, but remarked in conclusion that whether the United States subscribed or not he believed the other powers would complete their work and attach their signatures to the convention.

Safe, But in Trouble

Who holds his tongue will nothing say
He will regret some future day.
—Happy Jack Squirrel.

Safe up in a little tree, Happy Jack Squirrel made fun of Reddy Fox down below. "You thought you were going to catch me that time, didn't you, Mr. Smarty?" said Happy Jack. "But you didn't do it, did you? What is more, you never will catch me. You are not smart enough. You think you are smart, but you are not smart enough to catch me."

Reddy Fox might have told Happy Jack that he would have been caught had it not been for Peter Rabbit's

"You thought you were going to catch me that time, didn't you, Mr. Smarty," said Happy Jack.

warning. But he didn't. No sir, he didn't say a word. He just looked up at Happy Jack and grinned. That grin showed all his sharp teeth. It gave Happy Jack an uncomfortable feeling.

"Grin all you please," snapped Happy Jack. "You can't get me up here. I'm safe and you know it. You may as well go hunt for some one else."

But Reddy Fox seemed in no hurry to go hunt for some one else. He continued to sit at the foot of that little tree, looking up and grinning. Happy Jack continued to make fun of him and call him names until at last he grew tired of the sound of his own voice. Then he began to think about getting back to his home. Of course, he expected to get there by jumping from tree to tree. He climbed up a little higher and looked to see how far it was to the next tree. It was then that he made a dreadful discovery. It was then that he understood why Reddy Fox didn't go away and why Reddy grinned. There wasn't another tree within jumping distance! He was safe for the time being, but he was in trouble. He was a prisoner in that little tree for as long as Reddy Fox chose to remain there.

Reddy saw the look of dismay on the face of Happy Jack and the grin on his own face grew broader. That was a small tree. It wasn't hardly big enough to be called a tree. It wasn't big enough to be at all comfortable. None of the branches were big enough for a fat, gray Squirrel to hide behind. When he realized this, Happy Jack looked about anxiously. Supposing Terror the Goshawk should come along! Supposing Reddy Fox should keep him there until the Black Shadows came creeping out from the Purple Hills and Hooty the Owl should start out hunting! Happy shivered at the thought.

It was quite plain that Reddy Fox had seen at once that Happy Jack was a prisoner in that little tree. Already it was late in the afternoon. Reddy knew how afraid of being out after dark Happy Jack was. "I'll just keep him up here until the Black Shadows come. Then I'll go away and hide where he can't see me, but where I can watch him. He won't dare stay up in that tree, and he'll try to reach another tree just as soon as he thinks it is safe to. Then I'll have that fat Squirrel dinner that I just missed getting," said Reddy to himself.

So Reddy curled up at the foot of the tree and waited until the Black Shadows came creeping into the Green Forest. Then he got up, stretched yawned and trotted off as if he had decided it was useless to stay there any longer. He didn't once look back. But the instant he was where he knew Happy Jack couldn't see him he turned and crept to a place where he could watch and where he knew he was near enough to catch Happy Jack before he could reach another tree.

A huge Koran, evidently intended for use in a mosque, was sold at auction in London not long ago, says the Youth's Companion. The book is four feet tall and a foot thick and has wooden covers. An oriental bought it for £200, and it will probably go back to its former home in the east.

Eighty-eight per cent of the houses in France that were destroyed during the war had been rebuilt by July, 1924; 80 per cent of the damaged canals had been reconstructed; 80 per cent of the trenches used by the troops of both armies had been filled in, and 88 per cent of the damaged factories had been put in operation. While to a great extent the repairing of damage done in the regions was executed with government aid, much was due, nevertheless, to the energy and industry of private individuals and firms. Agricultural land has been reclaimed, populations have been returned to their original dwelling and manufacturing and mining industries have been put into operation. Since last July reconstruction has gone forward at an increasing rate, and with nothing to interrupt the present progress it may be completed before the middle of 1925, says the new York Times.

GET 28,000 BOTTLES DR. TRUE'S ELIXIR

Another new record for Dr. J. F. True & Co., of Auburn, Maine—an individual order to a New York City concern totaling over 28,000 bottles of their Dr. True's Elixir has just been shipped.

What a noticeable contrast is here when one looks back 74 years to the time when Dr. True's Elixir first made itself known. In those days if Dr. True delivered a few dozen bottles a week to his neighbors he would have considered it wonderful and well worthy of his endeavors to prescribe a genuine and reliable laxative to the sufferers.

With the trend of the times we find the two sons of Dr. True furthering the good work—still producing the same True Family Laxative in greater and greater quantities to meet the needs of humanity. The identical same ingredients of nature's herbs as used back in 1851 are compounded into Dr. True's Elixir today and the bustling throngs throughout the country seek relief from constipation by turning to Dr. True's Elixir—the True Family Laxative.

The Dr. J. F. True & Co. are to be congratulated on this record shipment of theirs. The popularity of Dr. True's Elixir is unquestioned and deserved.

DECISION ON STATUS OF LIEUT. GOV. BRAINARD

Hartford, Feb. 5—Attorney General Frank E. Healy advised J. Edwin Brainard of Branford today that he is "the legally qualified lieutenant-governor of the state, and as such, is entrusted with the discharge of the duties of that office."

The effect of the opinion is to settle Mr. Brainard's status as an ex-officio member of the state board of education, the corporation of Yale university and the board of visitors to the Sheffield scientific school and his eligibility to the salary of $1,500 a year provided for the lieutenant-governor. On the other hand, he relinquishes his right to vote in the senate, to which he was elected from the twelfth senatorial district, and the $300 salary provided for members of the general assembly.

The attorney general wrote that it was inconceivable that the constitution could be construed to permit a man to act as a senator and assist in the enactment of legislation one day and sit in the governor's office a few days later and execute the same laws.

The opinion establishes a precedent. The last time that a lieutenant governor was called to the governorship was when the death of Governor Geo. L. Lilley advanced Frank B. Weeks, of Middletown to the position in 1909. At that time, the late Isaac W. Brooks of Torrington was president, pro-tem of the senate, but his status with regard to the lieutenant-governorship was never determined beyond the fact that he was supposed to act as governor during the absence from the state of Governor Weeks. An opinion was given by the then Attorney-General Marcus H. Holcomb to the effect that Lieutenant-Governor Weeks became "the governor of right and in fact" by the death of Governor Lilley.

The present case arises from the resignation of Governor Bingham and the succession of Lieutenant-Governor Trumbull to the governorship. If the attorney general's opinion happened to be delivered to Mr. Brainard while he was occupying the executive chambers as acting governor in the absence of Governor Trumbull in Washington. The attorney-general put his theory into practice at once by addressing his opinion to "Hon J. Edwin Brainard, lieutenant-governor of Connecticut."

CHARGE MAYOR WAS IN LEAGUE WITH RUM-RUNNERS

Boston, Feb. 5—Charges that Mayor Lawrence F. Quigley of Chelsea was in league with rum-runners and hijackers were made by Daniel J. Murphy of Chelsea when arraigned before United States Commissioner Jenny today charged with possessing a large quantity of alcohol and whiskey. The hearing was continued to allow Murphy to lay before the federal grand jury evidence which he claimed would lead to the indictment of the mayor.

Counsel for Murphy at the hearing said that their client had been "double crossed" by Mayor Quigley and that the mayor had ordered a raid on Murphy's place as a result of a quarrel among rum-runners, the mayor was referred to repeatedly as a "hijacker." A Chelsea policeman who was called as a witness said the mayor had told him there was liquor at Murphy's place.

NATIONAL GUARD DRILLS MUST BE CURTAILED

Connecticut National Guard units must curtail their drill schedules because of lack of federal funds, Adjutant General Cole stated, Thursday, at Hartford. There is money available to pay for only four drills per month instead of the stipulated five and this situation will obtain only until March 31. For the last three months of the federal fiscal year, ending June 30, there is no money at all available for drill pay.

General Cole has joined with adjutant generals of other states in a plea to congress for a deficiency appropriations to meet this shortage. Recruiting of Connecticut National Guard units beyond their present strength was stopped some time ago because of the pay situation.

COMMON PLEAS JUDGE FINDS ERROR IN LOCAL THEATER CASE

Error is found and the judgment of the justice of the peace is set aside by Judge C. B. Waller of the common pleas court in a decision handed down Thursday in the summary process suit of Sylvester Z. Poli of New Haven, owner of the Broadway theatre, against Abe Davidson, his tenant, under a lease which has until 1927 to run.

The case was decided in favor of Poli at the hearing before Justice of the Peace John D. Hall and a jury of six Norwich men. The present decision upsets the verdict reached in the justice's court. It is now expected that Poli will take an appeal to the supreme court of errors for an ultimate verdict in the case.

The suit was brought by Poli against Davidson in order to eject Davidson from possession of the theatre property under his lease on the claim that Davidson had not lived up to the terms of the lease. The particular point which it was claimed he had failed to fulfill the terms of the lease was in the payment of fire insurance premiums. Bearing upon this point was the fact that the payment of insurance premiums was not mentioned in the lease but was mentioned in a bond given some time later. Counsel for Poli held that the bond and the lease must be taken together as of equal value and this claim was supported by the trial justice, but it is ruled to be in error by the decision of Judge Waller.

Attorney Benjamin Slade of New Haven appeared as counsel for Poli in the trial of the case, while Arthur M. Brown and Charles V. James were attorneys for Davidson.

Memorandum of Decision

In his memorandum of decision Judge Waller says:

This is a writ of error brought by the plaintiff in error hereinafter called the defendant to reverse the judgment of justice of the peace in an action of summary process.

The writ of error and all of its exceptions includes alleged errors of the trial justice in overruling the defendant's motion to expunge, in overruling the defendant's demurrer to the complaint, in certain rulings upon evidence and in refusing to charge the jury as requested.

The claim of the plaintiff as set forth in his complaint is that under the terms of the lease the defendant covenanted to pay a certain fixed rental and in addition thereto all necessary expenses incident to the use and management of the leased premises; that fire insurance premiums on the leased premises were a necessary expense incident to such use and management and that the defendant has failed to make payment of such insurance premiums.

In paragraph 2 of the complaint it is alleged that in connection with the lease and to secure its performance the lessee and others executed a bond to the plaintiff, which bond is annexed to and made a part of the complaint. It appears from this bond that reference is made to the provisions of the lease concerning the payment of rental and necessary expenses and that insurance is specifically included in the bond as one of the expenses to be paid though not specifically mentioned under the provisions of the lease.

I think there was no error in overruling the defendant's motion to expunge the second paragraph of the complaint as the execution and delivery of the bond with its specific reference covering the item of insurance constitutes a material fact.

I find no error in overruling the demurrer to the complaint for as I understand the complaint it alleges that the defendant had covenanted to pay all necessary expenses incident to the use and management of the leased premises; that insurance premiums were such a necessary expense and that the defendant had failed to make a payment of such premiums. These allegations appear to set forth facts upon which the claim could be made that the defendant had failed to perform one of the covenants of the lease.

Whether there was error on the part of the trial justice in the rulings upon evidence and in the charge to the jury runs upon the decision whether the bond, Exhibit B, is to be construed with the lease as a part thereof or whether the bond is to be considered merely as evidential of the construction placed by the parties upon the language used in the lease. The lease does not in any manner refer to the bond or require that a bond be furnished for the performance of the lease by the lessee.

As I construe the bond I find no attempt therein to modify or change in any respect the provisions of the lease. The reference to the item of insurance is included under the paragraph containing the recitation that the plaintiff leased the premises at the agreed rental "and does under the terms of said lease agree to pay for taxes, insurance and repairs of the interior of said property during the term of said lease."

The bond is upon the condition "that the said Abe Davidson shall well and truly perform and adhere to the terms of the said lease and faithfully carry out the covenants as therein specified." If the bond is to be taken as a part of the lease it must be on the theory that the contract of lease was modified and amended by the provisions of the bond and that the reference to insurance in the bond is to be read into the lease as if specifically incorporated therein.

In my opinion such construction cannot be given to the two instruments, and this does not appear to have been the thory upon which the plaintiff bases his complaint. I think at the most the language used in the bond is evidential as to the construction placed by the parties upon the language used in the lease.

It is not clear to me that the provisions of the lease obligating the lessee to pay "all necessary expenses incident to the use and management of said leased property for the purposes provided in said lease, including heating, lighting, taxes, all expenses for interior repairs, and all other ordinary and necessary expenses and improvements incident to the business aforesaid" would obligate the lessee to pay insurance premiums but these provisions are perhaps broad enough to include insurance if it appears that the parties had the item of insurance in mind as one of the necessary expenses and if they intended and understood that the several phrases used in these provisions should include the payment of insurance premiums.

If the language of the bond is, therefore, to be considered as evidential of the construction placed by the parties upon these provisions of the lease, then certainly it is not in itself conclusive, especially if other conduct or statements of the plaintiff tend to establish a contrary construction of these provisions of the lease.

I have arrived at the conclusion, therefore, that there was error in excluding testimony of the defendant as appears in the eighth paragraph of defendant's bill or exceptions and in excluding the testimony of the witness, Vertume P. A. Quinn, as appears in paragraph sixth of the defendant's bill of exceptions and that there was error on the part of the trial justice in directing the jury to construe the bond as a part of the lease.

There is error, the judgment of the case remanded to be proceeded justice of the peace is set aside and with according to the law.

PRESENTATION OF TORAH CELEBRATED AT UNCASVILLE

At the new community house in Uncasville on Sunday evening the Jews of Uncasville held the alavish entertainment and party to celebrate the presentation of the Torah, or the holy laws. For some time past plans have been made whereby the Jews of Uncasville could have a torah for their religious services and on Sunday evening this was brought to pass through the united efforts of all the Jewry of Uncasville. Credit for this great achievement cannot be given to any one individual as it was through concerted effort of the part of all the Jews of Uncasville that this was made possible. However the work done by Hill Chesmoff and Mrs. Sarah Frank deserves special mention. The committee is grateful to the directors of the Montville community house for the use of the fine hall which was given gratis.

POLICE INVESTIGATE BREAK AT FRANKLIN ST. STORE

The local police are conducting an investigation of the burglary Wednesday night at the store of the Johnson company, No. 107 Franklin street. The break was discovered Thursday morning and was immediately reported at police headquarters.

Radio equipment to the value of about $25 and about thirty pennies found in the store were taken. Three of five tubes in a radio set were taken and a pair of earphones and two radio jacks were also taken. The automobile accessories and tires in the store were not touched.

Entrance to the store was gained through a window in the alleyway.

HEALTH HAS BECOME IMPORTANT SCHOOL SUBJECT

Health has at last broken into the circle of the Three R's as an important school subject, says the weekly health bulletin issued by the state department of health, The Bulletin says:

Hovering on the outskirts for some years with credentials that could not be overlooked, health is now being admitted into the intimate circles of school curricula with the common consent of school authorities.

Health assumed this nation wide prominence when the spot light of publicity was flashed upon it as a result of the weighing and measuring campaign of the U. S. children's bureau, and it was discovered that over a quarter of its children were underweight and not physically fit.

Parents were appealed to, to lay a stronger foundation for health in the home, through the care of the little ones. But meanwhile something must be done for the great army of school children who had already failed to develop health habits and were in need of immediate attention. A solution of the problem was to interest the child in health. To do this, health must become one of the teaching subjects in the school. Not merely one of the three R's but a subject made so appealing to the child that the desire for it will become strong enough for it to function in his daily life.

Weighing and measuring of the children formed the starting point of interest in such a health program, and remain as guide posts to the health goal. Linked up intimately with this is the thorough physical examination which marks for special care those who are already handicapped by some physical defect. But the aim is to teach health to all, not only to the chosen few, to the end that child health as a whole may be improved and young people will have a better understanding of health through the acquisition of daily health habits.

In line with this health movement has grown a definite plan for teaching health. It must be made a fascinating game. There must be action and competition as in all games. Knowledge must come through a happy understanding of health, and so health books and health stories have made their appearance and teachers have shown originality in devising new methods of presenting this health subject. The time spent on "Hygiene" included in school curricula for many years has assumed new interest, from the kindergarten up through the grades. In the lowest grades this instruction is quite informal in character aiming to establish a few simple health habits such as cleanliness, eating the right food, and sleeping with windows open.

For the upper grades new hygiene books have appeared written by those who know that the appeal must be made to children through stories and familiar incidents in their daily life.

OVER 500 AT BIBLE AND MISSION CONFERENCE

Stirring addresses, inspirational talks and reports of value were given on Thursday at the all day Bible and missionary conference for Baptist churches of the northern section of eastern Connecticut, sessions being held at the Central Baptist church and at the Community house. The program was for men and women, the women meeting at the Central church and the men at the community house in the evening to hear the speakers and listen to reports, there being in attendance of about 300 at the men's conference and over 200 at the women's conference.

The session opened at 10.30 o'clock with a group conference, the speaker being Rev. C. S. Nightingale, subject, A Revealing Rather than a Revealed God. Following this Bible exposition there was a minister's conference during which Rev. P. C. Wright spoke on Visualizing Our Task.

Luncheon was served at noon and the afternoon session opened at 3.15 o'clock with another Bible exposition by Rev. C. S. Nightingale, who spoke on A Spiritual Church. Rev. P. C. Wright addressed the afternoon session taking for his subject Into all the World, during which he stressed the fact that we ought to look at our work as a divine undertaking and for a great cause and that the work done should never be measured by the dollar mark. We should look upon the money we use for this work as a method of our endeavor in other parts of the world, while we ourselves work here. In closing Dr. Wright spoke on the budget, reporting the funds turned in thus far and how they had been used, also stating what would be done with additional funds to be received during the fiscal year.

At 3.30 o'clock a conference on Group Responsibility was held under the leadership of Mrs. Orrin Judd and this was followed by one of the most stirring addresses of the conference, given by George A. Huntley, M. D., a Message from the Firing Line. Dr. Huntley had spent many years in China and his story of that country and the work being done by the church there was listened to most attentively.

At 6 o'clock the women enjoyed a banquet in the social room of Bushnell Chapel and the men went to the Community House to enjoy a banquet. During the evening simultaneous conferences on Challenge of World Problems were held, the men discussing the subject, Our Measureless Resources and the Women, Our Part. Both discussions bespoke our understanding and vital points and indicated the scope of the world work of the Baptist denomination.

During the evening the young people met in the primary room where the subject of Our Task was discussed the speakers being Drs. Wright, Huntley, Mrs. Judd, Rev. O. P. Campbell, Rev. E. E. Gates and Rev. H. B. Sloat.

The conference closed after the Bible exposition, The Nature and Place of Sacrifice in Christian Valuation, by Rev. C. S. Nightingale, the report of the conference and findings being omitted at this session.

SIX IN GROTON CAR CRASH THROUGH FENCE TO RIVER

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, Feb. 5.—While operating his automobile, a Hudson sedan, Judge of Probate Arthur P. Aanderson, of Noank, and five passengers, Michael Murphy, Mrs. Patrick Falvey and Mr. and Mrs. Michael J. Devine, all of Mitchell street, Groton, had a close call this afternoon when the automobile crashed through an iron fence on Thames street, Groton and dropped off an embankment eight feet, turned over three times and continued down an embankment of 15 feet to the approach of the Thames river. Mr. Anderson was rendered unconscious and Mr. Murphy got a badly sprained ankle. Mr. and Mrs. Devine and Mrs. Falvey escaped injury.

The car was wrecked for two wheels were smashed and the entire top of the machine was crushed in.

Mr. Murphy, Mrs. Falvey and Mr. and Mrs. Devine had been to the town hall, Poquonoc, where they attended to the filing of a legal document and when the transaction was completed, Judge Anderson volunteered to drive the men and women to their homes. While the machine was passing through Thames street, between Baker avenue and Latham street, and not traveling faster than 15 miles an hour, the wheels became wedged in the icy ruts of the highway, with the result that when an attempt was made to guide the machine from the depressions, it skidded badly. Mr. Anderson endeavored to get the car under control, but failed, the car continuing to the west of the highway and plunging through the fence dropped down the embankment, and with the passengers prisoners in it, rolled over three times before it came to a stop at the approach of the river. Mr. and Mrs. Devine and Mrs. Falvey were able to climb from the car, but Mr. Murphy was unable to leave his position, while Judge Anderson was unconscious. Assistance was summoned and Mr. Murphy was sent to a local private hospital, where an examination revealed his injury to be a sprained leg instead of a fracture, as was at first believed. In the meantime Judge Anderson had been taken from the car and quickly regained consciousness, later coming to this city where he made arrangements to have his car towed away.

BOY AND SLED SHOOT UNDER MACHINE

Henry Slowkowski, seven years old, of No. 51 Twelfth street miraculously escaped death about 5 o'clock Thursday afternoon when his sled dashed under an automobile on Twelfth St., near the child's home. The machine was owned and driven by Robert McNeely of No. 508 Boswell avenue.

Mr. McNeely was driving on Twelfth street when he saw the boy and sled suddenly shoot into the street. He tried to stop the machine and the boy attempted to stop the sled. In an instant the boy and sled had passed under the machine, missing the wheels.

The only injury the child received was a bruised right temple. Dr. Paul F. Gadle attended the boy and he was taken to his home. No blame was attached to Mr. McNeely who made a report of the accident at police headquarters.

MRS. WILLIAM P. ANDERSON DIES AT CINCINNATI

Mrs. Julia W. Anderson, widow of William P. Anderson, of Watch Hill and a Watch Hill resident and taxpayer, died at her winter home in Cincinnati, Jan. 29. Her husband, William P. Anderson was one of the pioneer cottagers at Watch Hill, the place of Niantic avenue extending to the ocean including two small ponds, reclaimed from a barren sandy waste, became one of the show places at the Hill. On the grounds at one time was the largest windmill and summer house and an elaborate toboggan slide was erected on one of the ponds. A number of years ago the house, while unoccupied, caught fire and was entirely consumed, the grounds later being leveled and graded. While coming to Watch Hill in recent years, Mrs. Anderson made her home at the cottage of her sister, the late Mrs. J. C. Skinner. She is survived by two daughters.

SUNDAY NIGHT MAY DISCLOSE THE FATE OF FLOYD COLLINS

Shaft is Being Sunk to the Level Where Collins is Imprisoned in Cave—Experienced Miners From the Kentucky Coal Fields Have Displaced Volunteer Workers—Tests With Wire Which Supplies Light to the Cave Prisoner Have Convinced Experimenters That Collins Was Alive at an Early Hour Yesterday.

Cave City, Ky., Feb. 6 (By the A. P.).—If Floyd Collins still clings to life after more than 175 hours in his Sand cave prison, he must wait until Sunday night or longer before his freedom comes. It will be that long before the shaft now being sunk can reach the level where Collins lies, it was agreed here tonight.

Despite all precautions which may be taken for safeguarding miners, no one has yet found a method of hastening the work.

The depth attained this evening stood at 18 feet and solid rock had not as yet been encountered. Boulders twice as large as a human head were encountered, but none was of greater size.

Volunteer workers have yielded their places to experienced miners from the Kentucky coal fields and various parts of the country. Frequent changes in shifts were ordered that no man remained an hour, another two hours, but no longer.

The rock and dirt, which earlier in the day had been lifted to the surface on a platform, is now being carried away in cans.

A constant stream of motor cars move along the road a greater part of the day. License plates from more than 20 states were counted in a single day. Crowds are attracted through curiosity or a genuine desire to aid.

Selfishness and unselfishness among the workers are found side by side and jealousies have threatened the very rescue of Collins himself. Charges have been made that one faction was inspired solely through desire to get the story which might befall them, but the tragedy has its heroes, too—Homer Collins and his brother Marshall, kinsmen of the victim; William B. "Skeets" Miller, diminutive staff correspondent for the Courier Journal; John Geralds, Collins' chum; Alfred Mattix, Central City miner, and others, all of whom forgot personal safety in their efforts to reach Collins and free him.

Today's developments were incidental to the slow sinking of the shaft.

A second appeal for financial aid to feed and clothe miners and other workers was issued. Andrew Collins, another brother, arrived from Kewanee, Ill., and set out to find another cave entrance. Military authorities and his father, Lee Collins, interfered with his plans to enter a crevice back of Sand cave.

The shaft itself was lowered a few feet and timbered. Dynamite was ordered to be used if blasting becomes necessary.

Tests with the wire which supplies the cave prisoner with light convinced experimenters that Collins moved when the light went out and consequently was alive at an early hour today, and physicians agreed that as far as food was concerned Collins might still be alive. His only liquid has been milk, coffee and whiskey, however, and the doctors agreed that he might die from lack of drinking water before he would starve.

The sky clouded tonight and rain threatened. Rain will considerably retard the mine work, it was declared.

DIPHTHERTIC CONDITIONS IN NOME UNCHANGED

Nome, Alaska, Feb. 5 (By the A. P.) The health board of Nome city, resting tonight, received reports indicating no practical change from yesterday, when 30 persons were ill with diphtheria in an epidemic that began late last month. The deaths remained at six. A cable-tele-radiogram was received from Dr. G. M. Magnuder, in charge in Seattle for the United States public health service, confirming press despatches stating that 620,000 units of anti-toxin will be rushed here by airplane despite opposition to this program by Scott P. Bone, governor of Alaska.

George S. Maynard, mayor of Nome, appointed Boatswain Thomas A. Ross, in charge here for the United States coast guard, to arrange for the landing of the plane, which is to be flown by Roy Darling of Fairbanks, Alaska, and Ralph T. Mackie of Anchorage, Alaska, and be to pick up the anti-toxin at Nenana on the Alaska railroad, 700 miles east of here.

Instructions to warn smugglers in the Yukon valley to guide the plane have been transmitted by the land telegraph lines of the signal corps of the United States army.

It is understood here that the plane will follow the dog trail down the Tanana and Yukon rivers on the ice, overland to Norton sound, an arm of Behring sea, and across the sound to Nome on the frozen sea water.

One case of diphtheria is reported in Elim, an Eskimo village 76 miles east of here, on the north side of Norton sound. A large school operated there by the United States government has been closed and the village quarantined.

WRITING HISTORY OF OLD STEAMER YANKTON

Boston, Feb. 6.—Another chapter in the history of the famous old steamer Yankton, whose varied career in the past 32 years has included service as private yacht, U. S. navy war vessel and freighter, will be written Feb. 12, when she will be sold at auction here. The auction will be held to satisfy salvage claims resulting from the stranding of the vessel in the lower harbor two weeks ago. The Yankton, once the private yacht of Sarah Bernhardt, saw active service in the Spanish war, and headed the cruise of the Atlantic squadron around the world in 1907.

The grounding of the steamer after her departure, in the face of one of the worst storms of the winter, for Halifax, N. S., is being investigated by a representative of the underwriters rain New York. Insurance of $15,000 was carried on the steamer and $50,000 on her cargo.

MAJOR GENERAL HINES TO LEAD THE INAUGURAL PARADE

Washington, Feb. 6.—Major General John L. Hines, chief of staff of the army, today was selected to lead the inaugural parade March 4. Those in charge believe 3,500 troops will be placed in line.

Thirteen governors have announced that they would not be represented in the procession. The governors of Vermont, Maine, Delaware, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Connecticut, Kentucky, New Hampshire and Colorado have accepted invitations to be present.

MIDSHIPMEN BEHIND IN SCHOLARSHIP WORK

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 6. — Fifty-one midshipmen were found so far behind in their scholastic work as a result of averages as determined by the mid-semester tests, that they will be compelled to resign from the Naval Academy, Rear Admiral Henry B. Wilson, superintendent of the institution announced today. The greater proportion of the delinquents are distributed among the fourth, or freshman class, and the third class. None of those forced to quit are members of the graduating class.

HEARING ON CHARGES OF MISCONDUCT OF JUDGE

Washington, Feb. 6.—The house judiciary committee today heard arguments from both sides in the case involving charges of official misconduct against Federal Judge William E. Baker, of the northern district of West Virginia, and expects to receive a report early next week from the sub-committee headed by Representative Dyer, republican, Missouri, which took testimony in West Virginia. No further hearings on the charges are planned by the committee.

Charles J. Schuck, attorney for District Attorney T. A. Brown of Judge Baker's district, who preferred the charges but was unable to attend today's hearing, conducted the argument for the complainant, emphasizing that the sole purpose was to determine whether probable cause existed for impeachment and that the case was not the outgrowth of a personal quarrel.

Counsel for Judge Baker, who listened to the arguments attentively, contended that there was no evidence of moral turpitude, attacked testimony of the complainants, asserted that the allegations emanated from the district attorney's office, "to get rid of Judge Baker," and charged that he was "framed."

NO PROPOSALS OF WAR DEBT SETTLEMENT FROM ITALY

Washington, Feb. 6.—Secretary Mellon today informed Chairman Borah, of the senate foreign relations committee, that the treasury had been advised of no proposals looking to settlement of the Italian war debt.

The secretary's letter, written in reply to a personal inquiry by the Idaho senator, said the debt, November 15, 1924, totalled $2,097,347,122.92, made up of cash advances prior to Nov. 11, 1918, amounting to $1,031,000,000, subsequent advances of $617,034,050.90, and accrued interest of $448,477,924.90. The Italian government had been credited with "amounts returned," in the sum of $164,852.84. Reports from Rome recently have indicated that the new Italian ambassador to the United States, Giacomo de Martino, might bring with him plans for a debt funding arrangement, but no official information to this effect has been received in Washington.

JURY DISAGREES IN CASE AFAINST HERBERT LYMAN

East Hampton, Conn., Feb. 6.—Unable to come to an agreement after an hours deliberation, a jury which heard the dispossess proceedings brought by H. G. Hills, administrator of the estate of the late Phoebe Simons against Herbert Lyman, farm hand, was discharged today and the case was continued for one week. Lyman who worked on the Simons farm for years without pay, has refused to leave the place claiming that he has talked with the spirit of Mrs. Simons several times and that she has told him to remain where he is.

The hearing was held before Justice of the Peace A. S. Lunts and there was not enough room in the town hall to hold those who wished to attend. Administrator Hills was represented by Judge Bertram Spencer while Judge Thomas Flodd represented Lyman.

Lyman disclosed today that he had received a letter from a woman in Buffalo offering to buy the Simons farm to permit him to remain there for the rest of his life.

DECISION RESERVED ON DOUBLE TRUCK ONE-MAN CARS

New Haven, Feb. 6—Decision was reserved by Judge Isaac Wolfe in civil superior court today upon the motion of the Connecticut company for a judgment on the pleadings in its suit against the city of New Haven, which grew out of the enactment by the aldermen of an ordinance prohibiting double truck one-man cars within the limits of the city.

CABLED PARAGRAPHS

Earth Tremors in Italy.

Ancona, Italy, Feb. 6.—Two earth tremors of considerable intensity were registered here this afternoon, the first one, at 1.35 o'clock, lasting four seconds, and the second, at 2.10, was of shorter duration. The shocks were felt in a number of the towns in this vicinity, but no damage has been reported.

Vote Confidence in Herriot.

Paris, Feb. 6 (By the A. P.)—The chamber of deputies this afternoon gave the Herriot government a vote of confidence, 326 against 315 on the wheat bill introduced yesterday to combat the increasing bread price in France. The bill provides for the obligatory declaration of all stocks of wheat and for the requisitioning of these stocks, if necessary.

RUM RUNNERS SEIZED OFF LEETE'S ISLAND

New Haven, Feb. 6.—The Elizabeth Wilson, a sixty foot power craft, carrying a cargo of 600 cases of alleged Scotch whiskey valued at $30,000 was seized by local federal prohibition agents off Leete's Island, near here, today and four members of the crew were arrested and held pending arraignment before United States Commissioner Bernard E. Lynch.

The men under arrest gave their names as Oscar Olson, 317 Flatbush avenue, Brooklyn; Frank Smith, Greenport, L. I.; Herman Johnson, New York city, and John Nelson, New York city. The men said that the captain of the craft was A. Frank Russell of Bell Harbor, L. I. He was not aboard the vessel at the time of the seizure.

The federal officers, tipped off to the location of the boat, proceeded to a point on the shore where they secured a rowboat and rowed out to the unsuspecting craft. The men, who were eating a late breakfast, were taken completely by surprise and made no attempt to escape. There were no firearms aboard the craft.

The federal men were of the opinion that the boat was awaiting its opportunity to unload the liquor at some point along the shore. The boat was brought to this city where it is now tied up at the city docks under guard.

Last December, the Elizabeth Wilson then reported to be from Greenport, L. I., was seized by a coast guard destroyer Jouett, 20 miles south-southeast of Block Island and was taken to New London. Two cases of liquor were found in the hold of the vessel at that time. The boat at that time was in charge of Captain Richard J. O'Connor, of Brooklyn, and there was but one man aboard.

NO EXTRA GUARDS POSTED FOR BANDIT CHAPMAN

Hartford, Feb. 6—Against the name of Gerald Chapman, the Wethersfield prison pen marked prisoner number 11167 today. The pen did not write latest arrived and most notorious felon ever held behind Connecticut prison walls. An official said that. But the pen did write the mentality and the physical fitness of the man behind the mask of silence, Gerald Chapman.

Tired and wan, steel barred and stone walled, Chapman has as yet had no word of communication with the outside world, not even a curiosity seeker has inquired of him at the gate. Only the law tightening for the prosecution, moving swiftly since the handcuffed bandit crossed the Connecticut line Thursday morning.

No extra guards are posted. None are needed according to the authorities. Chapman will not escape, they say. But they will not speak of Chapman's friends outside the walls, for the tight lipped prisoner has revealed nothing.

In regulation prison blue tunic and trousers Chapman sits quietly musing, except when answering questions, which he has been doing in a most gentlemanly manner, officials said.

Dr. J. B. Battey, prison psychiatrist, has examined the criminal minutely, recording his findings for the prison record but several days will elapse before the results of the examination arrive and Chapman's capabilities determined. Until then he will remain in his cell, excommunicated from the other prisoners, not eating with them, exercising twice a day with a guard in the cell room, an official said.

No one saw the prisoner today except the higher officials of the prison, the cell officer and the deputy warden. Chapman was photographed, his finger prints taken and his biography recorded but nothing of this is expected to be made public before the trial.

The appellate division of the supreme court, reversing a county court decision held unanimously that Simons was not entitled to an order compelling the union to reinstate him.

Doomsday Sect Is Not Dismayed

Leader of Group Declares That All Necessary Prophecies Have Been Fullfilled

Washington, Feb. 6.—A fair, springlike day in Washington, without a cloud in the sky, was not sufficient to shake the belief of the little group of former Seventh Day Adventists here, who, despite the appeals of the church, have virtually severed their connections with material things to await the end of the world.

Unflinchingly, E. Alpin, leader of the group, said today that the "period of probation ends at midnight tonight," adding that it would not be long thereafter until the coming of Christ.

That "Christ, the Son of the living God, will leave heaven after midnight

MITCHELL PLACES U. S. FIFTH IN AIR POWER

Washington, Feb. 6.—Brigadier General Mitchell, assistant chief of the army air service, today told the house aircraft committee that the United States ranks fifth in air power, being surpassed in this branch by England, Japan, France and Italy.

Representative Perkins, republican, New Jersey, the committee examiner, remarked that General Mitchell's statement, made near the end of today's hearing, conflicted with earlier testimony from Brigadier General Drum of the army general staff to the effect that the United States ranked second in aircraft.

This clash of views added to the maze of contradictions the committee has received over the controversy in army and navy circles as to the value of aircraft in war, which was further supplemented today by General Mitchell's reply to Secretary Weeks' demand for an explanation of recent testimony "seriously reflecting" on the war department.

The controversy today also reached the White House, where it was made known that General Mitchell, with a representative of a publishing company, had called on President Coolidge some time ago to ascertain his attitude toward the publication of a series of articles dealing with the efficiency of aircraft against battleships. The president's response at that time was that he had no objection to publication of the articles if the assistant air chief obtained the approval of his superiors. The articles subsequently were published, but officials of Secretary Weeks' office said today that, although General Mitchell had been ordered more than a year ago to prevent writings of such nature to the department for approval before publication, he had not done so in this instance.

Van Triki was shot and slightly wounded last October while attempting to escape after a purse-snatching escapade. The charge against him was dropped later. He was last taken into custody after breaking into a house in Marberth, Pa.

Don't Leave It To Chance!

Portia's father—a merchant—was used to the idea of guess, luck and accident. So much so, indeed, that it seemed natural to him to entrust the choice of his daughter's husband to three closed caskets and a lucky guess!

Nowadays, we do not transact business blindly—nor leave important decisions to chance. It is not necessary for us to gamble when we buy. Commodities are identified for us by trade-marks. Manufacturers go to the advertising columns to tell us about their products. Merchants describe their merchandise — price, quality and service.

By reading advertisements, we get a knowledge of goods and stores that we can depend on. Advertising reduces chance, in buying, to a minimum.

Read the advertisements in The Bulletin and get the benefit.

"PRESIDENT OF AFRICAN REPUBLIC" GOING TO PRISON

New York, Feb. 6—Counsel for Marcus Garvey, self-styled president of the "African Republic" and head of the Universal Negro Improvement Association, announced tonight that a writ of certiorari would be filed with the United States court, probably on Monday, requesting a hearing on his appeal.

Federal Judge A. N. Hand today denied Garvey's plea for three more days of liberty to permit his attorney to apply for the writ. Garvey will be on his way to the federal penitentiary at Atlanta by tomorrow afternoon, Assistant United States Attorney Mattuck said, where he was sentenced for five years on a charge of using the mails to defraud.

Armin Kohn, counsel for Garvey, said that "Garvey was anxious to remain here a few days before going to Atlanta, because he is head of an organization of 4,000,000 colored people, many of whom have investments in various enterprises with which he is identified, and he was anxious to arrange his affairs so as to protect their interests."

Federal authorities said that Garvey would be deported to Jamaica, his birth place, upon completion of his five year term in Atlanta.

WOULD BUY ENTIRE OUTPUT OF TWO DIAMOND MINES

London, Feb. 6. — The Capetown, South Africa, correspondent of the Daily Express quoted a South African nationalist member of parliament, as saying that an American syndicate, headed by J. P. Morgan, has offered to buy the entire output of the Beers and Premier Diamond mines for a year.

The offer, he divulged, was made a week ago, and the representatives of the Kimberley company immediately cabled European headquarters urging that they must bid higher or lose control of the market.

Cause of Defeat of Child Labor Amend'nt

Washington, Feb. 6.—The succession of adverse votes by state legislatures on the child labor amendment was attributed today by Senator Bruce, democrat, Maryland, to "the wave of popular resentment against federal interference with the proper rights of the states."

"By solicitation and insidious bribery," he told the senate, "the federal authority has persuaded the states to divest themselves of much of the power assigned by the constitution."

Senator Bruce referred to the eighteenth amendment as "the most disastrous, the most tragic, of all interferences with state sovereignty," and said the present policy of extending federal aid for good roads was like "the old pretzel system in the saloon," arousing "an unnatural thirst," and leading to extravagant expenditure.

COOLIDGE APPROVES HOUSE POSTAL PAY AND RATE BILL

Measure Was Considered at Cabinet Meeting Yesterday—Postmaster General New Laid the Views of His Department Before the President—Bill Would Make Increased Pay For Postal Employes Retroactive Only to Last July 1.

Washington, Feb. 6.—President Coolidge let it be known today that he approves the postal pay and rate increase bill drafted by the house postoffice committee.

Postmaster General New laid the views of his department with respect to the measure before the president at today's cabinet meeting, and it was described afterward as fairly satisfactory to the president.

Provisions of the house bill increasing rates so a sto bring in more than $60,000,000 annually and in making the increased pay for postal employes retroactive only to last July 1, are considered by Mr. Coolidge as distinct advantages over the legislation recently passed by the senate.

The house bill, on the other hand, was attacked as representing "guess work," and as having been drafted without due regard to its effects on business, in a statement issued today by Richard H. Lee, general counsel for the direct mail association of The Associated Advertising Clubs of the World.

Mr. Lee said it appeared that users of certain classes of mail would be required to pay a bonus, while other classes would be carried at a loss. The disruption to business in many lines, he said, would be great if the measure were passed as it stands, and many companies would be forced to realign their whole selling costs and sales methods.

The statement analyzed the parcels post, second class, postcards, and other sections, and declared there was no emergency to justify action without mature consideration.

TRIBUTE TO CAPTORS OF "BIG MIKE" RICCITELLI

Bridgeport, Feb. 6—After officially announcing from the bench today that "Bige Mike" Riccitelli, one of the most vicious outlaws Connecticut has ever known, died a suicide, while wounded by the riot guns of pursuers, Coroner John J. Phelan paid an extraordinary public tribute to the desperado's captors, Chief of Police William B. Nichols and Patrolman Patrick J. Flanagan, of Stratford.

"I feel the public generally ought to be profuse in gratitude to these two policemen," the coroner said following a brief inquest into Riccitelli's death, "and particularly to Chief Nichols, who has been investigating the case for months.

"Their actions should be commended in every way in ridding the community of so desperate a criminal—it is a God-send to the community.

"Taking it all in all, it may be reasonably assumed that the deceased died by his own hand. The officers were perfectly justified in law in doing as they did in the course of his arrest, and his capture was brought about by the diligent efforts of Chief Nichols and his associate Patrolman Flanagan, for which the community has much reason to be proud of them and thank them for so doing."

It was brought out in testimony reviewed before Coroner Phelan that Chief Nichols did not give the command: "Fire," until after he had twice shouted in a loud voice: "Throw up your hands!" And when Riccitelli, with loaded revolver aimed at Patrolman Flanagan, was recognized by the chief as the murdered, Policeman assailant and desperate hold-up man, known as the most notorious gunman in the east.

INJUNCTION AGAINST JITNEY ASSOCIATION

New Haven, Feb. 6.—Upon the application of Mrs. Margaret M. Wilson, of Meriden, administratrix, an injunction was granted by Judge Isaac Wolfe in the superior court today against Charles P. Cahill, of Hartford, Frank E. Lynch, of Willimantic and the Willimantic and Hartford Jitney Association, Inc.

By the terms of the injunction the defendants are enjoined from disposing of their stockholdings in the jitney association, and the corporation itself is enjoined from any stock sales until fruther order of the court. Funds of the defendants in banks and trust companies in several cities in the state are to be protected.

The injunction is part of a $10,000 damage suit instituted in the superior court by Margaret M. Wilson against the defendants. The plaintiff is the administratrix of the estate of the late Alice Wilson.

In the complaint presented to the court it was set forth that on December 26, last, Alice Wilson was a passenger in a jitney operated by the defendants on its lines. The woman is said to have boarded the jitney at Granby for the return trip to Meriden. On the way the machine struck a telegraph pole and the woman was thrown to the roadway. The injuries she is alleged to have sustained caused death on December 28, according to the complaint.

BLOSSOM CREW HAS REACHED RIO JANEIRO

The expedition, sent out by the Cleveland Museum of Natural History, explored all the islands of the Cape Verde group and thence proceeded to Bakar, Africa, tracing connections between life on the islands and the mainland. Their next stop was Trinidad island, a Brazilian possession, off Espirito Santo, where they made a complete survey for a new map.

As soon as the men recover they will proceed to Cape Town, the island of Ascension, the island of St. Helena, and the West Indies, after which they will sail for home, with a large collection of rare specimens.

THIEVES GET FURS VALUED AT $100,000 IN NEW YORK CITY

New York, Feb. 6.—Six armed and masked robbers today held up six employes of a United States bonded warehouse in West Eighteenth street and escaped with furs valued at $100,000.

Working with clocklike precision, the robbers lined the employes against a wall and while two of them kept guard the other three put the furs, all squirrel kinds, on a motor truck.

The warehouse is in a busy section and hundreds of persons passed the building while the robbers were working.

The furs had been taken to the building yesterday for appraisal.

LETTERS OF ROCKEFELLER AND BISHOP MANNING

New York, Feb. 6.—Letters of John D. Rockefeller, Jr., who yesterday pledged $600,000 to the fund to complete the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, and the response of Bishop William T. Manning accepting the gift, were made public today.

Mr. Rockefeller suggested that since "a large minority of the funds have come from members of other churches it would seem but fitting that, this large, friendly outside interest should be represented among the twenty-five trustees," who will be responsible for the erection, maintenance and management of the cathedral.

"Such a practical demonstration of the spirit of Christian unity for which the cathedral stands," Mr. Rockefeller wrote, "would give a tremendous impetus to religious tolerance and co-operative endeavor."

In his reply, Bishop Manning said that although he shared the hope of Mr. Rockefeller in regard to greater co-operation among denominations "the time has, however, not yet arrived when the different churches can function in one organization, and any attempt prematurely to force such an arrangement would retard the cause of unity rather than aid it.

"It was brought out in testimony reviewed before Coroner Phelan that Chief Nichols did not give the command: "Fire," until after he had twice shouted in a loud voice: "Throw up your hands!" And when Riccitelli, with loaded revolver aimed at Patrolman Flanagan, was recognized by the chief as the murdered, Policeman assailant and desperate hold-up man, known as the most notorious gunman in the east.

"This closer fellowship," the bishop's letter continued, "must come to pass, as it is quite evidently coming to pass, through the working of the spirit of God in the heart of all minds of all of us alike, rather than through formal methods of organization. I am quite sure you realize this, for the clause which you add to your gift makes no condition as to its acceptance and imposes no obligation as to its acceptance and imposes no obligation, legal or moral, upon the trustees of the cathedral to take any action."

OPIUM CONFERENCE IN WEAKEND CONDITION

Geneva, Feb. 6.—(By The A. P.)—Undermined by the withdrawal today of the American delegation, the international opium conference still stands tonight, but in a terribly weakened condition.

The conference, however, will continue, and presumably many of the delegations in attendance will sign the convention. But the fear is widespread that American withdrawal from the conference will take the pinch out of that body's efforts to conduct anti-narcotic warfare.

Stephen G. Porter, head of the American delegation, who will go to Paris tomorrow and sail from Cherbourg for New York on the steamer President Harding, February 12, tonight sent a note to Herful Zahl, president of the conference, that he is leaving for Geneva because he is convinced that the purposes for which the conference was convoked cannot be achieved; because there seems no likelihood of securing limitation of the growth of opium to medical and scientific needs, and because the impossibility of suppressing opium smoking in the Far East only serves to increase the difficulties of getting opium production restricted.

EXCITING PURSUIT BY POLICE IN BOSTON

Boston, Feb. 6—A busy street in the market district today was the scene of a pursuit in which three police inspectors with drawn revolvers took part. Maurice A. Gane of Lawrence, sought for illegal possession of dynamite, was the quarry and he surrendered after a short chase which was watched by an interested crowd. He was held for the Lawrence police.

Last October police officers who searched for Gagne at his home on a charge of automobile stealing found five stocks of dynamite. Gagne had disappeared and the first news of him came today when the police received a report that he was driving a truck in the market district. He said after his arrest that he had made two voyages to Hamburg, Germany, since October.

PROBING THE PRESENCE OF POISON IN MEDICINE

Columbus, Ohio, Feb. 6.—(By The A. P.)—At the end of the third day of official inquiry, solution of the mystery of the presence of poison in medicine prescribed for Ohio State University students tonight apparently was no nearer than when the investigation began.

Questioning of 18 additional students yielded little save identification of two who were on duty in the dispensary when capsules containing poison were issued to two of the five victims. Inquiry during the day also solved the appearance of a bottle of the poison, previously unaccounted for on the dispensary shelf.

Joseph L. Moss, Columbus, Ohio, was identified today as the student on duty in the dispensary at the same time Harold E. Gillig of Tiffin, Ohio, one of the victims, obtained his supply of capsules last week.

WILLIMANTIC

NORWICH BULLETIN
Willimantic Office, 771 Main Street
Telephone 1131
Office Hours: 9:30 to 12 m.; 1:30 to 6 p. m.

At a meeting of the executive committee on the proposed new hotel for Willimantic project, Louis H. Arnold was the first among the twelve group managers to turn in a completed group. This is one of the number that will compete for honors during the stock-selling campaign which will be launched the last of the month. James H. Fullerton, general sales manager, has requested that the group managers complete their groups immediately, and it is expected that the majority will be complete by the end of the week. The organization is in four divisions each having a division sales-manager. Mr. Arnold is a keyman in the division headed by R. B. Jordan, who was the first division manager to have his three group managers signed.

According to figures on the score board, Friday morning, 32 salesmen out of a necessary 108 were reported already enlisted. Mr. Arnold's group includes Charles H. Caswell, B. Eisenberg, Kenneth N. Hillhouse, Harold J. Mason, Robert O. Branch, R. I. Longley, Egbert A. Case, A. Wilson Greer and Eugene J. Cotter. One of the men at the meeting is said to have put the matter in a nutshell in saying "If Willimantic is ever to have this hotel, which she sadly needs, now is the time to get it; for if we don't put the proposition over now, we never can." It is time for Willimantic to do something big, and it is time for all citizens to subscribe their maximum amount and work diligently to make this proposition succeed." A great deal of enthusiasm has been aroused regarding the project.

The hearing on the proposed new jitney line will be held by the commission at the common council chamber in the Windham town building Friday morning, according to the notification issued by Henry P. Billings, secretary of the Public Utilities Commission. The hearing is on the application of Charles P. Cahill of Hartford and Frank Lynch of this city for a certificate to operate a jitney line over the following route; Railroad street to and over Main street, over Brick Top Hill to Windham Center, back to South Windham and then to Hyde's Corner in the town of Franklin and to Lebanon Center, all over state road. Applications for a jitney route from Willimantic to Norwich taking in this section of country, filed some time ago, were opposed both by the Central Vermont Railroad Co., and the Connecticut Company and denied, but this route has its terminus in the town of Lebanon and the petitioners set forth that, as mapped out, it does not conflict with the transportation company lines. It is expected that residents of The Windhams, who will benefit by the proposed new route, will appear at the hearing in its behalf. Mr. Cahill and Mr. Lynch will present a schedule of the proposed circuit with fares to specified points and running time.

In the town of Columbia, a consultation between the assessors and the board of relief has resulted in an agreement to put the land values at the figures established by the revision committee, which is about thirty per cent. more than it has been in the two years previous. This explains a large part of the increase in the valuation of the board of relief over the lists for 1923. According to the statistics completed for 1924, there were 329 lists handled by assessors, of which 263 are residents and 148 non-residents. There are nine more buildings listed than in the year previous, not including two that were destroyed by fire. The number of horses remained about the same, but the neat cattle dropped from 804 to 753, attributable to the number of farmers going out of the dairy business during the year. Following is the grand list as completed by the board of relief on the list for 1924: residents, $636,539; non-residents, $170,667. The list for 1924 stands: residents, $688,680; non-residents $207,531. About half a dozen persons appeared at the first meeting of the board of relief.

Following funeral services at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Wyckoff Wilson, in West Hartford Thursday afternoon, a service of committal was held at Gilead Cemetery for Mrs. Maria Way Ellis, Rev. William T. Hooper of St. John's church, Hartford, officiating. The bearers were Alfred, Charles H. and William E. Hammer, Frederick L. Way, Morgan Stedman and Francis Hammer, nephews. There were beautiful floral tributes.

The ten per cent. wage reduction which went into effect January 12 at the American Thread Company mills in common with a number of other manufacturing plants through New England, was discussed Wednesday evening, when representatives of the governing body of the textile workers' division of the American Federation of Labor met a number of employes from the Willimantic plant for that purpose. There seems to be a good deal of dissatisfaction with the conditions at present, but no decisive action was taken.

House Bill No. 278, introduced by Representative E. Linn Weatherhead amending Section 69 of the Charter of the City of Willimantic has been scheduled for a hearing before the judiciary committee at the state capitol next Wednesday afternoon at two o'clock. This bill, will, if passed, permit the police court judge to appoint the prosecuting attorney and the assistant prosecuting attorney from any political party. House Bill No. 859, introduced by Representative Charles B. Pomeroy will also have a hearing at the same time. This is a proposal to amend the charter of the city concerning the salaries of police court officials. Another is House Bill No. 357, introduced by Representative Weatherhead concerning certain mortgages on Windham land records.

Guest Day was observed at the meeting of Ann Wood Elderkin Chapter, D. A. R., Friday afternoon at the Congregational church house. Following an informal reception at three o'clock, a program under the arrangement of Mrs. Rose Fenton was given by Miss Lelia Church of Rockville. Miss Church's program included songs and monologues, the first part having to do with the period around 1800 and the last during the time of Marie Antoinette. She appeared in the costume of each period. The hostesses for the afternoon were Mrs. Nina Harroun, Miss Mildred Harroun, Mrs. Annie May Elliotte, Mrs. Rose Fenton, Mrs. Almeda French, Mrs. May Terry Van Zandt, Mrs. Doris Ward, Mrs. Lottie Graves, Mrs. Ruth Potter, and Miss Dorothy Gorton.

Ruth Goldstein, thirteen-year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. I. Goldstein of Hebron, had a narrow escape from drowning Thursday night coasting on the ice of the flooded meadow in Hebron known as Porter's Pond. In most places on the pond the ice has been found to be from fifteen to twenty-two inches thick but in the north part of the meadow a thin place over the channel proved untrustworthy and the child and the sled broke through, disappearing from sight. A number of other children and young people were skating and skiing nearby worked desperately to rescue her as she rose to the surface of the water. After going under twice, she was pulled in by Jared Tennant and Barney Fracchia.

At High School Lyceum Friday morning, the Sophomores and Seniors entertained the Freshmen. The sophomore band played several jazz numbers, "The Discovery of America," a comedy skit in broken Yiddish was given by Parker Smith and Laverne Pultz, and a reading from Robert Lewis Stevenson entitled "The Robinson Cruesoe Story" was given by Alice Yeomans. Roderick Cody played 'Harmony Kid," as a saxophone solo, and responded to an encore with "Lady Jazz." A group of seniors gave "Pokey Hunters," a burlesque on the famous Indian princess' rescue of Captain John Smith. The play was given after the Elizabethan manner, and in pantomime, the reading by Dora Beaulier. The arrangement was very effective, with Ethel Thompson appearing placarded as the curtain. Mabel Tillinghast and Grace Iskiyan as the footlights, Phyllis Moran as the situation. John Bowers as the scene, Stella Richipping as the brook and Betty Muirhead as the North Wind shaking the elm and pine trees (Helen German, Mary Kowal and Florence Moxon) most vigorously. The Sun, Helen Stiles, rose slowly and dramatically by means of step ladder, one of the very few properties employed. Two squirrels, Edith Fitzbolic and Margaret Persons, frisked around the trees in search of nuts, which they found (labeled) in the persons of Ivor Prater and Raymond Dwyer. Captain Smith was smitten by Pokey Hunters, the minute he fastened his (paper) eyes on her. John Johnson, as the captain, was approached with a warrant by Chief Powder Cox (Clarence Redman) bearing the inscription "Not on Your Life" and an answering manifesto was delivered by Rose Eagan as Pokey to her angry sire, just in time to save the good captain from decapitation in full view of the audience. After this she was presented that gentleman's heart, very large, in red paper. They were joined (with a leather strap) in matrimony by William Hernberg as the Holy Father, after which Marion Bowen, as Silence, reigned all over the place from a little green watering-can.

A very successful food sale was held Friday afternoon at Lincoln's by the members of St. Paul's Church.

A food sale was also held Friday afternoon from three to five by the women's society of the Congregational church in Windham.

Mrs. Jessie B. Ide of Danielson entertained Thursday and Friday and Mrs. Henrietta Curdts, of Meriden, who, with Mrs. Gates, Mrs. Lottie Gilman and Mrs. Eva Adams, presiding and past grand chiefs, visited Clover Temple, No. 9, Sisters of Pythias, in Norwich Thursday evening.

Mrs. Hattie Ellis of Gilead, who has been spending the winter in town with Mrs. J. C. Randall was among those to attend the funeral of Mrs. Maria Ellis in Hebron Thursday.

The death of Miss Julia White, 54, a resident of South Coventry, occurred Thursday morning at the Hartford hospital. Miss White was born in South Coventry, the daughter of Nathan C. and Sarah (Yeomans) White. She is survived by her mother, a brother, Fred S. Since reading a few days ago that a silver dollar of the issue of 1799 was refused in a collection of such coins for a large sum, the possessor of a similar earth...al has become of great interest to John Nauges, motorman-conductor on the South Coventry branch of the Connecticut company, who has carried one of that date as a "lucky penny" for a long time.

HENRY H. HANDFIELD IS NEARING YOKOHAMA

A radiogram received from him Thursday by his father, A. R. Handfield of Willimantic, brought the news that at the time the radiogram was sent, Mr. Handfield had already travelled 3100 miles on the high seas, with 1128 more miles to cover before reaching Yokohama. They expected to land Friday or Saturday of this week. Weather conditions are reported of the best for this time of the year.

DANIELSON-E. THOMPSON GIRLS GUESTS OF WORLD WIDE GUILD

Willimantic, Feb. 6—World Wide Guild girls of the Baptist church held a rally in the church parlors Friday evening and entertained two groups from the Danielson Guild and representatives from the new guild in East Thompson. The rally was preceded by a dinner served by a committee of which Miss Myrtle Hawkins was chairman, with Miss Ines Paton, Mrs. Gertrude Carlson and Miss Ellen Potter. The decorations were paper flowers in brilliant colors made by Miss Hawkins. Songs and cheers were given by the different groups.

After the opening hymn and invocation by Mrs. Ethel Nichols, a speech of welcome was given by Miss Lillian Larkin. Miss Ethel Wells of the Danielson group, spoke on the purpose of the rally, outlining the two days campaign which is being held. This was followed by a three act play, Chee Moo's choice, given by the Danielson Junior World Wide Guild and introduced by the Guild Counselor, Miss Grace Spalding. This play is the one given by that group at Wangum lodge, Hartford, last fall, Friday night's being its fifth production. The play centered around the difficulty of every average college girl who has concealed from her friends what she considers a disgrace of having an aunt who is a missionary in China, but to whose charge a young Christianized Chinese girl just entering that college is specially recommended by this same aunt. When the American girl attempts to explain her philosophy of life "get as much out of it as you can and for pity's sake don't be a prig about it," the little Chinese proved surprisingly fine and the play ends with Joan going off to China herself as the wife of a medical missionary. All the parts were well taken. Winifred Hammett gave an excellent interpretation of the part of Chee Moo. The cast follows: Chee Moo, Winifred Hammett; Joan, Florence Moran; Arelia, Cora Brown; Christine, Beatrice Beckett; Phoebe, Vera Franklin.

Rev. Edward H. Smith, a former resident of Franklin and Norwich, a present missionary to China, who is spending his sabbatical year in this country, spoke on his work in China, concerning the situation there at present. He said that it is the World War, Christianity, and the 20th Century that has brought about a condition in that country today in which the armies themselves don't know what they are fighting for. Each one thinks it is fighting for a republic; they all want freedom like everybody else. He told of such a happening when he himself was forced out of bed at half past two in the morning and compelled by courtesy to turn the guest room in his own house over to the chief magistrate of such a town, while the latter's ten attendants camped out for the rest of the night on the floor of his study.

COLUMBIA

A very interesting lecture on Orchard Care and Management was delivered by W. H. Darrow, extension fruit specialist of the Connecticut Agricultural College, at Yeomans hall, Columbia, Tuesday evening, before an appreciative audience of fruit growers of the town and vicinity. Mr. Darrow was thoroughly acquainted with his subject, illustrating his lecture with 70 stereopticon views. The subjects of Fertilizing, Pruning, Grafting, Spraying, Marketing and Storage, were fully discussed. Views of good and poor orchards, spraying machines and operations, storage houses, also properly pruned trees were shown and described. Much interest was manifested by the audience, as was shown by the questions which they were invited to ask. E. E. Tucker, county agent, was present, and ably assisted Mr. Darrow in the delivery of the lecture. The result desired is the production of finer and better fruit, and therefore larger financial returns to the grower, which was demonstrated could be accomplished by comparisons of figures given by the lecturer.

State highway department employes have been engaged in opening up the culverts on the state roads, but so far, it has not been necessary as no rain has fallen. The present is not an ideal time to lay in a fuel supply as the traveling is so bad, but some residents on the green were obliged to have firewood, sawed Tuesday, the extreme cold weather having exhausted their supply.

Some persons who are obliged to use all the roads in town, find it convenient to have several vehicles, as an automobile when the roads are fine, a buggy when they are rough, a covered wagon when it rains, and a sleigh when the roads are covered with ice.

Members of Columbia grange have received folders giving the lecturer's programs in detail, for the coming year, also a list of the 103 members of the grange. At the meeting Wednesday evening the lecturer presented an interesting program including a roll call, to which the members responded by naming some current event. There was also a discussion on the subject, Does the Man That Pays the Bills Have Greater Trials Than the Woman That Keeps the House?

GOSHEN

Eighteen-inch ice was being harvested from the old mill pond, Thursday, quite a ways up stream in a sheltered cove, (a place once famous for its eels and pickerel). The ice has nearly frozen to the bottom and is three feet thick.

For a week now the recent thaw that froze, has made very slippery traveling, and there is not much doing about the farm for a team that is not sharp shod. Chains are required for automobiles. Many a person has been seen very suddenly involuntarily to dance a breakdown, endingup with what looked like a collapse.

Five reels of the impressive moving pictures on the life and works of the great Bible character, Moses will conclude the wonderful story of the great law giver at the local Young Men's Christian Association tomorrow, Sunday at 4 o'clock. These reels will include the touching record of the Passover when so many were slain; the exodus and the wonderful Red Sea miracle when the waters were divided and the Israelites under the leadership of Moses passed over safely; the feeding of the people with manna and quails in the wilderness when they were sore pressed with hardships and hunger; the unusual scene at Mount Sinai, when Moses received the ten commandments from the Lord, and the making of the golden calf by Aaron. The concluding film pictures the very touching scene of Moses death previous to which the people repent and Moses goes up into the mountain to pray for forty days and nights, afterward he smites the rock at Kadesh and water gushes forth, and he also places a fiery serpent upon a pole, and everyone who looks upon it is saved from the terrible plagues. The whole story is replete with exciting and impressive scenes that make the matchless narrative one of profound impressiveness. Admission is free to adults of both sexes and children may come if attended by their parents or guardians. Hugh Kinder will furnish appropriate music for the pictures and also render vocal solos.

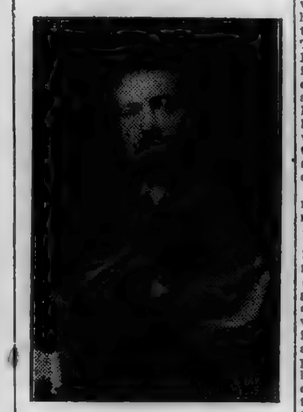
Strand Theater

Neglected Women at the Strand Sunday Monday and Tuesday is a stirring drama that deals with the most important phase of human relationship—marriage—in an intimate, open and vivid way. The story of a woman who betrays her husband because she thinks he is neglecting her and then, because of her love for him, ruins her own reputation in the eyes of the world to save his life. Every one of your emotions are going to be satisfied with this picture. It has everything that means big entertainment. Seena Owen heads a splendid cast in Neglected Women and in this feature you are going to say she does the best of her brilliant career. It appears each succeeding picture which Kenneth Harlan stars in outdoes his predecessors. At least after you see this young matinee idol romp through Yankee Speed which is the companion feature at the Strand on the above days you will have to admit that, in his particular line, he is without a peer. Apparently there is nothing he won't undertake to give his audience a thrill, regardless of the hazards. Yankee Speed is well named. It is action from beginning to end. The story will be recognized as an adaptation for the famous story, The Mysterious Castle. It would be unfair to divulge the mystery story. Go see it. Its exceptional. A Joe Rock comedy will be shown on the same program and Sunday night only The Riddle Ridge serial will be shown. Today for the last time Pearl White in Perils of Paris and Franklin Farnum in The Gambling Fool, will be on the screen continuous from two to ten thirty.



Fritz Kreisler in New London

It is said that "to be really great in any one thing a person must excell in several." Kreisler is a living example of that sort of "greatness." His remarkable versatility is astonishing. He studied medicine seriously and at one time, in spite of his decided musical talents, was uncertain whether or not he should become a physician and follow in the footsteps of his then famous father. Later, although he does not talk much about it, Kreisler had a distinct ambition to become a painter and while in Paris studying violin with Massard, he was also working at Julians, the most famous atelier of its time. There are in this country several well known artists who knew Kreisler during this period and remember him as of much more than ordinary talent. Harold Bauer, the great pianist, maintains that Kreisler lost to the world a supreme pianist when he chose definitely to abandon that instrument for the violin.

Lyceum Theater, New London

Michael Mindlin and his company of distinguished players are to present his strong love play, Houses of Sand, by C. Marion Burton, at the Lyceum theatre, New London, before the coming New York run, for the matinee this afternoon and tonight. It is under the stage direction of Daniel V. Arthur.

Bickford, leading man with Alice Brady in Zander the Great; Naoe Kende, beautiful American born Japanese girl, supported Mrs. Fiske for Belasco; John Behn, leading man for Helen Cahagan in Dreams for Sale; and Albert Benister important support for Gilda Varesi in Enter Madame.

Connecticut College Concert

Pablo Casals, the great Spanish 'cellist, who comes to New London next Monday to play at Bulkeley auditorium has for many years been a favorite at the Spanish court. Some years ago when he played before the queen, she asked him to allow her to keep his bow for a few days. It was returned with a glorious sapphire set in the handle, a sapphire taken from one of her bracelets. These words accompanied it; "Would that this gem could match in beauty and brilliance a single one of the notes that fall from your 'cello."

The auditorium is an ideal setting for such a concert, and not to hear Casals Monday night is missing an opportunity which cannot be duplicated for a long time.

SPECIAL MUSICAL SERVICE CENTRAL BAPTIST CHURCH

Pietro Mordella, known everywhere as the celebrated accordionist and the leading piano accordion virtuoso of New England will play special selections in the Central Baptist church on Sunday evening, Feb. 8th.

He showed such remarkable ability that he was placed in the hands of the most competent music teachers and soon became the greatest piano accordionist in this country.

His repertoire seems inexhaustible. Not only does he present popular music, but selections from the grand opera, standard concert music and sacred selections.

PALACE

Amateur plays may come and amateur plays may go—some of them are classes in vraious positions by a critical and fickle audience. Seldom do they rank in the line with the famous Ziegfeld Follies or similiar New York productions and yet it is a safe bet when we say that there is about one hundred more per cent enjoyment in these local attempts at performing. This fact was proved last year when Robert O. Fletcher Post, No. 4, American Legion, presented one of the finest performances that has ever been staged by a cast of local amateurs. Kathleen was such a "hit" that the local post, encouraged by the extravagant praise, decided to make another stab at the theatrical field and selected another John B. Rogers production.

Bimbo, a recent release of the above mentioned producers, has been under rehearsal since last Wednesday. The cast while not entirely selected is fast taking the form of one of the hugh revues that we read about. Certainly no other production ever boasted of more beautiful girls of honest to goodness talent than Bimbo. In a day or two the cast of principal roles will be announced and some interesting news regarding the various characters may be looked for. It is the pleasure of amateur productions to bring out the new and otherwise undiscovered talent that lurks in every town and city and on the other hand the old timers are always on hand to assist with the more difficult parts of the play. Some new and old talent will be seen in this new spectacular comedy which is to be presented at the Palace on the evenings of February 10 and 11.

Broadway Theater

That women, crazed for social position, will sometimes drag their husbands right into financial disaster, is a point brought out by Cecil B. De Mille in his newest production for Paramount, The Golden Bed, which will be shown starting Sunday at the Broadway theater.

Lillian Rich, the latest screen "discovery" to make a bid for stellar honors under De Mille, and Vera Reynolds whom that director brought into prominence in Best of Clay, play out a verbal duel, wage a battle of wits for social mastery. For once the men in the families are mere pawns in te game.

The Golden Bed was written for the screen by Jeanie Macpherson from the novel of the same name by Wallace Irwin. Rod La Rocque has the leading man's role in the production. We first find him a struggling young candy maker who, by dint of hard work, becomes the owner of a large chain of stores.

Flora Lee Peake (Lillian Rich,) hope of a poor but proud family who before young Holtz, played by La Roque, had made his money wouldn't have anything to do with him, now sees a way to retrieve the family fortune—become Mrs. Holtz.

The other sister (Vera Reynolds,) however, has been in love with Holtz from the very beginning and it is when she sees the possibility of losing him that the fun begins.

De Mille has made a picture of this Irwin novel that is going to prove more popular than anything he has ever attempted before, excepting, of course, The Ten Commandments.

The three aforementioned players all have featured roles in the cast of the picture as have Warner Baxter, Theodore Kosloff and Julia Faye.

Several short subjects make this an outstanding program.

Breed Theater

This feature shows Norma reunited with her erstwhile leading man, Eugene O'Brien, and the pair wend their way through a sequence of highly emotional love scenes which reach a climax in a thrillingly realistic yacht wreck.

The story, written by C. Gardner Sullivan, reverses the usual theme of sacrifices by parents for their children, and submits the problem of a girl who sacrifices herself on the altar of marriage to save her father from financial ruin and disgrace.

Though she hates the man, she marches up the church aisle amid a throng of society friends and becomes his bride, and they launch upon a honeymoon with hardly a cheery prospect in view.

It is good entertainment, with Norma and Eugene at their best. Others in the cast include Matthew Betz, Edwards Davies, Winter Hall, Stella di Lanti, Murdock MacQuarrie, Neal Dodd, E. H. Calvert and Louis

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

Mention should have been made in recent items in this column concerning the proposed addition to Killingly High school that it is intended that a swimming pool be included in the plans for the structure. Danielson has no such convenience and it may reasonably be supposed that an arrangement could be effected for the use of this pool not only by members of the student body of the school and the alumni, but also by the town's people, under suitable regulation. The campaign for the gymnasium and all the feature that it is proposed that it contain continues to have the enthusiastic support of the workers in the cause and they have enlisted the interest and sympathy of members of the town school committee and many citizens.

Automobiles, trolleys and horse-drawn vehicles figured here during Friday in bumping and scraping episodes for which the slippery going was to be blamed. None of the collisions was of any importance, or resulted in any material damage, simply illustrating that it is something of a job right here in the borough these days to operate a motor vehicle and keeping it from doing things one does not want it to do. The much traveled ways of the borough are surprisingly ice compared to state highways leading out of town. The truck lines are bars of ice and snow for miles. During Friday, additional sections of them were cleared up as a result of the warm sunshine. Here in the borough there was no great improvement in conditions, though some gain was made on the flint-like ice that covers the street.

Attorney Louis A. Woisard, collector of personal taxes in the town of Killingly, has given notice of his impending collection of taxes of this class due on February 1. Attorney Woisard has issued notices as to when and where in the town during the month of March he may be reached for settlement of these tax assessments. There should be more than ordinary promptness this year on the part of many in paying these taxes in view of the fact that many residents of the town have been prosecuted during the past few monthsms for non-payment of overdue personal taxes and other similar prosecutions are pending.

Postmaster and Mrs. E. H. Keach received notice Friday morning of the death in a Providence hospital during the preceding night of Mrs. C. Fred Waterman for years a resident of Putnam and with many friends in Danielson and vicinity. Mrs. Waterman died following an operation for appendicitis. Mrs. Waterman's hospital, dead a number of years, was with his brother, Percy, also now deceased, the founder of the Waterman Worsted company, at Putnam, and prior to organizing that company they were as agent and superintendent, with the French River Textile company, now the Beachmont Worsted company plant, at Mechanicsville.

There was an awful temptation for many people to quit work, at least for the day that those predictors of the end of the world on Friday set up for the nation to consider. Here in Danielson the prediction didn't make much of an impression. It did not stir up near as much timidity as the re-recent total eclipse of the sun, nor likely not as much perturbation as will be cause by the fact that next Friday will come on the 13th of the month.

DR. S. B. OVERLOCK SUES BANK TO RECOVER SECURITIES

Putnam, Feb. 6.—Through his attorney, Arthur M. Brown of Norwich, Dr. Seldon B. Overlock of Pomfret, surgeon for the Day Kimball hospital, has brought suit against the First National Bank of Putnam, and its receiver, George M. Coffin, for $72,600, the market value, according to the petitioner, of bonds and other securities which had been left at the bank for safe keeping for sale or reinvestment, and which was in the bank's possession when it closed its doors on Aug. 11, 1924.

This is the largest claim that has been filed against the bank. Three weeks ago J. F. Carpenter as attorney for the Putnam Woolen Company filed a claim amounting to $41,000 for bonds and securities left with the bank, and for which it holds receipts of G. Harold Gilpatric, then cashier of the bank. Dr. Overlock, plaintiff in this action, also holds receipts of Gilpatric as cashier.

These claims were rejected by Receiver Coffin under direction of the United States comptroller, and the plaintiff asks that they be paid or the amount certified to the comptroller to be paid in the due course of administration.

This suit as well as that of the Putnam Woolen company is brought and is returnable in the superior court of Windham county, but the suits may be removed to the United States district court. Searls, Russell & Bradford, counsel for Receiver Coffin, have filed a motion for transfer in the Woolen company suit to the federal court.

Paragraphs three, four and five of the petition read as follows:

3. On or about March 1, 1924, the plaintiff delivered to said First National bank the following securities: $10,000 par value of bonds of the French republic, 7 1-2 per cent external loan; $10,000 par value of bonds of the Dominion of Canada, 5 1-2 per cent, due 1934; $6,000 par value of bonds of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad company, Harlem River first mortgage 4's; and $46,000 par value of United States Liberty loan bonds of varying issues and amounts, and received from said bank receipts therefore copies of which are hereunto annexed marked exhibits, A, B and C.

4. At the time of the delivery of said securities as alleged in paragraph 3 the plaintiff instructed the then cashier of said bank, G. Harold Gilpatric, as such cashier, to convert said securities into cash at the then market value and to invest the proceeds in United States Second Liberty Loan bonds, and deliver the same to the plaintiff, which the said G. Harold Gilpatric, as such cashier, agreed to do.

5. The market value at the time of the delivery of the securities, so delivered to said First National Bank of Putnam, Conn., by the plaintiff as alleged in paragraph 3 was $72,500.

6. Early in August the said First National bank was forced to close its doors and suspend business because of the defalcations of its said cashier, G. Harold Gilpatric, and on the 13th day of August, 1924, George M. Coffin was duly appointed receiver of said bank by the United States comptroller of the currency, and ever since said time has been and now is acting as said such receiver, duly authorized and qualified.

Other paragraphs in the petition allege that the plaintiff has never received the bonds or their value, and that the claim was duly filed but was rejected by the receiver.

The plaintiff claims $80,000 damages, a judgment allowing its claims, and "such relief as in justice and equity may appertain."

The receipts given by the bank are similar to the following, which is marked Exhibit A: "Received of S. B. Overlock, Pomfret, Conn., the following securities for safe keeping; $10,000 bonds, Republic of France, 7 1-2 External Loan, for sale at market and proceeds to be invested in the Second U. S. Liberty Loan bonds. Name of — S. The First National Bank of Putnam; by G. Harold Gilpatric, Cashier.

"This receipt must be surrendered when securities are withdrawn. The responsibility of the bank for securities deposited is limited to the faithful observance of due care and diligence."

LOTTERY TICKET WINNER DISAPPOINTED AT NORWICH

(Special to The Bulletin)

Danielson, Feb. 16.—The lottery ticket game has received an awful wallop in this town, where scores, possibly hundreds, of people have been buying tickets every week. The crash in the lottery game here has all come about because a Dayville man recently won $2,000 and failed to collect it. Not much is being said about the matter except in a few small circles interested in the lottery as purveyors of tickets, or in one intimate way or another.

The man who was the holder of the supposedly lucky ticket turned it in for collection. It was forwarded in the regular way to a Connecticut city, believed to be Norwich, but no money came in return. Subsequently telephone conversations resulted in an appointment being made for the winner and a local agent to meet the lottery representative who was to pay over the cash. The pair from this town journeyed to the appointment, but the man with the money failed to appear. Likewise there have been no lottery tickets on sale here this week. The game appears to be up in Danielson. Hitting the winnings for a roll such as $2,000 was too much for the promoters and they flunked out. And that's that—until the baseball pools get going in April!

FAREWELL DINNER GIVEN BY AMBASSADOR KELLOGG

London, Feb. 6 (By the A. P.).—The king and queen and a distinguished company of Britons and Americans were the dinner guests this evening of Ambassador and Mrs. Kellogg at Crewe house, their London residence and one of the few remaining mansions built on a grand style that still stand in modern Mayfair. Mr. Kellogg is leaving soon to succeed Charles Evans Hughes as secretary of state.

The gathering at the American envoy's abode was significant in more than a social sense, for it is seldom their majesties break bread at other tables than their own, and there is no recent instance of their having attended a formal dinner at the home of any diplomat assigned by a foreign nation to their court.

With the king and his consort at the Kellogg board sat the head of his majesty's government, Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin, and the primate of his church, the Archbishop of Canterbury, with both their wives. From the continent two prominent Americans crossed the English channel to attend the dniner—Myron T. Herrick, American ambassador to France, and Seymour Parker Gilbert, agent-general for reparations payments. Mrs. Gilbert accompanied her husband.

In all there were thirty-two guests.

POETRY

THE OLD FAMILIAR FACES.

I have had playmates, I have had companions.
In my days of childhood, in my joyful schooldays—
All, all are gone, the old familiar faces.

I have been laughing, I have been carousing;
Drinking late, sitting late, with my bosom cronies—
All, all are gone, the old familiar faces

I loved a Love once, fairest among women;
Closed are her doors to me. I must not see her—
All, all are gone, the old familiar faces

I have a friend, a kinder friend has no man;
Left him, to muse on the old familiar faces.

Ghost-like, I paced round the haunts of my childhood.
Earth seemed a desert I was bound to traverse,
Seeking to find the old familiar faces.

Friend of my bosom, thou more than a brother,
Why were not thou born in my father's dwelling?
So might we talk of the old familiar faces—

How some they have died, and some they have left me,
And some are taken from me; all are departed—
All, all are gone, the old familiar faces.

—Charles Lamb.

THESE ARE GHOSTS.

Not shadowy, pale-featured forms that creep
Through gloomy churchyard damp with leafy mould;
Or roam, poor restless ones, while good folk sleep,
Down long white roads moon-lit and bleaky cold.
But these are born of dreams and memories,
There is a haunting sweetness in their gaze;
Grave, gentle, or with laughter in their eyes,
They speak to me of far-off yesterdays.

Voyaging winds, that meet and lightly pass
Over gray, shifting sand-dunes by the sea;
Dull drift of rain upon the soundless grass,
A bird's low call—an April apple tree;
These are the ghosts that bring again the fears,
Dim hopes and faded joys of all the years,

STORRS COMMUNITY HOUSE AND CHURCH.

Connecticut Agricultural college is doing a most important work for the young people of this state who are agriculturally inclined. It is an institution that has grown because it has demonstrated its worth to the commonwealth. Opportunities offered there are those by which hundreds of the youth of Connecticut are profiting. That they are appreciated and go far at least toward meeting the requirements is evidenced by its steady growth.

As a state institution it is to be expected that the general assembly will make necessary provision for the continuation and enlargement of its work, including the necessary buildings, but when it comes to providing a church plant and a community house for meeting the needs of that community, without as well as within the institution, the state can take no part. That is outside the province of state government.

Inasmuch as the college enrollment has been doubled every ten years till it now totals 500 it is apparent that the church built in 1846, without modern heating facilities and accommodating but 200, does not meet the requirements, and with no community house it is evident that there are many organizations outside of the college proper which find their activities badly cramped, if not almost prohibited.

The situation is clearly one that must be met by public response and it is gratifying to note that there is a strong sentiment from all corners of the state to provide the modern church and community house that are so much needed in that community made up largely of young people. The response must be regarded as an appreciation of the fact that there is a desire to meet the church and community needs at Storrs rather than to encourage a neglect of them. The proposed new buildings, involving an outlay of $300,000, are none too large where an institution finds its enrollment doubled every decade.

INCREASING FIRE LOSSES.

Statistics which are kept in most of the states and by interested organizations show that in spite of the disclosures of the needless waste of life through automobile accidents they continue to occur with distressing frequency and without decrease in numbers. Are we getting so hardened to this situation that we neither fear the danger nor give the proper protection in the highways? Is it getting to be a habit to disregard the lessons which such accidents and fatalities teach, or the many other general lessons which are taught by the losses and wastes?

It is thoroughly understood that this is a growing country, but while we are expanding and developing there stands out prominently good and sufficient reasons why we should endeavor to check the growth of the waste.

In this connection the fire losses for the year 1923 throughout the country furnish food for much thought when it is reported that they reached the huge total of $535,372,782, or a new high record for the world, according to the national board of fire underwriters. This likewise shows a tendency in the wrong direction. Even though there is more property at risk, the efforts that have been put forth in behalf of prevention and the repetition from year to year of the mounting cost of the national ashpile should have sufficed to create sufficient reaction as to turn the losses downward instead of upward.

Instead of that we find the fire losses running higher just the same as the automobile killings. For the past five years the average fire loss has exceeded $460,000,000 and the worst of it is that the greatest contribution to that loss and waste came in the last instead of the first of the five years. When it is declared that such losses influence the cost of living to a marked degree attention is called to a point which many may overlook, but one in which most everyone is quite deeply interested. That waste boosts costs is something which certain people are exceedingly slow in recognizing.

THE FORBES CASE.

When the sentences of two years in prison and a fine of $10,000 were imposed upon Charles R. Forbes, a former director of the veterans' bureau and John W. Thompson, a contractor, following conviction for crimes committed against the government through the position held by the former, there was no reason to regard them as at all excessive. There remains the appeal to be heard before the case can be actually disposed of, but the testimony that was produced against the accused was of such a character as to indicate the outcome, and particularly so in view of the fact that they failed to take the stand and testify in their own defense.

That they were not obliged to is fully understood, but the fact that they didn't must have made quite as much of an impression upon the jury as it did upon the judge, who referred to it in imposing sentence.

This doesn't appear to have been a case where money was lost because of the hurry that goes with war preparations. It was an instance where confidence was placed in a man to administer a most important duty. It was a time when he was not only entrusted with the placing of big contracts involving much money, but where it was expected that he would not only look after the government's interests but also those of the veterans, who were in need of the hospital treatment which the government was anxious to furnish.

It was most unfortunate that the unfitness of the man for the office of bureau director was not known before his appointment. With a fine war record there was ground for believing that there would be a continuance of well rendered service under his direction but it required only a short time to learn the contrary. The record is a most inglorious one. It overshadows whatever might have been done during the war, but from the conviction there cannot fail to be gained the lesson that those who dabble in what doesn't belong to them must expect to pay for it. Forbes, Thompson and others will probably not get the chance, but are not likely to resort to such practices in the future.

STOPPING WASTE OF WATER.

When communities grow water consumption can be expected to increase, but the growth of a city doesn't necessarily mean that there should be a toleration of water wastage, or that steps to lessen should not be taken as one of the means to insure them a larger supply of water.

Beverly, Mass., with a population of 22,561, is a community which pumps water for its water supply. In 1889 it pumped 719,000 gallons a day. Ten years later it pumped 966,417, in 1914 the amount was 1,836,000 gallons and in 1924 it pumped 1,450,898 gallons daily.

This reduction in the amount of water pumped is not due to the fact that Beverly has been losing its population. On the other hand it has been steadily gaining, but while the number of users of water has been increasing Beverly has been putting on meters. The result is that there has been a decrease in consumption, a checking of waste, and even though the water users there are paying less than under the old flat rate they are turning in as revenue a total of over $77,500 from water.

Beverly is not threatened with a water shortage so far as known. It has been adding to its supply by the reduction of consumption through the use of meters. It has been eliminating the wastes, and while it has been following in the footsteps of others it has been setting an example which other communities, including Norwich, have good reasons for following.

Why should there be a toleration of abnormal consumption of water, involving huge outlays for additional facilities, when so much relief can be obtained by the checking of the costly waste?

SETTLING DEBTS.

That the debt talk between France and this country should have prompted some questions relative to Italy was the natural consequence. Italy obtained a loan of about two billion from this country, and Italy, like France, was obliged to stand the brunt of much hard fighting. Under the conditions it was bound to take time to get its financial situation straightened out, but what appears to be good progress has been made in that direction.

And yet there has been nothing heard from that country as to debt adjustment. Uncle Sam hasn't been pushing the matter with any country. We are ready to talk business, as the other countries know, but we have waited for the debtor nations to come forward with their suggestions as to how the money should be paid, based on the financial conditions under which they are struggling.

Inasmuch as Italy has not taken this step there was bound to be interest in the announcement that the new Italian ambassador was coming prepared to take up this subject with the debt funding commission.

By the arrangements which have been made with the other countries which have made plans for payments, the general policy of this government has been set forth. Along such lines there will doubtless be an understanding reached with Italy, which country is not unmindful of the importance of such action to its national credit. It will be the cause of much satisfaction when all debt adjustments are completed.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Those who predicted the end of the world Friday have a lot of explaining to do.

The man on the corner says: There are some decided objections to being a cave man.

Many a bill that's introduced in the legislature fails to get any supporters. And it is well it's so.

Just why the sixth, instead of Friday, the 13th, was picked for the end of the world some people cannot understand.

Many missing links are to be found scattered about the streets these days but they furnish no help to the Darwin theory.

Is the boost in the price of gasoline forcing the jacking up of more cars, or is it the decreased consumption through cars out of use that is driving the price up?

It may be all right in Florida but not very many will actually make a start in the American Red Cross' "learn to swim" effort this week along the Connecticut shore.

Just as soon as Norwich gets authority for its new bond issue steps can be taken to provide the necessity for other ones. Higher taxes and more bond issues is getting to be a habit.

It will be a big relief to Pennsylvania to learn that Massachusetts has made no provision in its budget for the $50,000 wanted to make test borings in search of hidden coal in that state.

THE MAN WHO TALKS

No natural element is subject to a greater variety of judgment than snow. It arouses every form of human comment from the esthetic rhymes of the poet to the prize fighting language of the street-cleaner. Is it a fertilizer? Is it helpful in any way to the soil? Is it conducive to health? Is it a promoter of disease? Is it ice or snow that winter kills, or is it something else that winter kills? All sorts of opinions are held concerning these questions, not merely among the rank and file of the unenlightened, but by the men of science themselves. It is, however, quite a common opinion among those who have sidewalks 30 by 7 feet to clear off that snow is not the patron saint of those who are subject to lumbago or other weaknesses of the muscles and back. But those who are poetic and can afford to have their walks shovelled off for them may be permitted to rave over the spangled beauties of snow.

Still it must be a very sordid nature that cannot see and feel the beauty of snow. Isn't there enough in a crystal snowflake to arouse intelligent reflection? In the symetry of its design it surpasses anything man has done or can do in the line of pattern making. Now this is the thought that comes to the inquiring mind: Could anything so perfectly exquisite as a snowflake design itself? When we see a fabric of beautiful design we know that somebody's skillful hand made it. We must admit that as the snowflake is material it could not have fashioned itself. Some hand made it. Back of every design is some designer. Still there are those who say there is no God. They say that things like snowflakes are produced by natural law. Very well, but back of all law must be a law giver, and the lawgiver is always bigger than the laws he makes. The falling snow, like other things, must lead us up to God.

Candlemas day in ecclesiastical usage is the season of the feast of the purification of the Virgin Mary very elaborately observed by the Roman Catholic church, especially on the other side of the Atlantic. It is said to be a very impressive ceremonial. From the procession bearing candles the name of Candlemas gets its name. It is not quite so clear ecclesiastically or scientifically what connection the day has for the attitude of the ground hog in forecasting the weather unless possibly it is the fact that Candlemas day which is February 2 is very nearly mid-winter day. Wasn't it a beautiful sight last Monday to see so many thousands of people watching for the appearance of that little animal! And when he appeared (by the hundreds) very timidly from his hibernation, looking around so anxiously for his shadow, and when the dark, drab day gave no shadow, shall we ever forget the smile that came to the little animal when he knew that winter was dying?

Why should there be—as evidently there is in some quarters—so much hysteria over the political shakeup in Washington? Isn't this the season for all kinds of shakeups? With the wind blowing, as we have recently had it all the way from 40 to 70 miles an hour, and carrying before it the blinding snow, isn't that about all the shakeup most of us want along that particular line? Do we not have them (though in a smaller way) in all officialdom? From all newspaper reports the various judgeships are being shaken up a bit, but as far as the writer has observed there is no hysteria over it. Business corporations and churches with their Sunday schools have also had their annual meetings resulting more or less in shakeups. But these things are taken for granted and no hysteria follows. Shakeups are stimulating whether administered by a president or a school teacher.

Is not an intelligent belief in one's ability to do a thing, and courage to put it into action, the two mainsprings of all success in life? This thought came to mind the other day when sidewalks and streets were one sea of glare ice. Just how far is a city, as a whole, and its people as individuals, justified in crumpling up before such a cold proposition and acknowledging their defeat? Our streets for too long a time were in a miserable condition. Of course after the snow had been reduced to ice there was little that could be done except to sprinkle sand on all dangerous places until a thaw came. But why could not the snow be removed before it was allowed to enter the ice stage? On the average in one part of the city, at least, not more than one man in five cleaned the snow off his walk. "Where there is a will there is always a way."

Few men in the last generation influenced his day more than Prof. Henry Drummond—the splendid Scotchman whose life was greatly enriched by contact with D. L. Moody. His addresses are among the classics of the latter part of the nineteenth century. In one of them he makes this statement: "The compatibility of ill temper with high moral character is one of the strangest and saddest problems of ethics." Drummond explains this paradox by saying that there are two kinds of sins—"sins of the body and sins of the disposition. The prodigal son may be taken as a type of the one and the elder brother of the second." There is no doubt in any reasonable person's mind as to which is the worse. Still how little we think of the sins of the disposition. Ill temper, pessimism, grouchiness, ragchewing ought to be classed with stealing, intemperance, lying and swearing. All are sins.

It goes without saying that all who believe in prohibition as to its principle very much regret that its violation is not more successfully dealt with. At the same time we are not misled by the malicious lies that are circulated by its enemies as to its utter failure. How shall we account for the enormous deposits in savings banks which have gone forward by leaps and bounds since prohibition came into vogue in 1918? How can we explain this attested fact if law enforcement has entirely fallen down on its job, as the "wets" would fain have us believe? How about the decrease of crime which the Literary Digest in a recent issue so convincingly sets forth? Let us stiffen up the penalty for violation. Let us give a fair sentence, and if that doesn't stop it, then make the violator drink his product and that would be final.

Uses of Firemen.

Returning from a fire, the Uniontown (Pa.) fire department stopped long enough to aid a woman who, having forgotten her key, was locked out of her third-floor apartment. The firemen obligingly ran a ladder up to the front window and opened the door from the inside.

Mineral production in Canada during 1924 is estimated at $203,194,000 as compared with $214,079,331 in the preceding year, according to a preliminary statement issued by the department of mines. Metallic minerals accounted for $96,034,000 of the total followed by fuels and other non-metallics with $73,890,000 and structural materials and clay products with $33,330,000.

STUDY OCEAN MIGHT REVEAL IMPORTANT DATA

Intense interest has developed in naval and scientific circles over the proposed oceanographic expedition to be outfitted and conducted by the navy this year, provided congress sees its way clear to allow the very modest appropriation of not much more than $50,000 which will be required to finance the venture. The conference on oceanography, composed of naval and lay scientists of distinction, has made its final report to the secretary of the navy outlining the purposes of the trip and some of the results which may be expected from it; and such has been the encouragement which the promotors have received that in all probability the enterprise may be regarded as an assured thing. Captain F. B. Bassett, hydrographer of the navy, is president of the conference and Lieutenant Commander G. E. Brandt is secretary general and these two gentlemen naturally are important figures in connection with the expedition. It has been determined that the U. S. S. Rainbow, now on her way home from China and the Philippines, will be utilized for the expedition and that the initial researches will be made in the Gulf of Mexico and the Caribbean Sea on the theory that intensive studies within a limited area will bring better practical results than if they were scattered with no special objective.

Importance of the Expedition.

The importance of this expedition, or at least of a series of oceanographic studies of which it is the first, can hardly be overestimated. Five-sevenths of the earth's surface is covered with the waters of the oceans, and it is said that the animal and plant resources of the ocean exceed those of the land. In the opinion of all oceanographers only an infinitesimal fraction of the productivity of the seas has been realized and should it become possible to do no more than to place the American fisheries on a scientific basis, the resultant economies would warrant all the expenditure which the proposed and other succeeding expeditions will entail. When it is realized that the Challenger expedition, merely by scooping up a piece of phosphatic rock from Christmas Island in the Indian Ocean, realise a large personal fortune for its discoverer and paid the British government several times the cost of the expedition, some idea of the practical value of scientific research into the mysteries of the ocean may be gained.

Effect Upon Climate.

Another field of unimaginable importance, from the present status of knowledge relates to the effect of ocean temperatures and changes upon climate. The rainfall of our south and middle west consists chiefly of water from the Gulf of Mexico. The evaporation of this water from the surface of the gulf and its distribution in the form of rain depends on the temperature, on the amount of salts contained in the surface waters of this region and on the winds. The winds have been investigated, but we are very largely ignorant of the details of the other features. Thus our great farm areas in the United States depend for their productivity upon a region of the sea but little known. The climate of our Pacific coast depends directly on the ocean to the west and responds at once to changes in that ocean. For instance, the rainless summers of California are due to the seasonal upwelling of cold and saline water from all great abysses, which chills the air above it and causes it to lose its moisture in the form of fog, which is largely absorbed by the sea.

Seek the Source of Earthquakes.

Earthquakes and volcanic eruptions disturb the terrain from Mexico to Costa Rica. Each year the Mississippi delivers to the gulf enormous quantities of mud, most of which settles on the bottom, while part is used by sea plants, which are eaten by those small creatures that serve as food for fish. This Mississippi mud represents millions of tons taken every year from the broad expanse of the Mississippi valley and deposited in a small area in the Gulf of Mexico and southward. Just how far is this mud distributed? Is it this great added weight on the sea floor each year that disturbs the equilibrium of the land and cause earthquakes? The safety of our ships at sea depends upon the accurate knowledge of the coastline, of the tide and currents, of the configuration of the bottom and its character, and of the weather. An accurate knowledge of the often varying coast line depends not only upon surveys, but also on a knowledge of sedimentation, and of tidal, current and colloidal action. The cost of transportation is much increased by the growth of various creatures on the bottom of ships, while borers damage and destroy docks, wharves and hulls. If navigation can be made more safe, marine insurance and freights would cost less.

Environment of Sacred Cod.

To bring the subject a little closer home, at least for New England, upon what factors does fish life depend? As an example, take the cod, our most important fish. Cod can exist only in cold water and then only where the food is plentiful. They feed on bottom-living scavengers, which must be abundant, these in turn on dead organic matter, which come from two main sources. What feeds these billions of small organisms, what supports these minute plants is one of the mysteries science is trying to uncover, for without a knowledge of them we cannot understand the cod. The chief fisheries of the Atlantic coast, most of them seasonal, are mackerel, swordfish, menhaden, haddock, halibut, herring and a few others. Their migratory seasons are pretty well defined but less is known of their areas of appearance. When they fail to appear or come only in scanty numbers, the fishermen attribute the scarcity to weather conditions and other causes without really knowing what the true reason is. It is apparent that an expedition engaged in an intensive scheme of oceanographical research can aid materially in solving many of the problems existing in the commercial fishing industry.

Menhaden and Sardines.

To cite one particular industry, the menhaden fishery. These fish appear on the Atlantic coast of the United States in vast schools during the summer months. Due to their value as a resource of oil, fertilizer and cattle and poultry food some fifty factories have been established at various points along the Atlantic and Gulf coasts. The catches fluctuate greatly. In some areas, some years, the factories are forced to close for lack of fish. It is assumed of course, that weather, temperature of the water and feed have much to do with the movements of the menhaden as of other fish, but so far such information is not authenticated and the fishery is therefore a gamble. If scientific research could tell the menhaden fishermen to use a thermometer as he would a sounding lead, if temperature has an effect on the fish, the knowledge would be of immense value. The sardine industry of Maine furnishes another example of numerous shut factories dependent upon a fish supply subject to fluctuation.

May Affect National Policies.

The studies of the expedition of course would include ocean depth, the contours of the bottom and of the shores. The Mississippi embayment is undergoing depression and, possibly, faulting. An intensive study of this embayment may result in information leading to modifications in the policies of Mississippi river improvement and flood control. It will be found that the contours of the ocean bottoms influence the weather cycle. The proposed surveys should reveal the source and exact location of many of the earthquakes, and they should bring to light centers of submarine volcanism in which islands may be in process of building or, perhaps, of destruction, and from which tidal waves travel. Captain Bassett declares that the amount of knowledge of the bottom of the ocean that can now be acquired by means of the sonic depth finder, developed by Dr. Harvey C. Hayes of the navy, makes this an especially auspicious time to undertake such an expedition as is proposed.

SUNDAY MORNING TALK

THE OVERFLOWING LIFE

My cup runneth over. Psalm.

The Creator made us all for some good purpose. Every flower that blooms in beauty and sheds its fragrance on the morning air is a blessing to the world. How much more should man, who has been endowed with such wonderful faculties be a blessing! But so long as we are of all joy we cannot scatter the sunshine of joy in the pathway of others.

We have seen a spring where the water overflows continually. The spring is full and the water flows over the brim on every side, and has been doing so for half a century. Hundreds of men, women and children come to the spring every day with cups and pitchers. They drink all they want and carry all they need and still the water overflows. There is enough for all and it would seem there is enough forever more. There is a secret channel between that spring and a great fountainhead somewhere sufficiently elevated to send the water down into the granite bown. So long as that channel is kept open the supply is ample.

So let the channel between the soul and the fountain of life be kept open. Let no sin and worldliness, no selfishness obstruct the way, then shall the water of life flow into the soul perpetually and freely. There shall be no limit to the supply, and thou shalt overflow a good deal. Joy shall overflow, peace shall overflow, thy righteousness shall overflow, thy life shall overflow. Many shall be refreshed from thy life.

There are thirsty souls everywhere. They are saying, "Who will show us any good?" Here and there they see a puny, trickling stream, but not enough to draw them. Jesus tells us that "river of water" shall flow from that soul that comes in contact with Him. Not a little trickling streamlet which dries up in summer, but a rolling river that fills all the land with life.

Calve Hissed Off the Stage

Highly praised as a singer, Emma Roquer studied hard and toiled assiduously until she earned her great opportunity—then she failed and was hissed from the stage.

Born in Decazeville, France, she was still a baby when taken to Spain. Returning to France at seven she learned he native tongue, entered the convent at Millau and determined to be a nun.

Making her first public appearance at the graduation exercises, at 15, her singing was highly praised. Finally winning her mother's consent to study because she could aid in her brother's education later, the girl went with the family to Paris. Studying with a teacher who agreed to wait for his pay until her debut, she spent three years in preparation.

Returning from a short concert trip she was eager to continue her studies, but found the family funds low. Grasping an opportunity to sing Marguerite, in Faust, she learned the role in two weeks, and sang for a season in Brussels. Overtaxing her voice, she returned to Paris and studied under Madame Marchesi, then sang for two years at the Opera Comique.

Then came her great opportunity to appear at the Scala, at Milan. Badly frightened, she sang out of tune, was hissed, and had to leave the stage.

Returning to Paris in a state of despair she resolved to quit the stage but friends dissuaded her. She was taken seriously ill and after her health was restored studied a year, then appeared successfully in Naples, and won her audience in the Scala at Milan.

Selected by Mascagni to create the role of Susel in his opera of L'Amico Frits in Rome she won enthusiastic approval. Criticized severely at rehearsal she made a triumph in Paris in Cavalleria Rusticana. Having shown none of her fiery temperament before, she appeared in Carmen and Emma Calve, her stage name, became known in all parts of the musical world.

Then came her triumph in Sapho and other productions her success in America and in many parts of the world until she became known as one of the world's greatest dramatic sopranos. And today, in the home of her girlhood, she helps young singers toward success.

YOUR INCOME TAX

More Deductions

Amounts paid or accrued within the year as interest on indebtedness are deductible, with certain exceptions, from gross income in determining net income. Such items include interest or money borrowed to defray personal expenses—clothing, food, etc.—and also money borrowed for the purchase of real estate. If a person owes money secured by a lieu or mortgage on his home, the amount of interest paid on such indebtedness may be deducted.

Moreover, interest paid by the taxpayer on a mortgage upon real estate of which he is the legal or equitable owner, even though the taxpayer is not directly liable upon the bond or note secured, may be deducted as interest upon his indebtedness. For example, the owner of a house and lot borrows money from a bank, giving his note or bond and a mortgage. He then sells the property subject to the mortgage. The purchaser does not agree with the bank to pay the mortgage, but does pay the interest. If it were necessary to foreclose on the mortgage, and the proceeds of the sale of the property were not sufficient to cover the amount of the note or bond, the bank could not sue the purchaser, but would have to look to the seller.

Indebtedness need not be evidenced by a lieu, judgment, or mortgage to make the interest thereon deductible. Frequently indebtedness is evidenced only by notes without additional securities.

A taxpayer may borrow money from an insurance company in which he is insured. Even where the money is used to pay the premium due upon the policy, the interest paid thereon may be deducted as personal indebtedness. Interest paid on behalf of a friend or relative where there is no legal obligation on the part of the payer can not be deducted. In such case, the payment amounts to a loan or gift.

Since interest paid may be deducted it follows that interest received is subject to the income tax, and should be included in the gross income of recipient. Interest need not be received in cash, but is constructively received when credited and held subject to call. For example, interest credited to a taxpayer's saving account for the year 1924 is income for that year.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Ossip Gabrilowitsch, who reaches his 47th birthday anniversary today, is well known to music lovers as a composer, as a soloist and as an artist collaborating with the best American orchestras and chamber quartets. He is the son of a lawyer of Leningrad, where the talented pianist and conductor was born. He was so talented at the age of six years that his parents, following the advice of Rubenstein, saw to it that the boy was given the best teachers and was prepared for a public and professional career. From both Rubenstein and Tolstoff he had instruction before he was 16. In 1894 he went to Vienna and studied the pianoforte with Leschetizky and composition with Nawratil, and four years later he set forth as a professional. In 1900 he first played in New York, and since that time he has won American as well as a European following that has brought him an excellent reputation and income. Americans' interest in him has not been lessened by the fact that he married a daughter of Mark Twain, the famous American author.

Stories That Recall Others

Everyone for Himself

Many are the ways of eating various vegetables. Some like them one way and some another. Arthur has his own ideas about cucumbers when they are in season. When he finds them at his plate at home, he dresses them with vinegar, pepper and salt, then carries the dish carefully out of the house and dumps it into the garbage barrel.

"That's serving them right," he says.

Fire on the Bus

It was ten o'clock at night on a bus that one woman said to another, "Whew! What a strong odor of camphor!"

Smells as if someone had been treating a bad cold, doesn't it?"

"Perhaps one of the gentlemen with the package has it?"

"It must have spilled then."

"O-o-h! O-o-h!" shrieked the woman who had first spoken as smoke rolled up from under her feet with the camphor smell becoming stronger. "The car's on fire!"

All began to file out and half were on the outside, including the woman, and the rest within, when the companion said:

"Look! Look! Your umbrella!" the celluloid tip glowed like a Roman candle about to go off. She plunged it into the snow heap and it emerged with a neat half moon burnt through it by the heat pipes of the car.

Alum in Artificial Gems

Nearly all artificial gems—that is stones which are really made by artificial means—are compounds of alum crystallized under special conditions. The metallic salts that are added during fusion determine whether the product shall be sapphires, rubies or oriental topazes, amethysts or emeralds.

Early attempts to manufacture artificial gems on a commercial basis failed because of the difficulty in obtaining the tremendous heat necessary but the oxyhydrogen flame solved the problem, and producing artificial gems is now an important industry.

The basic material is ammonia alum which is converted into calcined alum by heating it. To that is added the coloring matter in suitable proportions exide chromium for rubies, titanic acid for sapphires. The finely divided powder is permitted to trickle down into the oxyhydrogen flame, which attains a temperature of 1,800 degrees. The powder fuses into a pear-shaped body that weighs from 10 carats to 200.

PEGGY DOW JOURNAL TO HEBRON LIBRARY

Mrs. William O. Seyms, secretary of the Hebron library, reports an interesting gift to the library from Edward Hanks of Jersey City, a former resident of Hebron. The gift is an old edition of the Journal of Peggy Dow (wife of Lorenzo Dow), entitled "Vicissitudes in the Wilderness," and published in Norwich, 1833. The writing of this book was completed during her residence in Hebron in a house still standing near Hopevale. It contains an account of her travels with Lorenzo in the then wilds of this country, in the southern states, in England and in Ireland. It also contains an affecting note added by Lorenzo in which he tells of her failing health and death. She lies buried in the little graveyard at Burroughs Hill, where an old Methodist church was located.

The book contains a fly leaf on which Lorenzo advertises his family medicine, through the sale of which he reaped some revenue. The virtues of Dow's family medicine was attested by Peter Griffin and Daniel Burroughs, ministers of the gospel; William C. Boon, Joseph Bridgman, David Chapman, Samuel Shepard and Jonathan Page, and sworn to before Sylvester Gilbert, judge of the county court, Hebron, Sept. 8, 1818. It was sold by John Wilcox, Sr., comb maker, No. 86 Bowery, and could also be had "genuine" of George W. Haller, High street, Georgetown, and Thomas Jacobs, King street, Alexandria, D. C.

With his gift Mr. Hanks also enclosed a check for $10 to be used by the library.

NOT A DEATH IN 1924 IN FR. SHORTELL'S PARISH

Father Richard E. Shortell, pastor of St. Mary's church recently read to his parish, in which he stated that out of a parish enumeration of 800 he had not one death to record for the whole year of 1924; that while the financial success and the attendance of his parishioners to their religious obligations were very gratifying in every respect, his great happiness was that for the past year the sorrow of death had not fallen on any of their homes.

Rev. Father Shortell was for a number of years a popular assistant at St. Patrick's church, Norwich.

ASSESSORS FAVOR QUALIFIED EXPERTS FOR REVALUATION OF PROPERTY VALUES

The tax analysis committee at their meeting Friday night in the assessors' room at the court house heard the report of the board of assessors, read by Assessor John B. Oat, in which the assessors gave their views relative to the revaluation of property in Norwich and voiced an opinion that the work could best be done and more rapidly accomplished if qualified experts could be secured to assist the assessors.

The meeting was opened by Chairman James L. Case and Secretary John J. O'Rourke read the minutes of the last meeting, at which time a vote was taken requesting the assessors to attend the next meeting and tell what they would do and give figures relative to costs of the work.

Chairman Case then asked the assessors what they had to report concerning the carrying out of the work of revaluing of property in Norwich and John B. Oat, clerk of the board, read a report signed by all three assessors, stating their position and giving recommendations. The report of Mr. Oat was as follows:

The subject of revaluation of the property values in the town of Norwich, is a most important one.

The work, whether undertaken by the assessors themselves, or by the assessors with some expert assistance should, in either case, be conducted upon a sound basis, and by the application of a practical and efficient system.

If the work is to be done by the assessors, their first act should be to adopt and study some practical method in order that the final result of their labors may, if necessary, stand a test in court, or elsewhere. Such a procedure would of necessity require considerable time.

If the assessors should secure the assistance of local persons, they, in turn, would have to be instructed as to the operation of the chosen system, and additional time would therefore be necessary for such a purpose.

Such courses seem to us to be impracticable, inasmuch as more than 20,000 different items of property, located over an area of approximately 26 square miles, must be reappraised.

We have, at your request, carefully studied and considered the subject from many angles, and we have come to a conclusion that the work of revaluation can be much more rapidly accomplished, and better results obtained, if qualified experts can be secured to assist the assessors. Only such experts who have operated under some approved and well tried system should be chosen, for it is essential that the entire work should be completed within a comparatively few months.

From what we have learned of results accomplished in other cities, we believe that such appraisals will stand any test to which they may be subjected.

As to the difference in cost between work done by the assessors with untrained helpers, and the cost of the work done by the assessors with the assistance of a firm of experts, we do not attempt to estimate, but we do believe that the saving in time, and the fact that when a revaluation is accomplished, Norwich would have a modern and up-to-date system, are both considerations worth far more than any difference there might be in the cost of the two methods.

At the conclusion of the report of the board of assessors, Chairman Case threw the meeting open for discussion to give members of the committee opportunity to ask questions.

Michael J. Curran immediately took exception to the report of the assessors that there were 20,000 different items of property in Norwich, but this was immediately disputed by A. R. Manning, assessor, who said that Mr. Curran's figure of only 10,000 items was far too low as there were over 5,000 dwelling houses in Norwich, 400 stores, 84 factory buildings, nearly 5,000 lots and 27,000 acres of land split into nearly 800 items, these figures alone totalling nearly 17,000 when all items had been listed in their proper place. Mr. Curran wanted to know if the figure of 20,000 was not nearly double the current amount and received an answer of "No."

Chairman Case then said that the committee had arrived at a place where it knows pretty well what it wants done and that a report should be drawn up soon to be read before a town meeting. He hoped that a report might be made by the executive committee to the tax committee within two weeks for acceptance or rejection and that a report be taken to the town meeting, all facts first being published so that the public would know what was wanted and how the committee felt the revaluation problem should be handled.

Robert McNeely then moved that a vote of appreciation be given the assessors for their work and the report accepted.

Mr. Oat then inquired if the report answered the question asked at the last meeting, the answer being affirmative.

Albert Boardman asked if the assessors could do the work if an assistant took over the office work and the answer was that the report by the assessors stated their position on what they believed to be for the best interests of Norwich. Mr. Oat, speaking for the assessors, said that some plan must be formulated, some workable system found, but that we must first arrive at values of land and buildings and that he believed the expense would be about the same whether local experts did the work or outside experts were secured. The whole thing hinges on the fact that we must be right the first time or our work has been for nothing, said Mr. Oat.

Questions were then asked about outside systems, particularly those of New London and Willimantic and Mr. Oat stated that perhaps the same systems could be used in Norwich.

Secretary O'Rourke asked if the assessors had any idea of the cost of this work and the assessors replied that they had no more information on the subject.

The question of means of travel was brought up and it was pointed out that all assessors, no matter who they are in the future, should have some means of traveling around the town, either having authority to rent a machine or have an automobile for this work.

Chairman Case asked how long the work of revaluing would take and Mr. Oat said that there was nothing to start on and he could not state how long a time would be required.

Then, I understand, said Chairman Case, that the assessors could do the work, but think it to the best interests of the town to have the assistance of experts. We realize that the assessors must shoulder the system in time, said Mr. Oat, but the work would be done quicker with expert assistance.

Asked by Mr. Curran who would do the final assessing, Mr. Oat replied that the assessors must do so according to law; they must be responsible for the figures. However, said Mr. Oat, we wouldn't want to see the work hurried too fast. We want to learn and know it just as well as the experts when it is completed. Asked if it wasn't just the same as doing it alone, Mr. Oat answered that it was easier to learn quicker with a teacher than it would be alone.

Mr. Goldberg asked if the assessors really cared to do the work and Mr. Oat replied that they would not hesitate if they had a system and knew they were right but what he wouldn't want to say they could do the work, for if there was trouble when they finished the thing would be back where it now rests.

Asked by Mr. Curran if there had been any court cases for some years, Mr. Oat replied that the only chance for a case under the present rate of taxation would be through discrimination.

Asked about doing the work of revaluation at the present pay of $1,200 a year the assessors reported that the pay now is not enough to live on and that the income from this work alone would not support them, therefore they did not feel that full time should be given to the work of revaluation for this salary.

We would give you the answer in our report, even though the salary was $4,000 a year, said Mr. Oat. There is no beating about the bush. We simply feel that our report is in the best interests of the town.

John F. Rogers then asked if the assessors expected to go about with the experts and Mr. Oat said that they intended to be with them at all times, learning both inside and outside work.

Grosvenor Ely then asked if the assessors in their report simply said that they felt that the work could best be done with the aid of a firm or expert advice and received an answer that "This was so."

Albert Boardman then made a motion that the matter be referred to the executive committee to report in two weeks for vote thus to see if the resolution could not be put into effect. The motion was adopted and adjournment took place at 9.30 o'clock.

The annual meeting of the Philathea class of the United Congregational church was held Friday evening at the home of the teacher, Mrs. William H. Dawley, No. 4 Robbins court. FAVOR 48 HOUR BILL FOR WOMEN AND CHILDREN

The regular meeting of the Norwich Central Labor Union was held in Carpenters' hall this week with a large number of delegates present. A favorable report was given on the state labor bank and that considerable stock has been subscribed for in this locality. Thomas Addison, in reporting for the legislation committee, outlined labor's programme at this year's session of the general assembly. The two most important labor bills, he said, are the amendment to the workmen's compensation act and the 48 hour bill for women and children.

President Donahue was delegated to go to Hartford and appear at the hearings and to favor these bills.

The matter of the falling off of business in some lines in Norwich was taken up by the moulders and cigar makers. Their report stated that while some of this was due to business conditions, much of it was due to outside competition. There are boilers and cigars made in Norwich, they reported, that are not inferior in quality, and, in fact, are better in many cases than those in outside cities. They favored a "Boosting Norwich" slogan, stating that if this slogan is lived up to in Norwich, not only these lines, but all lines of business would be helped.

MAY PREVENT MONOPOLY ON HOUSEHOLD UTILITIES

Washington, Feb. 6.—Possible action by the department of justic to prevent monopolistic control of prices of a number of household utilities was forecast tonight by Attorney General Stone.

On the basis of information, gathered partly by the federal trade commission and partly by justice department investigators, Mr. Stone in a letted to the commission, set forth these conclusions on the situation respecting conditions in the household supply industries.

Aluminum—Price control has been practiced and court decree violated.

Refrigerators—The department is prepared to take "apropriate action," on the basis of an exhaustive report of conditions in the industry which now is being studied by government attorneys.

Washing machine—The government is not yet in a position to take definite steps against the machine manufacturers although it has been definitely established that certain acts in trade practices of some of the manufacturers is open to severe criticism.

Sewing machine—If any of the trade practices and activities of the Manufacturers' Trade association ever were illegal, the time has passed by which to institute proceeding against it because of the statute of limitation.

Brooms and broom handles—An investigation is under way and further evidence must be gathered before the department can determine its course.

ATTENDANCE OF AMERICAN COLLEGES AND UNIVERSITIES

Philadelphia, Feb. 6.—Following a diminished rate of increase in 1923-24, attendance of American colleges and universities has this year risen in percentage approaching post-war gains, according to an article in the school and society prepared by Raymond Walters, dean of Swarthmore college and associate editor of the journal. Dean Walters has received reports from 160 institutions on the approved list of the Association of American Universities.

The 1924-25 increase over 1923-24 in full time regular students in 149 institutions which reported both last year and this, is 8.5 per cent. The advance of 1923-24 over 1922-23 in 134 of these institutions was 3 per cent.

In numerical rank the University of California and Columbia university are again leaders. California's enrollment, including both Berkeley and Los Angeles divisions, is first in number of regular full-time students, of whom there are 15,580. Columbia has 11,621. In grand total enrollmen, comprising 1924 summer school and part-time students, as well as full-time regular students, Columbia lends the country with 30,021 students, and California next with 24,112.

The University of Illinois, with 10,088 students, stands third in full time regular enrollment and the University of Minnesota is fourth with 9,417.

Third and fourth places in grand total enrollment are held by New York university with 16,915 resident students and by College of the City of New York with 16,136 resident students.

The five largest exclusively women's colleges are reported as follows:

MEMORIAL OF SINKING OF BATTLESHIP MAINE

Hartford, Conn., Feb. 6.—Governor Trumbull has designated Sunday, February 15, the anniversary of the sinking of the battleship Maine, as Maine memorial day. In a proclamation issued today he recommends that the day be observed in schools on the school day preceding the memorial day and that all citizens cherish the tradition of liberty and justice inspired by the sacrifice of the Main and its crew. The proclamation is as follows:

"In compliance with the statute I hereby designate Sunday, February 15 as Maine memorial day.

"In Havana harbor 27 years ago, an event occurred which was to be the forerunner of a war that gave the boon of freedom to smaller nation lying near our shores and guaranteed to millions republics for all portions of the American hemisphere.

"I recommend that in accordance with the statute suitable exercises having reference to this historical occasion be held on the school day next preceding, or on such other day as the school visitors, board of education, or town school committees may prescribe. May such exercises recall not only the courage and spirit of sacrifice which has ever inspired our soldiers and sailors but also the high purpose to which that courage and that spirit of sacrifice have ever been dedicated. May we always cherish this tradition of liberty and justice and take strength and wisdom from the strong souls who have gone before.

"JOHN H. TRUMBULL,
"Governor."

KEY WAS FOUND IN THE CLOTHING OF CHAPMAN

Atlanta, Ga., Feb. 6.—An improvised key, made from wire wrenched from a fixture in his cell at the federal prison here was discovered in the clothing of Gerald Chapman, bandit, shortly before he left Wednesday under heavy guard for Connecticut to stand trial on a murder charge, says a story published in the Atlanta Journal today.

Mrs. Stokes, accompanied by her mother, arrived here today from Denver to attend the trial but did not appear in court.

Gallery of Fakes.

An exhibit of counterfeits, imitations and copies of works of art is being held in London. The object of the exhibition, which includes pictures, drawings, furniture, carpets, metal work, caramics and sculpture, is to help students, collectors and critics in the study of problems of quality and originality, as also of period and school. In many cases this object is furthered by comparison of the copy with the original, or the imitation with an authenticated example of the style and period aimed at; and works produced for innocent purposes of record, reproduction; duplication and repetition and examples of restoration and repair, as well as works intended to deceive, are included.

At any rate, as regards the pictures, one comforting conclusion is that it is, on the whole, easier for the forger to imitate those qualities which appeal to the collector as collector—such as "the tone of time" and cracks in the surface—than the basic qualities of a great work of art, such as drawing and design.

PAUL BROWN SAYS:

The art instructor of the Norwich Schools, Miss Mary Henderson, said recently in an interesting talk: "The study of art teaches us to do things better. Applied to the merchant, it means trimming better windows —writing better advertising—arranging better stock display —selecting better merchandise."

In this Unique New Dress Shop, we are demonstrating applied art—Trying to sell Dresses in a better way. Each Frock in this new shop is like a beautiful picture in harmony of design—color and trimming.

Nearly every woman has an inherent love for the beautiful. That is the real reason for the popularity of this new kind of a shop in so short a time. Here we sell Exquisite Frocks at less than you expect to pay, without fuss, worry, or bother, and that is art, too.

PRINCIPAL CONTENDERS FOR TITLE WITHDRAW FROM ELIMINATION BOUTS

New York, Feb. 6.—By the A. P.)—Dissatisfied with the financial inducements offered and the prospect of fighting before the smaller clubs in New York, four of the most prominent of 16 contenders selected by the New York State Athletic commission to compete in the lightweight elimination tournament, withdrew from the competition today and officially notified the commission of their action.

The quartet consists of Johnny Dundee, former world's featherweight champion, who was today indefinitely suspended by the commission for his failure to fulfill a contract to fight Fred Bretonnel, French lightweight, in Paris last month; Sid Terris of New York, Sammy Mandell of Rockford, Ill., and Sid Barbarian of Detroit.

Dundee withdrew automatically by virtue of his suspension. Terris and Mandell retired because of what they claimed were inadequate financial terms, while Barbarian, who announced his withdrawal yesterday, reaffirmed it today by announcing that he had two matches scheduled in Portland, Ore., which would prevent his participation in the tournament. He also expressed his dissatisfaction with financial prospects for the tournament.

As a result of this wholesale withdrawal Chairman Browern announced that Solly Seaman of New York and Joe Benjamin of California, a protege of Jack Dempsey, who were selected by the commission as alternates, would be elevated to be regular contenders. Two others will be selected tomorrow.

Plans for the tournament will not be curtailed by the action of these boxers," Chairman Brower said in commenting on the retirement of the four competitors.

"While this display of unsportsmanlike conduct is not pleasing to the commission, we feel that enough of the boxers have the interest of the game at heart to go through and make this tournament fully as successful as the featherweight tournament."

The draw for opponents scheduled for today, was postponed until next Monday as a result of the retirement of the quartet. Chairman Brower also said that he had obtained permission from all the principals to "seed" the draw as he saw fit and that the eight best boxers, according to the commission's rating, would be placed in one half and the other eight in another and in that way the best contenders would not meet until later rounds.

Dundee presented his withdrawal before he was informed of his suspension. He told the commission it would be six months before he would be in condition to enter such a tournament.

BULKELEY WILL START INDOOR PRACTICE NEXT WEEK

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, Feb. 6.—The first indication that Bulkeley was to go out for a big season in baseball was made today, when the announcement that the advance guard of baseball players of which there are eight veterans from last year, will find the limbering up of the candidates for the pitchers and catchers beginning next week. All early activities will be under the supervision of a teacher at school yet to be named, for Coach Canty is not yet available due to the coaching of basketball.

Among those who are expected to report next week are Parisi, Captain Tillotson, Daniels, Locke and Mondell for the twirling berths. Parisi, due to his participation in basketball, may not be allowed to indulge in fielding up exercises until after the basketball season. Among the catchers to report at the Y. M. C. A. will be George Sheffott, Lonergan and Collins. Besides the battery, two members of the infield, Joe Barry at second and Joe Guetano at shortstop, together with two members of last year's outfield will begin their conditioning early this year.

Early indications point towards a successful year, and the signing up of New York University freshmen, Fordham freshmen, Wilby and Morris High, all for the westward trip, as the new arrivals on the Bulkeley schedule, the Orange and Black will engage some of the fastest nines in the state and out. A trip through Massachusetts is also planned, and this trip will include games with the Springfield Tech, Dean Academy, Dexter and one of the many yearling teams of some college in or around Boston. This trip is only pending, but is expected to materialize.

NURMI WILL TRY TO SET NEW 2-MILE RECORD

New York, Feb 6.—Nurmi, whose accomplishments on American board tracks have drawn the attention of scientists as well as athletes, tomorrow night will attempt the seemingly impossible—the running of two miles in nine minutes or less.

This super test will be undertaken at the Wilco A. A. games in Brooklyn and Willie Ritola, who has broken more than a dozen world records in the last few weeks, will be the principal opponent of the Olympic champion in the feature race, although he will have competed previously during the evening in the mile handicap. Ritola has run brilliantly in his last five races and feels that he is ready to oppose Nurmi.

The meet will also find Joie Ray of Chicago setting after the record for the mile, which he lost to Nurmi the first night that the Finn appeared in this country. After twelve years of competition the man from the middle west is running the mile faster this years than ever before.

YALE BATTERY CANDIDATES REPORT NEXT WEEK

New Haven, Feb. 6.—Battery candidates for Yale baseball team will be called out for the first work of the year on Monday and two weeks later, there will be sounded a call for candidates for all positions, according to an announcement made tonight by Coach Joe Wood.

Present indications are that Yale will have a good baseball club this year although the coaches admit that it will be difficult to fill the places of Captain Charles O'Hearn, of last year's team and Bill Mallory, mainstay behind that bat for two years.

Coach Wood will, however, have an abundance of pitching material and it is probable that he will take six twirlers on the Easter trip to Washington and Richmond.

Besides Captain Pond, who has been Yale's best pitcher for the past two years, Wood will have the services of Bill Holabird, star of the freshman team of two years ago; Harry Scott, Frank Ashburn, Don Ross and Cox of last year's staff and Sammy Scott and Tom Burnell, of last year's freshman team.

For catchers there will be on hand Lovejoy and Hinchliffe, of last year's squad and Walter and Barclay, of the 1927 freshmen team. Jerry Wadsworth, whose father, U. S. Senator James W. Wadsworth played first base for Yale in 1896, 1897, 1898, Bill Kline, Wortham and Bartram also will be candidates.

Dan Lindley and Scotty McLaren will be out for second base, Coleman and Jones for third base, and Jack Ewing, Kai Kee and Joe Festa for shortstop. In the outfield Yale has some veteran material in Neal and Wear, both regulars last year and Weed, a utility man on the 1924 team. Cushing, Noble and Moran of the freshman team last year will make bids for places in the field.

BULKELEY FIVE PREPARING FOR BRANFORD GAME

New London, Feb. 6.—A tightening of the belt buckles and the look of determination upon the faces of the Bulkeley basketball team in the preliminary workout with the second team at the Y. M. C. A. held this afternoon and the final preparation before the game with the fast Branford High school five, which takes place at the "Y" gym on this (Saturday) afternoon. The return to the home schedule after an unsuccessful sojourn in foreign territory, will find Bulkeley opening upon the unsuspecting with all she has and that includes the troublesome Huck Taylor.

Bulkeley will open the contest with Parisi and Taylor as the forwards, Vogt at center and Watterson and Graves at the guard positions.

Rodriquez Is a Holdout

Havana, Feb. 6.—Jose Rodriquez, the Cuban infielder on the Bridgeport Eastern league baseball team, today returned his 1925 contract unsigned. Rodriquez said he was not satisfied with the salary offered him.

"The Bridgeport club," Rodriquez added, "promised to send me to one of the big leagues. However, it has rejected several offers for me and made the price for my sale prohibitive."

Cooper Signs With Cubs

Chicago, Feb. 6.—Wilbur Cooper, star left hand pitcher obtained from Pittsburgh by the Chicago Cubs signed a contract today. President Veech of the Cubs said he expected all the players to be under contract before February 26, the day of departure for the training camp.

AGGIE FRESHMEN PLAY AT SIMSBURY TODAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

Storrs, Conn., Feb. 6.—The Connecticut Aggie freshmen will play their fifth game of the season tomorrow, when they go to Simsbury to tackle the Westminster school five. Coach Alexander has been drilling his basketball during the past week in preparation for this contest, and as seen during the daily practice sessions they are apparently in top form and ready for the prep school team.

All advance dope on this game seems to be in favor of the Aggies, as the Westminster record to date has not been impressive. Against Roxbury school last week, the Westminster five was unable to show any real basketball, being on the short end of a 33-19 score. The Storrs freshmen, it will be remembered, soundly defeated the Roxbury team here two weeks ago. In addition to the starting lineup as announced, Coach Alexander is taking along Sullivan, Hyman and Bitgood as reserves.

The home attraction in basketball at Storrs for tomorrow will be furnished by the Co-ed team of the college, that will play the Williams Memorial Institute of New London on the Hawley armory court at 2.30 p. m. The lineups:

NURMI VOTED OUTSTANDING STAR AT MILLROSE GAMES

New York, Feb. 6—(By the A. P.)—Paavo Nurmi today gained additional laurels when the Millrose Athletic Association announced he had been voted the outstanding performer at the annual Millrose indoor track and field carnival, held Jan. 27 and 28 at Madison Square Garden.

Nurmi, who smashed three world's records in two victories races at the Millrose games, won the contest by a decisive margin over Harold Osborn, Illinois A. C. star who broke the high jump record, and Willie Ritola, Finnish-American runner who broke four world's records in a three-mile race. These three stars will have their names engraved on the Rodman Wanamaker International Trophy, and will receive special prizes from the Millrose A. A.

Nurmi's point total was 24 1-2 in the voting by a group of fifteen representative track officials and experts whose votes were figured on a basis of one point for first place, two for second, and so on. Osborn received 42 points and Ritola 45 1-2, while the next three finishers in order, were: Willie Plant, Morningside A. C., 49; Alan Helfrich, Penn State College, 70; Loren Murchison, Newark A. C., 84.

MRS. MALLORY WINS WAY TO TENNIS FINALS

New York, Feb. 6—Mrs. Molla Mallory, former national tennis champion, advanced to the last round of the indoor invitation tournament at the Heights' Casino today by defeating Miss Anna Filler of Boston, 6-4, 6-1. Her opponent in the singles final tomorrow will be Mrs. John D. Corbiere of Boston.

Mrs. Corbiere, who won her way into singles final by a fine finish yesterday also went into the doubles final today when she and her partner, Mrs. William Endicott, won a hard match from Miss Isabella Mumford and Mrs. Roger Griswold, 6-4, 5-7, 6-4. All are Boston women.

The opponents of the Corbiere-Endicott team in the doubles tomorrow will be Miss Martha Bayard of Short Hills, N. J., and Miss Marie Wagner of Yonkers, N. Y., who advanced today by default of Miss Helen Hooker of New York and Mrs. Ceres Baker Sackett of East Orange, N. J.

Mrs. Mallory, after a slow start in today's match, swept through the two sets with the same splendid form that has characterized her playing throughout the tournament.

DANIELSON FIVE CLASHES WITH JUDEANS TONIGHT

Tonight at the Danielson state armory the Service Battery basketball team will face the Judeans of Hartford, amateur champions of the capital city and contenders for the championship of the state. The Judeans are a high speed outfit. In addition they have class. It is not at all unlikely that in opposing them in tonight's game the Service Battery boys will have that hardest game of the season to play. The battery players are in fine form and have demonstrated time and again this season that their playing combination is an excellent one. The hope to win tonight's game from the Hartford boys and thereby earn a rating as one of the best of the amateur teams of the state.

PLAYERS REACH FINAL IN NATIONAL RACQUETS

Philadelphia, Feb. 6—The defeat of J. G. F. Simpson and R. C. O. Williams, of the Queen's Club, London, today by Clarence C. Pell and Stanley Mortimer, New York, in the semi-final round of the national racquets doubles championship tournament, left the winners to face Stanley W. Pearson and Jay Gould of this city in tomorrow's battle for the title.

The English players were beaten by a score of 6-15, 15-12, 11-15, 15-5, 16-6.

PASSAIC "WONDER TEAM" FALLS AT HANDS OF HACKENSACK HIGH SCHOOL

Hackensack, N. J., Feb. 6.—(By The A. P.)—The senatorial world's record winning streak of the Passaic High school basketball team, which had mounted to 159 consecutive victories over a span of six seasons, came to a dramatic end today

The death blow to one of the most brilliant athletic achievements known to school or any other rank was dealt by the Giant combination of Hackensack high school. This aggregation of rugged youths, all over six feet in height, defeated the "wonder five" by a close score of 39 to 35 after a desperate battle.

The downfall of the famous Passaic team, was witnessed by a howling crowd of 500 fans, most of them Hackensack partisans, who all but mobbed the home team after its unexpected and spectacular triumph.

Led by their captain and center, Bollerman, who towers six feet, six inches in height, the Hackensack team earned its victory with a well planned and well executed attack. Hackensack has been beaten, 54 to 38, by the Passaic earlier this season on the latter's favorite ground, the Paterson Armory, but the home team was better prepared for today's battle and turned the tables on their noted rivals with a fine exhibition of passing and shooting.

Hackensack, recognized all season as Passaic's strongest rival in this part of the state, showed no trace of the stage-fright which has frequently been the undoing of the "wonder five's" opponent. The local squad of huskies got away to a slow start but gathered headway quickly and led by the margin of a single point at half time they stretched this advantage to four points by the end of the third quarter and repelled Passaic's challenge in the final period, with Bollerman and Fast, rightforward who lived up to his name, as the outstanding stars.

Passaic, however, did not go down without a game fight, Captain Pushman, high scorer of the game, was in the thick of the fray, rallying his team -mates and trying to stem the tide that went steadily against the visitors. Passaic held a four-point lead at the end of the first quarter but their brilliant passwork would not offset the equally effective team-work and superior basket-shooting of their opponents.

Passaic's last defeat was at the hands of Union Hill, N. J., high on March 15, 1919 at New Brunswick, in the finals of the New Jersey State High school championships.

Since then the "wonder five" has swept aside all opposition, usually by one-sided scores, and won five successive state high championships.

Most of these triumphs were recorded on Passaic's home court but the team frequently had gone outside its field to conquer intersectional rivals. This season, Passaic defeated Holyoke and Arlington High school teams from Massachusetts, as well as several new York fives.

The creator of the system of teamplay that brought Passaic to fame, Ernest A. Blood, was not at the helm of the combination which met its waterloo today. Blood resigned his position as coach last season after several disputes with educational authorities over the team's schedule.

During the long period of victory Passaic has turned out many stars who have gone on to fame in college and other basketball ranks. Roosma, star forward of this year's Army five at West Point is a graduate of the Passaic school.

TECH WILL USE ALUMNI PLAYERS AGAINST WILLINGTON

New London, Feb. 6.—Chapman Tech will not use the regular High school lineup in the game with the Y. M. C. A. five of South Willington. Instead of the regular five of the Red and Black, the game will be transferred to the basketball players of the Alumni and other players to make up a strong five to give the Willington players a battle for their money. The lineup the New London team will use tonight at Willington will include Farnham, Cruise Linkletter and three other players who have no connection with the Tech team whatsoever.

With the game taken out of the hands of the High school five, it will mean that the team will remain inactive this week and will resume her basketball schedule next week with Windham High playing here on Tuesday night and on Saturday night the big test of the evening will offer itself in Naugatuck High of the Naugy valley. These games will be faced with a patched-up lineup, and some idea of the playing of the quintet will be tested with the first game on Tuesday with Windham.

STATE COMMISSION BARS FULTON FOR ALL TIME

New York, Feb. 6 (By the A. P.)—Fred Fulton, Rochester, Minn., heavyweight; his manager, Jack Reddy, and Fred Winsor, manager of Tony Fuente, Mexican heavyweight, today were barred for all time from connection with the ring game in this state by the New York state athletic commission for their part in the "fratied" Fulton-Fuente bout in California early this winter.

The commission took no action against Fuente, who was acquitted this week of any part in the deal by which Fulton is alleged to have received $6,000 the morning after his quick knockout at the hands of the Mexican.

The commission's action took the form of a recommendation to its license committee to blacklist Fulton, Winsor and Reddy, the effect of which will be to bar them from obtaining a license in New York state if they apply for any in the future.

CONN. AGGIES MEET TOUGH OPPONENT IN CLARK FIVE

(Special to The Bulletin)

Storrs, Conn., Feb. 6.—Sumner Dole's Connecticut Aggie varsity will journey to Worcester tomorrow to play the Clark University five. This game will mark the halfway point in the Aggie schedule and the team will make a strong bid to take the measure of the Bay State outfit.

Coach Dole put his squad through one of the stiffest workouts of the season yesterday, when he gave the team a fast 45 minute session of scrimmage. The Aggie mentor is trying to improve the basket shooting of his men, which in some of the games has been far from satisfying. It would seem at times that a jinx was following the efforts of the team, as in some of the contests played the Storrs outfit had any number of shots, many of which merely rolled around the hoop and fell outside. Yesterday's long scrimmage drill was held in an effort to improve the shooting of the men under actual game conditions, and it is hoped that the team will show the desired improvement in the game at Worcester tomorrow.

All indications point to a tough battle for Captain Bulock and his mates tomorrow. Clark is putting a veteran team on the floor with every man from the 1924 quintet playing this year. Connecticut defeated this team last year on the Hawley armory court, but that does not necessarily mean that the Aggies will be able to repeat this year. Clark will have a big advantage in playing on its own home surface, and the fact that the team has been playing together intact for two seasons now is also a big advantage.

In Kaligaryl, the Bay Staters have a star man in the center berth. Standing 6 ft. 6 inches tall, and being a fast floor man, he has contributed much to the good work turned in by the Clark five to date. His height makes him an especially dangerous man near the basket, and he will be closely guarded tomorrow.

Clark has played six contests this season, with three victories and three defeats. A victory over Wesleyan, though only by a one point margin, is the most noteworthy piece of work turned in by the Worcester team to date, and this fact stamps them as a dangerous combination. Victories were also gained over St. Francis and Norwich. Clark has been defeated by New Hampshire, Massachusetts Aggies and Amherst.

An attempt to predict the outcome of the game tomorrow looms up as an exceedingly difficult task. Comparative scores, always ticklish things to handle, prove it in this instance. Wesleyan fell before Clark and later defeated Connecticut, which would indicate Clark had the edge. On the other hand, Connecticut defeated New Hampshire, and the night after the New Hampshire team journeyed to Worcester and soundly trounced the Bay Staters. Thus it would appear to be either teams game, with much depending upon the present condition of the respective five.

Coach Dole has made a few changes in his lineup for this game. Makofski will move up into Schofield's forward berth, with Paul Bitgood, Danielson boy, filling in at guard. The lineup remains the same, otherwise, with Captain Bulock in the other forward, Eddy at center, and Allard in the back court.

The lineup at Worcester:

Connecticut—Bulock (capt.), rf; Makofski, lf; Eddy c; Bitgood, rg; Allard, lg.

DUNDEE IS SUSPENDED BY N. Y. COMMISSION

New York, Feb. 6 (By the A. P.)—Johnny Dundee, former world's featherweight champion, today was indefinitely suspended by the New York state athletic commission for failing to go through with a contract to box Fred Bretonnel in Paris last month.

This action was taken at the request of the French boxing federation, which took similar steps against the American boxer following his hasty departure from Paris shortly before his bout with Bretonnel, the French lightweight.

The decision completed the international ban on Dundee, who also has been suspended by the International Boxing union and the National Boxing Association of the United States.

MARTIN IS ABLE TO LEAVE HOSPITAL

The bout between Martin and Balenth round when Ballerino suddenly berino was a fast one up to the eleyshot over a short right-hand punch to the body. The blow toppled him to the floor and he had two convulsions in his corner. He was rushed to the hospital where it was said the pugilist was unable to talk and suffered a complete breakdown of the motor system.

MANDELL WINS POPULAR VERDICT OVER TERRIS

New York, Feb. 6—(By the A. P.)—A flash of lightweight lightning struck tonight but only scratched its mark. Sid Terris, of New York, widely heralded as the fastest man of his weight and leading contender for the crown forfeited by Benny Leonard, went down to defeat tonight before the furious onslaught of Sammy Mandell, of Rockford, Ills., in one of the most sensational lightweight battles fought in many a year in Madison Square Garden.

Mandell gained the judges' decision after 12 rounds of spectacular fighting in which his aggressiveness, deadlier and more accurate hitting offset the dazzling speed and brilliant boxing of Terris.

The verdict was received with mingled feelings by a crowd of 13,000 that jammed the Garden to its rafters but among newspapermen at the ringside, opinion was almost unanimous in favor of Mandell. He was generally conceded six of the 12 rounds, with two credited to Terris and four classed as battling, however, that there was little even. So close and stirring was the tle to chose at any stage of the fray, although Mandell finished the stronger of the two.

TWO ANSWERS TO BOWLING FAN'S QUESTION ABOUT BARBER

Two answers to Bowling Fan's letter asking why Frank Barber and his brother were not in the Eastern Connecticut two-man tournament, have been received by the sporting editor of The Bulletin. One letter comes from Barber himself and the other from Fred Dugas, president of the Eastern Connecticut Bowling Association. The letters are as follows:

Mr. Barber's Letter

Sporting Editor:

Seeing the letter from a bowling fan in your paper this morning asking why I did not enter the league I can give my reasons in a very few words. Last year and for several years, in fact I have bowled in Eastern Connecticut not always in tournaments. In last year's tournament I found as did other bowlers that there were times when arguments arose that were never settled satisfactorily and it caused much feeling that hurt the game rather than helped it. The way this present tournament is being conducted is a great improvement over last year. There has been drafted a set of rules that should smooth out many of the rough spots. But are these rules sufficient to cover all points? Is there anyone to enforce these rules? I do not think there is.

Now this is the reason why I did not enter the tournament. I was asked and stated plainly that I would not enter any tournament unless there was someone, not an alley owner or member of any of the teams entered, who should be in control of the league and see that rules are enforced. I wanted a commissioner with practically the same power as Landis has in baseball, some person who would make decisions and whose decision would be final. Under these conditions I would gladly have entered the tournament.

Yours in sport
FRANK BARBER

Mr. Dugas' Letter

Mr. Sporting Ed:

Replying to the bowling fan wanting to know why the Barber brothers are barred from the two-man tournament I would say that Frank Barber was not barred from the individual tournament last season and he isn't barred from the two-man tournament. He was asked to join and refused. Roy Fillmore was his representative. Barber also refused to enter the five-man tournament. He was asked to come to meetings of the league or send a representative. I am willing to bowl in Danielson Monday and make up the difference later and have the Barber brothers come to Taftville Thursday. We are all willing to have him with us as there is always plenty of action when Barber is rolling. If this is agreeable to all, let's go. I also want to know who are real bowling fans.

SPORTING NOTES

Charles A. Stoneham, owner of the New York Giants and former broker, must defend the suit brought against him by creditors of the brokerage firms of Charles A. Stoneham & Co. and E. H. Clarke & Co., for losses sustained through the failure of the latter firm on April 8, 1922. Federal Judge Francis A. Winslow has decided The creditors' suit alleges that when Stoneham and his brother-in-law, Ross F. Robertson, who comprised the firm of Stoneham & Co., retired from business in February, 1921, the customers' accounts of the concern were transferred to E. H. Clarke & Co.

Leo Oster's career as a professional ball player is ended. It was definitely learned last week with announcement that the sight of one eye cannot be saved. Sight in the other may be restored, it was said. Oster was struck in the eye by debris in an explosion of dynamite, which occurred as he was leaning over about to light a fuse while working with a road gang near Dubuque, Ia. He starred as a pitcher with the Dubuque, Mississippi Valley league team for the past three seasons.

One Less at Home

One less at home!
The charmed circle broken; a dear face
Missed day by day from its accustomed place,
But cleansed and saved and perfected by grace,
One more in heaven!

One less at home!
One voice of welcome hushed, and evermore
One farewell word unspoken; on the shore
Where parting comes not, one soul landed more,
One more in heaven!

One less at home!
A sense of loss that meets us at the gate;
Within, a place unfilled and desolate;
And far away our coming to await;
One more in heaven!

One less at home!
Chill as the earth-born mist the thought would rise
And wrap our footsteps round, and dim our eyes;
But the bright sunbeam darteth from the skies—
One more in heaven!

One more at home!
This is not home, where cramped in earthly mold
But there where face to face we shall behold
Is home in heaven!

One less on earth!
Its pains, its sorrows, and its toils to share;
One less the pilgrim's daily cross to bear;
One more the crown of ransomed souls to wear;
At home in heaven!

One more in heaven!
Another thought to brighten cloudy days;
Another theme of thankfulness and praise,
Another link on high our souls to raise,
To home in heaven!

One more at home—
That home where separation cannot be,
That home where none are missed eternally;
Lord Jesus, grant us all a place with Thee
At home in heaven!

The First Snow

At dusk the first few drifting flakes
Came down, forerunning night;
The woods, the brooks, the frozen lakes,
By dark were covered white.

And I was glad; wild feelings came
And shook me as I stood.
I turned a pagan without shame
And garbed me for the wood.

I walked that night amid the drift
Of ever-deepening white;
A great wind howled, but I made shift,
On lost paths without fright.

For I am made to love the wind—
The rebel blast that dares
Unsettle the dead peace of earth
With fresh, imperious airs.

And I am made to love the snow,
That insect, winged white,
Flying in million forms low
Between the dusk and night.

Soon I adventured up the brook
Where untracked snow was deep;
The woods were like a fairy dream,
All nature lay asleep.

And when the storm grew so wild
That homeward I retreated,
In hollows dim the drift was piled,
And joyfully defeated.

Through sanctuarial woods I fled,
Where bending trees did duty,
And the wild wind about my head
Sang a fierce song of beauty.

ANOTHER WAY TO MAKE COFFEE

Dear Editor and Social Corner Members: This is the first time I have written to the Corner page. I have been a reader of the page 12 or 13 years and I am quite interested in the same. I saw two or three weeks ago a sister wrote about salt in the coffee. I put a good sized pinch of salt, also a level teaspoon of dry mustard. I have made it this way more than a half century and I always find it good. I hope someone will try my way and report if as good as yours. A well wisher to the Corner and God speed the Social Corner ever and onward.

LUSITANIA.

CARD SHOWER FOR BRAVE SUGGESTED

Dear Social Corner Members: I wish to thank A Social Corner Member for dainty calendar, which I received new year's—a very pretty scene along the country highway, or might call it boulevard. I have it hung over my desk. I never tear off the leaves, and I have all I have ever received—I believe eight of them.

I. J. B.: Your miracles were very good. I had no cream so used milk. I think another time I will use 1-4 teaspoon of butter with the tablespoon of milk.

Uncle Ben's Daughter: Your cookies were fine. I usually have a cookie batter rather soft so at first didn't get sour enough. The first pan came out rather thin. I added more flour and they were all right.

The colices and greenbugs days are over. What next on the program? February is a month of great events. I heard a sister say one time that February and August were the two worst months in the year for her. I remarked that in those two months the two greatest events of my life happened. And I was born in August and married in February.

Theoda: I am thinking of you often. Wish I could help you out some in person.

Hopeful: Was real pleased to see a letter from you after so long a time. Come often. If you can't meet with us you can be with us in spirit.

Joan: I don't think there ever was but one Hopeful. Mrs. Nickols wrote under the name of Hope. She attended the second picnic in 1915 and died very soon after. I am sorry to have missed the meeting this week but too much ice for me. I haven't been off this hill but once since the last gathering; then I went to church. This is the time of year I have to stay in.

I can't compete with the sisters on rug making this winter. My wrist is still too lame. But I can cut out bedquilt pieces and sew them on the machine. I enjoy that work. I can't do very much crocheting either, but I can keep busy with some thing.

I hear the editor say, enough. Hoping the sick are well on the road to recovery and sympathy to all the bereaved ones. I am as usual.

RECOLLECTIONS OF EARLY DAYS

Dear Social Corner sisters: We surely can say, at last, enough ice. Am in hopes the old saying about the groundhog will be true for it's been cloudy all right today (Feb. 2.)

Billie asked me for our early recollections. How well I remember the early springs in Hartford listening for the hurdy-gurdy to play. It was drawn by a horse and was kept on Front street. I would follow it until I got lost and could not find my way home for I was almost at the other end of the city and yet when I chance to hear one now I don't feel like running after it but I stay by the window until it is gone.

There's another funny little thing I have often thought of. When a little wee girl I used to come from Hartford and stay for the summer with my grandparents in Lebanon and all small chicks, calves, cats, and pigs, I wanted to keep tiny so they would be small. My grandpa had a dandy lot of little pigs and one I liked best had a curly tail so I often teased to take it. Once my grandpa was across the road to a neighbor's and the hired man said why yes if I greased my hands I could catch him so I got some butter and into the pig house I went, clean dress, greased hands and all. But never have I forgotten, if I was young, the catching of that little curly tailed pig. Well I did get it and then I took it up stairs in the house and hid it in the closet and thought I could make it go to sleep when I did but little curly tail got out, and my grandma came home and she wondered what all the racket was about and started up the stairs. I cried, "Grandma bring up the butter, so I can grease my hands cos I can't catch my little pig."

Well can you guess the look on her face! Well I never will forget it as long as I live and oh, I was glad that I wasn't the hired man.

Necia: I should like to for March, and Black-eyed Susie she was a little dear with those dishes. Let you both know later.

True Blue: How is the needle? Busy?

EFFIE M.

GREETINGS FROM WHITE CLOVER

Dear Editor and Sisters: Now I am going to try and take time and write a short letter.

Brave is in St. Joseph's hospital and don't the sisters think it would be nice to send her a card as I just heard from Theoda and she says Brave is better and I could go in and see her.

Remember Me: Where are you now? I have not seen a letter from you for a long time.

Anna Mell: I am going to call on you some day soon.

Biddy: Are you going to ride the goat soon?

Bon Ami: You have my heartfelt sympathy I am sure. I know what it is.

Diamond: You, too, have my heartfelt sympathy. I hope your little son is better by this time.

Cabbage Salad: Select a firm head of white cabbage and shred as much of the vegetable as you wish to serve. Measure, and to every two cups of cabbage add one medium sized red apple, cored and cut in strips, but not pared, and one-half teaspoon chopped pimento or green pepper. Moisten with salad dressing and garnish with nut meats. Serve the salad very soon after it is made.

Palmleaf: I hope you are feeling better and I wish you could get out to the meetings. When it comes warmer maybe you can get out to them.

Well, I must stop this time; will try and write a longer letter next time.

WHITE CLOVER.

CHILDREN AND FOOLS HAVE NO FEAR

Dear Social Corner Friends: When one sees so much written in the Corner the wonder comes where to begin.

Nema: I enjoyed reading of your early recollections and the bonnets. I remember of wearing the same kind in a city of the middle west. Do you think we could get little girls of this day and time to wear them? Not if they were the style. They would say: "Too much bonnet." I went to Sunday school twice at 9 a. m. and 1:30 and thought nothing of it.

On the death of a sister my mother went to Cincinnati and brought to our home a cousin, near my own age, but a little older. What one didn't think of the other did. Somehow we took it into our little heads whereever we saw crepe on a door we must see the corpse. I was always the spokesman. Would go to the door and ask to see the corpse. I can't remember of ever being refused. One day we went to an old dilapidated house and asked permission. We entered the kitchen were taken upstairs, through a long hall to a room. When we viewed this corpse we were scared stiff. It was a young girl and she was foaming at the mouth. We hadn't seen anything like that before. In those days there was not much embalming among the poor. The visits had always been kept from mother but this time it tortured us so we could not keep it and just had to tell her. Then came a lecture of the danger we were in of getting some disease. Then another fright took hold of us. That ended our escapades in that line. It may be well said, that: Children and fools have no fear.

Kitty Lou: Did you know you have an admirer in me? Hope to meet you and others some day—By the sea.

Uncle Sams Daughter: Tried the cookies. They were fine. Will send in some recipes sometime and want you to try them.

Calla Lily: Was talking to one of your admirers yesterday. Will tell you when I come to Buckingham Memorial but it won't be until the blue birds sing and the robins are nesting.

Crimson Rambler and John: Answer my letter.

Greetings to Diana and Balsam Fir. Aunt Sarah: Dont you live near me?

BILLIE.

HOW TO REMOVE STAINS FROM TABLE LINEN

Dear Cornerites: Fruit stains may be removed from linen and other washable material by using boiling water from a height. Peach and pear stains need frost. Coffee and tea stains also respond to hot water poured from a height.

Blood may be removed by soaking in Rinso and cold water, or washing in ivory soap and cold water, or covering with a paste of raw starch.

Remove chocolate stains by sprinkling stain with borax and soak in cold water and warm water.

Iron rust may be removed by using Carters Rust Eradicator, lemon, oxgaline, or oxalic acid.

Ink stains are sometimes removed by soaking in milk, or in salt and lemon juice, but Carters inky racer always works.

On medicine stains use alcohol, and eradicate paint stains with turpentine or benzine. As for gold paint, use gasoline.

Wax may be removed by using blotter paper and a hot iron, and again use lemon juice on mildew, if you place article at once in sunshine and place on grass.

Place these on your cupboard door, and linen closet and youll know just where to look for help in these difficulties.

Yours as ever for the Corner.

NEIGHBOR EVEREADY.

USES FOR A CORN POPPER

Dear Sisters of the Corner: You remember once on a time a corn popper was used only for popping corn, but now its uses threaten to become as multiplied as those of madam's hairpins that meet every emergency.

In washing raisins, currants, and other small fruit put them in a corn popper, hold under the faucet and the water carries away dust and stems and there is no danger of crushing the fruit or having it washed away.

When small pieces of bread or croutons are to be toasted put them in a cornpopper and hold them over a moderate fire. Shake often so all will toast.

When a large number of eggs are to be boiled, put them in a cornpopper, fasten on the cover and lower into a large kettle of water. When done lift out and hold unger the cold water faucet. The shells will then slip off easily.

When a little flour is needed for thickening a gravy or dressing and the bin is empty pour a small sack of oat flakes into a corn popper. Shake the fine parts through and use them for the sauce.

In potting plants put the soil in an old cornpopper and shake briskly. The stones will remain in the popper and can be thrown away.

Equal parts of milk, ammonia and water will clean brown shoes.

An excellent way to darn merino underwear neatly and thoroughly is to tack on a sufficiently large piece of mosquito netting to cover the thin places on the hole. Darn through the net. This makes it very firm.

The life of window shades that have become cracked and broken can be prolonged by laying them flat on the floor and painting them with ordinary oil paint. Let the first side dry before painting the other.

If a piece of woolen cloth is placed on the floor where glass has been broken all the tiny particles will stick to it and thus be removed.

ETHELYN.

KEEP ON KEEPING ON

Dear Editor and Social Corner Sisters: Already 31 days gone of the new year 1925. And now we are beginning on the second month, the shortest month of the year. Most always its worst weather of the season is crowded in the 28 days. Somehow I have always been glad they took away two days instead of adding on three. Had its sun shone on the second day of this month we could have expected six weeks more of winter weather. The days passing so quickly makes me think of a little song we used to sing in school. Take care of the minutes, they come and are gone. Yet in each there is space for some good to be done.

I wonder if we all think of that? In closing I will leave this message.

"If the day look's kinder gloomy
And your chances kinder slim,
If the situation's puzzlin'
And the prospect's awful grim
And perplexities keep pressin'
Till all hope is nearly gone,
Just bristle up and grit your teeth
And keep on keeping on.

Dorinda; I thank you.
Best wishes from

BON AMI.

CLUB NO. 1'S DONATION DAY

Dear Editor and Social Corner Sisters: Club No. 1 will meet at Labor Union hall, Main street, Willimantic, Feb. 10th. Bring implements for eating as usual, also something to eat. We hope there will be a good number there from all clubs.

It is our annual donation day for the needy. Let us make it the banner year as there are many needy in our city, with little children to be fed and kept in school. Anything in the line of vegetables, canned goods, etc., will be gladly distributed.

Our dear sister Tidy Addly (Mrs. Williard) was the originator of the plan of setting this month aside for the donation party. Surely she left a pleasant memory and a nice task for us to carry out. It was so like her to think of others less fortunate than her dear self. Let us do it with pleasure while thinking of her.

AMY.

CHANCE FOR POSTCARD SHOWER

Dear Social Corner Sisters and Editor: Rosemary's mother will be 89 on the 8th of February. A nice shower of birthday cards from the Corner sisters would certainly please the dear old lady.

A SOCIAL CORNER READER.

CLUB NO. 2's GATHERING

Dear Editor and Social Corner Sisters: What a nice time we all did have at our Corner gathering of Club No. 2 this week! The Social Corner sure is a good place to cure the blues and make one forget their cares and troubles. And such a dinner as we did have! I heard one of the sisters say they didn't know when they had enjoyed such a fine dinner at the Social Corner. I am sure every one must have done their duty this time, and sisters, how much better it makes one feel to know that each and everyone has done their part. I know it always makes me feel better at heart when I know I have contributed my bit and helped in some way, even though it may be small.

Everyone seems so jolly and good natured, no wonder visitors like to come again. There is one thing though that I think we all ought to be particular about. That is, to abide by the Social Corner rule, that when we ask anyone to come to our Corner it should be understood that they are expected first to write a letter to the Corner asking to become a member, and then make occasional contributions to the Corner page.

I am afraid we have wandered a little from our path of duty in this matter, and if we are not careful, we will have more then we can handle. If I understand it correctly, I believe no one should come to dinner at the Corner unless they are members, so I think we ought to keep that rule in force and furnish dinners only to our members. I was one of the helpers at our February 4th gathering, so naturally thought more about this matter. I wonder what the sisters think about this.

True Blue: You certainly made a fine hostess. I hope you did not over do, for you sure did work hard.

Bonie: It seemed good to have you with us for a few moments, anyway. Hope the sick ones are improving.

Best wishes to the editor and all the sisters.

WHITE DAWN.

SHUT IN BY SICKNESS

Dear Sisters: As I could not go to the meeting Wednesday I thought I would write to you all.

I have been shut up for over a week now. I was taken sick a week ago Sunday and the doctor thought I was going to have pneumonia, so he had me go to bed and I stayed four days. I was glad to get up again, but I have not been outdoors yet. I am waiting for a good pleasant day.

True Blue: I was sorry to disappoint you but you see I could not go. I asked my mother to take my place. How did you make out with the new menu? I hope you are well; also your sister. Remember me to her.

Savilla: Did you get to the meeting Wednesday? It is such bad walking I was thinking it would be hard for you to get down the hill. How are you and your family? All well I hope.

Eugenia: How are you these days? I hope your hubby is feeling better now? L. S. tells me when she hears from you. Yes, my apples are all gone and I am sorry for they were fine apples.

Catnip: I was going to send the money for that lace Wednesday by mother but she did not stop. Will get it to you soon. I suppose you are kept busy these days.

Ora: I am very sorry you are not feeling so well, but hope you are on the gain by now.

Aunty No. 1: Did you get out Wednesday? I bet you could have had a good slide down your hill if it is as slippery as it is here.

To the shutins an dthe sick I send my sympathy and hope it will be so you all can get out soon.

Best wishes to all LO.

HELPING THE SICK ONES

Dear Sisters of the Social Corner: I have been busy taking care of Mr. Bonie and son, Mary Ann, Friendly and Bobbie Junior with the grip. I have been too busy to write and thank the kind sisters who remembered me with cards on my birthday, Jan. 13.

Paula, Windham Blue Bell, True Blue, Hope, Jennie, I. J. B., and also one who signed "a Friend" and who wrote a beautiful note. I do not know who it was but I wish to thank them through the Social Corner page. It is nice to think you are not forgotten.

They also spoke of the little sunshine was left to me to fill a vacant place left by "Bee" and we are indeed grateful for the Lord's goodness for the dear little fellow.

I could not meet with you Jan. 7 but will try and be with you at the next meeting.

We have missed "Goody" from our meetings but she has been busy taking care of Mr. Goody who has also been very sick. They are both on the gain at present.

Cypress: Please accept my sympathy in the loss of your little one.

Tiddley Winks has been sick also. I wish to thank the one who remembered me with such a beautiful calendar. I recieved one last year.

Can any one answer the following question: Why will the emblem of America outlive those of England, France, Ireland or Scotland?

Will tell the answer when I hear from some of the sisters. Will have to lay down my pen or the editor will think I am trying to write a book.

Hoping the sick will recover their health and those in sorrow receive strength. I remain yours for the Social Corner.

BONIE.

AN ENJOYABLE BIRTHDAY

Dear Editor and Members of the Social Corner: I wish to thank all who sent me greetings and cards on my recent birthday, Pices, Uno, Trixy and others. It certainly is very pleasant to be remembered at such a time. Kentucky Wonder made me a nice birthday cake and invited me over to dinner and supper, and altogether the day was very enjoyable.

Butterfly: I wish I had that pocketbook I read about recently. I'd come up and take you and all the other Cornerites up there to ride in a new sedan. We would go over and call on Olga, and listen to her radio. Perhaps she would let us bring her beauty prize back with us. I am sure we would have to go some to get that.

Lonesome: We missed you at the Putnam picnic.

Rosy Posy: I am sorry you had a fall, and hope you have recovered. I am wondering what street you live on. I am at 71 Broad.

Twice Twenty: Your suggestion is fine and it may materialize.

With best wishes to you all.

DAISY DEAN.

NOT LIKE OLD TIME WINTERS

Dear Social Corner: I wish all the members of the Social Corner a happy New Year, if not to late, and will just say hello at this time. I have been waiting to find time to write a short letter but somehow it did not come. The sisters letters have been especially interesting to me the past few weeks and I have enjoyed reading them. We have had some very cold weather through January but not much like it used to be. I was reading in the paper how much this winter seemed like the old fashioned ones but I can remember when they were much more severe. Snow would be three or four feet deep, even with the walls, and many times the children on their way to school would walk on the top of it, it would be crusted so hard. And then it would be terribly cold for days at a time, and the wheels would sing as people rode along on the street. Sometimes when there was a bad storm, I remember my father had to shovel to get the door open. The snow would be packed half way upon the outside. Now our cold spells do not last but a day or two, and the snow is very light and easy to sweep or shovel.

I want to say right here that the Social Corner picnic of Club No. 4 in Putnam was a decided success. We just couldn't help having a good time the way every thing was planned for us.

Cactus Blossom, Daisy Dean and Kentucky Wonder took the 10:10 trolley at Danielson and Twice Twenty joined us at Dayville four corners. At the center expected that May B was coming to be one of our number but she went right along. We were very sorry not to have her company. Hope she will come to the next meeting of the club.

I hope Cactus Blossom is enjoying herself in the sunny south and that she will send us her address so we can send her a card.

KENTUCKY WONDER, (Sept. 11.)
Danielson.

AN AFTERNOON BLOUSE

Dear Sisters: This is to tell you how to make an afternoon blouse out of your husband's silk shirt.

Cut the sleeves to elbow length and the shirt to hip length. The piece cut off the back I inserted in front to replace button holes and to give fullness. The front pieces and parts of the sleeves, make the round collar and cuffs.

Bits of bright embroidery floss remnants trimmed them nicely. The whole sewed on and the sash with tassels which had been used completes the fashionable long waisted blouse, which is very useful.

A lump of sugar saturated with lemon juice will cure hiccough. It must be eaten slowly.

The best thing to whiten hands is lemon juice. Rub a little in every time after washing.

Oat meal water: (to clear blood) Put a heaping tablespoon of fine oatmeal into a tumbler of cold water. Allow it to stand all night and in the morning stir it up well. Let the thickest part settle again and then drink the clear part. This should be continued for two or three weeks, and what it will do in the way of clearing the complexion is really very remarkable.

Fainting proceeds from different causes; the commonest being a disturbance in the circulation of the blood in the brain. For an ordinary fainting fit lay the patient flat. Great harm often resulted from the treatment by ignorant people in trying to make a patient sit up, or propping up the head with pillows. To send back the blood from the heart to the brain, the flat posture is absolute necessary. Let the patient lie so that the feet are higher than the head. Throw open the clothes about the chest and throat, spong the face with cold water, and give some cold water to drink.

HOW TO DYE A CARPET

Dear Social Corner and Sisters: Am going to send in a recipe for making old faded carpets look like new with the use of diamond dyes. First prepare your dye as for use in dyeing any kind of wool garment. Then clean your carpet thoroughly, clean as can be done on the floor. Sweep all the dust from it and then take a clean mop and a pail of clean soap suds, partly dry the mop and wipe over the carpet to take the remainder of the dust if any and then take a large paint brush and apply the dye as if you were going to paint it. It will not change the color of the figure in the carpet but make it look as nice as new and practically as good as a new carpet. I am going to try it on one of my carpets this spring at house cleaning time. I have a friend in Greenfield and who has a carpet and a rug that she dyed and they are very nice. You would think that they were new. I am going to thank the Social Corner sisters for the beautiful cards that they sent to me while I have been shut in since the first of December 1924. Have been out but three times since then and have suffered with my head each time so I think it best to stay indoors till warm weather comes. With best wishes to all of the Social Corner sisters.

SAUERKRAUT IN SALADS

Dear Corner Sisters: This week I'll send in a few more of the sauerkraut recipes hoping the sisters will try them.

Sauerkraut-Rice Salad: 1-2 cup rice, 2 cups boiling water slightly salted, 2 tablespoons shredded green pepper, 2 tablespoons red pepper, 1 tablespoon parsley finely cut, 3 tablespoons minced onion, 3 tablespoon lemon juice, 1 teaspoon salt, 6 hard cooked eggs, 1-2 cup French dressing, lettuce, 2 cups sauerkraut. Cook rice in boiling salted water until done, drain, add to cooked rice the finely chopped hard cooked eggs, the shredded peppers, parsley, onion, lemon juice and salt. Arrange lettuce leaves on a platter, place mixture in a mound in the center of the platter. Arrange two cups sauerkraut around the sides and top of the mound. Pour over all the French dressing.

Sauerkraut-Carrot Salad: 2 cups sauerkraut, 5 medium sized carrots, 1-2 cup unbroken English walnut halves, 1 cup cream dressing, lettuce. After washing and scraping carrots run through the coarse knife of food chopper, combine with sauerkraut, add cream dressing and decorate with the walnut halves.

Sauerkraut Tuna-fish Salad: 2 cups flaked tuna fish, 2 cups sauerkraut, 1 cup diced celery, 2 tablespoons onion juice, 1 tablespoon chopped capers, or a few stuffed olives. Combine ingredients and serve with cooked dressing on lettuce leaves. Salmon, or any cold cooked fish may be used instead of the tuna fish.

GREETINGS FROM MAVIS

Dear Social Corner Editor and Members: How is this for winter? I have been so busy all the month of January that I have not written to thank the sisters that sent me cards and letters and will write them soon.

Sister Jennie: I have your address and will send you mine. I shall try to go to Willimantic in March and hope to meet you some time. I enjoy your letters. Received a nice letter from Anna Z.

Best wishes for the Corner.

MAVIS.

ACKNOWLEDGES CALENDAR

Sincerely,

GRANGER.

WORKING UP A RAINCOAT

Dear Social Corner Folks: When I read Crimson Rambler's letter Saturday I got busy, dug out a silk gauze raincoat which was given me, ripped out the sleeves, make a sink apron from most of the back and a bag for bedslippers. After running a machine needle around the edges I crocheted in the holes with pink silkateen, turned over the top to outside about two inches and after running a needle around there again took two needles with double silkateen and pulled through each way so that bag closes when the strings are pulled.

Then I took the worn lower edge, trimmed clear around and tacked on the edge of a rattling door. I cut two pieces the size of one page of the Bulletin, crocheted them together with fine white cotton for a table mat to clean vegetables on, so I can gather up refuse and put it in stove or pail.

I took a piece of the coat above the hem and faced the bottom of a dress shirt, made eight pairs of dress shields to go under the arms of dresses, and even used the double seams of the coat for loops to tack on the attic door to hang blankets and clothing from, made bags from Bulletins to put things in to tie to the loops. I used most of the thread from the seams to mend rugs as it was chain stitch and strong, and the impossible bits I put in the middle of holders made from cast away mittens to use around the stove.

Kitty Lou: We expect more from our loved ones. Strangers of an hour we forget soon. Neighbors we give and take alike. I have the best ever.

Was pleased to get a card from Dry Mills and I thank the sender of the calendar.

RESTRICTIONS ON CLUB DINNERS

Dear Editor and Social Corner Sisters: The Social Corner meetings of Club No. 2 are becoming more like a restaurant than a woman's social function. Outsiders are coming in too frequently.

The real order of the Social Corner is that a sister may invite one guest. She can only have a guest once and then if she likes must ask by letter to become a member and not until then may she come again.

Above all our sisters must not bring in men from their work to partake of the dinner. There is not the right spirit about our Social Corner. At every meeting nine women out of ten eat their fill and go and do not care about the very few that are left to do the work. It is making it very hard for the hostess. In fact it is hard to get a hostess for the sisters do not co-operate.

Sisters who were and are not on the committee have the same sentiments.

ONE OF THE HOSTESSES.

INTERESTED IN THE CORNER

Editor Social Corner: I have been a reader of the Social Corner for a number of years and have enjoyed it very much. So in a way seem quite acquainted with some of the writers by their pen names and wonder if I do not know some of them personally.

I have been interested in some of the good things from the pen of J. E. T., especially some of the dinners that she has thrown together sometimes at a very short notice.

Last week a very good remedy for indigestion came from her. Now I wonder who he or she is.

Perhaps she knows a bit about me as I remember she at one time wrote about a little village just north of the city.

Come on J. E. T. do you remember a little house at the foot of the hill and a little school house about half way up the hill? If so I think that I can spell your name.

Grace: You may think that this is Bitsy, but it is N. O. T.

WHEN A TIN WHISTLE IS SWALLOWED

Dear Social Corner: I have not written for quite a long time. As there have been so many good letters and a full page I waited, but now will take a small space to reply to one of the sisters who wante dto know why we should say "Dear Editor" or "Dear Sisters" when we do not know them.

Now for me I think the editor is kind to give us so much of his time and paper. Therefore I think it is dear of him. And the sisters give us so much good advice, hints and how to make good things they are dear to me, or at least all I know are and I think they are all alike so I am glad to call them "dear."

Some have asked and are telling about early days. I can't say how old I was but maybe six when as I was going to school I got a round tin whistle in my throat and if any mother has that happen in her family just give the child crackers to eat and water to drink. It brought relief for me and some of the readers of the Bulletin in Hope Valley, R. I. can remember it.

I. J. B.: Did you get home from church all right? Now you know.

I will stop and let some one else write. Best wishes.

AURALEE, (Dec. 5.)
Preston.

MONICA PUDDING

Dear Sisters of the Social Corner: "Days are getting longer," said the one who keeps a lookout for the first robin.

"I don't notice the difference," said another.

"They seem as usual getting longer if you count from one pay-day to the next and shorter if you figure your time between next days."

The above in some ways makes me think of the teacher who asked the scholar nearest the foot of the class to pronounce s-t-i-n-g-y, and the smart boy stood up and said it depended a great deal whether the word applied to a man or a bee."

Monica Pudding: 3 tablespoons melted crisco, 2 cups milk, 1-2 cup flour, 3 eggs, 1-4 cup sugar, 1-4 teaspoon salt, 1-2 teaspoon vanilla.

MACABEE.

JOINS THE CORNER

Dear Social Corner Editor: I enjoy reading the Social Corner letters every week and I would like to join, I will take for my pen name,

FORGET-ME-NOT.

GREETINGS FROM KOCHIE

Dear Social Corner Friends: I have not written but have given the space to others. How glad I am from week to week lately to read some of the letters from the older members, which indeed seems like old times when the Corner was young. But some of the new writers have been quite interesting.

Grandma Gray: How I miss your friendly letters. I only hope you are well as usual.

And Rural Aunty of course is enjoying her radio, and I am so glad it was so you could have one for these lonely days when one has to be shut in.

I see most of the writers enjoyed the eclipse. It certainly was a wonderful sight. From my place we had a good view of it. Once I had decided to go to Mount Misery and joint old Cluey Watson and rest my weary bones in the Devil's Arm chair. But Cluey would rather be alone at such a time. For afterwards he would stroll up Willey brook and look after his traps along the trail. No one knows if Cluey took along his new snowshovel that he trailed overland through Stone Hill to Jewett City and purchased.

Ma of Greene Gables and Bug: How are you these days? No weather for autos for joy rides. Wonderful weather to sit at home and read by the glow of the home fires.

I wonder if any of the readers were able to get to Norwich last week and attend the poultry show which was held three days and evenings.

Perhaps I have taken space enough so will ring off with best wishes.

THE OLD WESTMINSTER PARSONAGE

Dear Editor and Readers: My name has been absent for so long from the Corner page that I wonder it has not been dropped ere this; but the receipt of the very pretty calendar, for which I thank the giver, shows that it has not.

I was much grieved to hear that the parsonage at Westminster had burned. Built originally as a tavern by my great grandfather, I could imagine the great coach with its prancing horses drawing up with a flourish at the door to deposit the tired, way worn travellers journeying from Providence to Hartford. After removing the dust of travel they would sit down to a bountiful supper prepared by my greatgrandmother, and afterwards the young folks would go to the ballroom upstairs as it was called, with its dome shaped ceiling and there dance Hull's Victory or the minuet to the strains of Great Uncle Albert's or Marcellus' fiddle, or maybe listen to sweet tones of the dulcimers which great great-grandfather made for his daughters. Now maybe this picture is all wrong; if so Cousin A. who lives in the old homstead built before the parsonage will set me right. Was so glad it was not this building that burned for although the parsonage was worth much more from a monetary point of view the memories clinging around the old homestead are priceless, and I am looking forward to the day when the new state road over Little River, the "missing link" will be built, and I can hear again those stories of the old days which always had such a fascination for me.

And now for the eclipse. I wonder if any one missed it and if so why? I think I agree with Will Rogers that it was over advertised. I couldn't seem to see anything so wonderful in the moon passing between the earth and the sun. And the colors; we have countless sunsets and rainbows much more beautiful. As for the shadows, I have seen wierder and more fearful ones on a moonlight night going from a friend's home in old Gay Head to my own when passing two cemeteries. Why, I even took my hatpin out in self defense. And it was so short. One hardly saw it before it was gone. The wonderful part to me was that any one could forteil just when it would take place, how long it would last, and in just what region it would be visible. And how wonderful that I should be set down on this earth at just the right time and just the right place so I could see it! The sky was overcast with clouds earlier in the morning but the creator drew the curtain aside at just the right moment so that I might not miss the one opportunity of a lifetime.

The sisters are writing about the radio. It is certainly a God send to those who for any reason are unable to get away from home. And the beauty of it is, after we have our set, we have as much chance of listening to the best music, and hearing the best lectures as the richest man in town. The air is free. I listened to a very good debate a few weeks ago on the child labor amendment. By the way, I haven't heard it mentioned by anyone in the Corner yet. Although it has been defeated by the necessary one fourth it is still a live issue—very much alive—and I think the sisters might drop the subject of stepmothers, and soap making to take this up. Grand Juror can help us.

To digress from the subject a bit: What do you soap makers put in the soap to scent it? I would like it if it would have a nice clean odor. I tried oil of citronella once as recommended but didn't like it. Maybe if I made it as the recipe sent in, that would be all that would be necessary.

I could go on writing forever now, that I have started but think I'd better leave a tiny space in the page for Bluebird, Rainbow and Peggy Anne.

Sincerely,

PERSIS.

Manchester Green.

A LETTER OF THANKS

Dear Editor and Corner Writers: The calendar which I received was much appreciated and I wish to thank the sender. The picture is just the kind I care for.

Also thank Pedestrian for her kind message which meant much to me. If it were possible I would write more to her.

I, too, am fond of the bayberries. Have made many winter bouquets of them combined with bittersweet berries.

HEPATICA.

THE WRITING OF LETTERS

Dear Sisters: Thanks, first of all, to A Social Corner Member for calendar. You must spend a bit of time studying us up in order to send such appropriate ones to each individual. Mine was just what I should pick for myself—a Puritan lady rocking a cradle.

I wish all who could would take time to send cards or a letter to Eloise. She has been very sick for some weeks with heart trouble and I know she would be pleased.

Now that we have more time to give to the writing of letters, let us be careful about the kind we write. In summer one can go out of doors and work off the bad effects of a thoughtless letter. In winter one has more seclusion and time to ponder over and dwell upon the contents. We each and all have plenty of real troubles and it only adds to them to get a letter from a friend or relative dwelling most exclusively upon the fact that their husbands are skinflints or the neighbors and their young ones are nuisances, or their mother-in-law soaks her bread in her tea. There is likely to be serious sickness in the home where such a letter is delivered. It doesn't lighten the burden of the one who receives it, nor does it elevate the character of the writer. It is hard to answer such letters. There are so many pleasant things to write about, let us leave self-pity and scandal alone. Once your thought is down on paper and in the hands of the other fellow you may live to regret exceedingly the things you write in anger or when feeling a bit blue. If we want sympathy let us have some excuse worth it; if we want pity, which no self-respecting person cares

IN NORWICH FIFTY YEARS AGO

Senator William A. Buckingham passed away at his home in Norwich, 50 years ago February 4th after a lengthy illness. The whole city went into mourning and tributes were received by the family from all parts of the country. In the senate a committee of senators was appointed to come to Norwich to attend the funeral. In Norwich public buildings were draped, flags placed at half mast and the officials voted to attend the services in a body, and, at Sedgwick Post G. A. R. similar action was taken.

Items from the Bulletin of 1875 in part were as follows:

Monday, February 1, 1875—The City of Norwich ran aground on the west shore of the river near Montville on her Friday night trip, and lay there all day. The City of Lawrence went up from New London to haul her off Saturday afternoon but could not do so even with the aid of the high tide. The damage to the boat will be repaired in a few days once she is freed and she will again resume her regular trips.

The fishing around Block Island is unusually good this year. One day last week a crew of five men took 5,000 pounds of cod and haddock.

Henry Hayes, formerly of this city, has gone into business with J. B. Palmer & Co., the extensive clothiers of Boston.

The ladies are wearing white silk scarfs tied around their necks in large bows, thus following the latest London fashion. The new way for the women to dress their hair is to part it on one side and sweep it straight across the forehead.

Tuesday, February 2, 1875—At a meeting of the common countil last evening it was decided to discharge the committee in charge of securing a site for the clock now on the Central Baptist church. It was reported that it cost $80 a year to keep it in running order and to remove it and repair the steeple would cost $50. The vote was then taken to indefinitely postpone the matter.

Mayor Greene suggested that next year the legislature be requested, to authorize and enforce the city to add $2,000 each year for thirty years to the sinking fund, thus at the end of that period the city could pay its $186,000 of bonds. Mayor Greene said that this system would not be noticeable and that he did not believe in putting burdens on posterity. The suggesiton was reduced to a resolution and adopted.

The Norwich Town route has been temporarilly abandoned by the manager of the horse railroad, at least until snow and ice are cleared from the rails. Service to Greeneville will be the same as in the past.

William Elting is to operate a line of sleights to Bean Hill and Norwich Town as long as this method of travel remains.

Wednesday, February 3, 1875—The necessity of a fire alarm telegraph was clearly demonstrated last evening When the alarm of fire came in one company started to the West Side another to Greeneville and another for up town. Had the fire been larger the misunderstanding might have resulted in a big loss.

At a meeting of the Union Political club last evening the following officers were elected: president, Patrick Mahoney; vice president, James Duggan; secretary, John F. Moran; treasurer, P. J. O'Connor.

The City of Norwich pulled by three steamers and with the aid of high tide remained fast yesterday on the west shore. She will have to remain there until a blow up the river raises a high tide.

The fall of snow Saturday totalled over 8 inches in and around Norwich and sleighing is again at its best on Broadway and Washington street, many fast horses being out every night now that the police have lifted the ban against racing.

Thursday, February 4, 1875—There are good prospects that Norwich will soon have a new industry. An effort was made some time ago to establish a manufacturing plant for cotton hosiery in this city. J. N. Perry has secured one of the machines and the necessary operatives and has opened a place in the J. Hunt Smith building on Franklin street. There are but three sets of these machines in the country and it is a novelty to go to his shop and see this one worked.

Chappell &Co. were busy yesterday saving $7,000 worth of lumber from the river. The hardest rain of the year fell all day Wednesday and the river began to rise at a rapid rate. The water is still high and there is danger of a freshet.

Massachusetts prisoners seem to be having an epidemic of sickness. Reports early this week gave out that over 200 of the 600 prisoners in jails in that state were ill.

Friday, February 5, 1875—To say that yesterday was the most uncomfortable day within the memory of the oldest inhabitant would be putting it mildly. Between sunset Wednesday and sunrise Thursday morning there was a fall of 50 degrees. People almost refused to believe their eyes when they looked at thermometers Thursday morning. In fact during the day there was hardly a person on the street and the only comfortable man was one with two wooden legs and a rubber nose, seen walking near Franklin square. It wasn't the cold so much that made the day a mean one, but the cold wind which howled like a wilderness all day, rendered it so penetrating. The only good feature of the whole day was that it prevented a freshet, the ice, broken up by the warm spell Wednesday, being frozen in once more as it reached the Thames.

The sale of tickets for Theodore Thomas' concert is progressing rapidly. There will be a special train from Norwich to New London and other specials will be run from Mystic and Stonington.

Saturday, February 6, 1875—The New London navy yard has still a chance for life, inasmuch as the house appropriation committee has decided to report in favor of confining the navy yard appropriations to four yards, New London getting $40,000. There is a chance however that the appropriation for the New London yard may be struck out in the senate should it be adopted in the house.

The Hon. William a Buckingham died at his home in this city Thursday night. Mr. Buckingham had been ill for several months. Mr. Buckingham was born in the town of Lebanon, May 28, 1804 and until he was 18 years of age he worked with his father on the farm. He then taught school in Lyme for a year and at the age of 20 entered a dry goods store in this city as clerk. When 22 years of age he established himself in the dry-goods business continuing in this line until 1848. In 1830 he commenced the manufacture of ingrain carpeting and in 1848 he retired and interested himself in various manufactures in which he was largely interested.

From the time of his first residence in Norwich he was a firm temperance man and a devoted friend of education. In 1830 he became a member of the Second Congregational church, and ten years later was one of the organizers of the Broadway church, being elected a deacon at that time, serving in that capacity until his death. He gave the organ to the church and built the mission chapel. He also gave funds to this and other churches, to the Norwich Free Academy and other schools. He also believed in the consolidation of Norwich schools.

Up to the year 1849 he took no prominent part in politics but in 1842 he had been nominated for the state legislature, being defeated. In 1849 he was elected mayor of Norwich and was twice re-elected at later periods. With the disruption of the whig party he joined the republican party and in 1858 was elected governor of Connecticut, holding that office for eight years. Here he gained national reputation for his service as a war governor. In 1868 he was elected senator and his term was not completed at the time of his death.

He served on many important committees and his judgment of commercial and financial questions was considered of great weight.

In his social and home life he was everything that a man should be, to sum everything up, he was, "A man of honor and a Christian gentleman."

SOCIAL CORNER

to get, lets ask outright and not hurt the other fellow in getting it.

Now is the time to write extra letters home. The old folks look forward to that weekly one of course, but let's surprise them with a pleasant one they're not looking for. The sick and elderly among our acquaintances, how pleased they would be to get a card that wasn't a Christmas or birthday obligation.

You say what shall you write? I have an uncle who is dying with T. B. He contracted the disease from his wife who died a few years ago and now his days are numbered. I drop him a card or letter at odd times about little household affairs. He has long wanted to see my home. I sent him a snapshot of the house and described the rooms, a little personal happening in the day's work, or dear things the children have done or said. He gets so lonesome, the merest drop of interest from outside is like a visit to him. There are several old folks I keep in touch with. You'd really hardly believe how a few bright petals of a plant that is in bloom, added to the letter pleases them.

A friend of mine died of T. B. a few years ago. He had a large family of brothers and sisters to whom he had given help financially, and given cheerfully of his ever ready, cherry disposition at all times. When he was ill and dying—for months they never went near or wrote to him. A few days before he went and when he knew he could live but a few days, he was asked if he did not want some of his folks sent for. He cursed them roundly. After all he had done for them, he said, and they could not even share time to send him a postal card. No, he never wanted to hear their names mentioned again. Such are little things to the healthy, but what mountains to the eyes of the sick. Don't put off sending that card or writing that letter you have meant to get off. Do it now before it is too late!

Diamond, Chub and the others of the family: I can't get used to the thought of H. H. L. not being here. I am only one of those who will miss her.

SUGGESTION WHEN FRYING DOUGHTNUTS

Editor and All Corner Sisters: As I have not written for some time will drop in a few lines. First I want to thank A Corner Member for the pretty calendar which I received. It has a very pretty old time scene of an open fire place which looks quite natural with the andirons with the log on. I often think what would we do in these days if we had to prepare and cook all our meals over the fire as they did years ago! Just think, sisters, of getting up these cold mornings and having to get breakfast as our great grandmas used to do! Also how they had to heat those old brick ovens when they wanted to bake. They had to heat them the day before by kindling a fire in them to heat them hot enough to bake. Then they would sweep the oven all out, then put in the bread, pies and cakes to bake. I am afraid if we had that to do nowadays we would not have such good things to eat as we have at our Corner dinners or as we have brought in when we have our gatherings. I don't think we would have very good luck cooking that way.

I always enjoyed hearing grandma tell how she used to get the oven ready and also how she used to bake her brown bread in large iron dishes, covered up in the coals. Just imagine if we had to do so nowadays! Think there would be many a failure in some of the fancy dishes which are tried and tested. I guess there would be many of us discouraged in learning to cook.

Now I heard a thing the other day and will pass it on to those who never heard of it. When frying doughnuts when you drop them into the fat lay them in so the side that lays down on the board will come up on top. They will not soak the fat as readily and never turn them over but once. I always dropped them in either side up and then turned them as quick as they came up, but now having tried them the other way I find it much better.

Now I will say I was sorry to hear of the sudden death of Sister H. M. L., and all those who have had to part with loved ones have my sympathy. And the same to those who are sick.

Brave: Sorry to hear you are in the hospital again. Hope you will be well and out again soon with us. You certainly have the right pen name.

Breeze: Was glad to hear something from your pen. Hope you and Mr. B. are both well.

L. H. H.: Glad to hear you were nicely cared for before this snow storm. I often think of you all alone down there this cold weather.

Now I will say I am glad to see our page so full. It looks so good for the Corner. Now best wishes to all the sisters also to our editor who has so much patience with all of us.

And long may the Corner live and grow is the wish of C. E. S.

BEE ASKS SOME QUESTIONS

Dear Social Corner Members: Here's greetings to all and especially to Billie. I have so long been on the lookout for a letter in the Corner from you. I think I have somewhere among my treasures a letter or two you wrote me when the Corner was in its infancy. I made several inquiries about you through the Corner but as there were no replies I really thought you had passed on. Within the past few months I tried one more and one good sister whom that she thought you made your home in N. H. winters and still went to S. in the summers. Now why did you drop so completely out of the Corner? I often go to S. now and wonder what was your street and number when you lived there. Now don't run away again.

Aloise Janet: You surely take the prize for raising ones hopes to take a tumble. When I started to read your letter on getting thin I thought sure here is the real thing if it comes from a Social Corner member and then when I saw it was all up in the air I'm sure I gained another pound. Now really sisters are there any of you who have been successful in getting rid of a few pounds? There are so many ways advertised. If you have, be a good samaritan and tell others. I would be only too glad to. If you don't want to put it in the Corner letter with even your pen name please send it to Bee care of the Social Corner editor.

Some sister asked how to remove tea stains. I have good success by pouring boiling water over them, keep lifting the cloth until cool enough to wring and then repeat. If there is milk in the tea first rinse the stain in cold water to loosen the grease in the milk.

Twice Twenty: I really think there is more truth than poetry in the epitaph you sent in.

I wish to extend sympathy to the family of H. M. L. In reading her letters I never had the least idea who she might be, but since her going I find that one of her sons has been to our house in a business way although I never saw him.

J. E. T.: I was much interested in your letter also in that you learned it through a corespondence course. Do you or any one else know anything about the dressmaking and musical courses? One day I met a friend and a young girl was with her. The young girl passed on and I remarked to my friend I wonder where she bought such a pretty dress and she told me the girl made it; that she was taking a course by mail and when she started she hardly knew how to hold a needle.

I guess you'll think I am a question box but next time will try and send a letter on the subject Billie suggested.

Here are a couple of hints: When mixing bread in the winter time, when I wrap it up for night, I place a warm bottle in the wrappings and the bread comes up so nice and light. If your sink freezes up on a cold night place the bottle filled with hot water in the elbow and it will soon be thawed out.

TWO STYLES OF RUGS

Dear Editor, Social Corner Sisters and Brothers: As I have a little spare time will tell the sisters how I made two pretty rugs. One I made from old stockings. Cut the stockings around and around so as to have long strips about one inch wide. Wind these strips closely over a yard stick or other similar stick, the stick to be as long as you wish your rug. Put this over the covered stick with needle and stout thread sew through ticking and rags being careful to follow lines in ticking. After sewing cut along edge of stick with sharp knife. If desired not so thick sew rags to second or third line instead of every line which makes a thick rug much like a hooked one. These rugs are nice looking and very easy to make.

The other rug I braided of blue and white rags. Start rug by braiding blue and white hit or miss until the rug measures 12 or 14 inches across. Now come the blue birds which are made by braiding a short piece to form his wings of all blue. Do this six times in the round of the rug. Next time around make his wing a little wider by having the braid a little longer and so on, braiding and shaping his body reverse for other wing using a bit of tan for feet and legs a bit of red for the eyes. My grandma had a large rug with the forms of four large tortoises in the center of rug their head, feet and tail outspread. Their eyes were green.

One of my early recollections is of spoiling my new dress. When I was four years old mother made me an especially pretty dress of bordered calico. It had small pink rosebuds and green leaves on a tan background. Mother called me in from play to try it on. She was just about to pin up the hem which was all that was needed to finish the dress, when I spied father coming up the street. I ran out to meet him. Instead of coming into the house with him I must show the dress to my playmates who had been waiting outside for me. One little girl took my hand and led me to the next house so as to show the dress to her mother with a wish that she might have one like it. Just then we saw children in the next yard and we hurried over there and found them stuffing themselves with nice large cherries. Some of the older children had climbed the tree and were dropping cherries down to those on the ground. I quickly gathered up and filled my dress with some of the best ones to take home to mother. But what a sight when I took them out! The cherries had stained my dress, taken out all the pink rose buds and leaves and the whole front of my dress was ruined. I was scolded and sent to bed without my supper which was just as well as I was full of cherries.

This (Feb. 2) is ground hog day. I hope we don't have any more winter. I think we all like summer best.

Here are two more tombstone ticklers.

Their warfare is accomplished."

And this one:

"She was in health at 11:30 A. M. and left for heaven at 3:30 P. M."

Must close now and get dinner. With best wishes for you all, I am as ever

KINGSTON BROWN.

ECHOES FROM THE LODGE ROOMS

CATHOLIC LADIES OF COLUMBUS

The regular monthly meeting of Mercier Assembly, No. 13, which was postponed from last Tuesday night will be held in the assembly rooms on this coming Tuesday. There will be several reports to be heard. The committee in charge of the whist and dance which is to be held in the Wauregan Hotel on February 23rd, have held several meetings, and Miss Nonie Nagle, the chairman, reported progress in the distribution and sale of the tickets. On account of the important business matters to come up at the next meeting, it is expected that it will be largely attended.

EAGLES

Norwich Aerie, No. 367, held its regular meeting Monday, Worthy President Timothy Fields presiding. Three applications were accepted for membership.

The committee on the Past Worthy President Class reported progress. The committee intends to have a degree team from New Haven or New Britain if the class is large enough. They expect a class of about fifty.

SONS OF HERMANN

Preparations are well under way for a play to be given at Pulaski hall for the benefit of the building fund of Germania Lodge. The play, which is a laughable farce named "Never Again," deals with the difficulties of one Rufus Fletcher, a crabbed husband and father, who will have nothing to do with his son-in-law, an author, and refuses his consent to the marriage of his other daughter with a poor musician. He also discharges a maid whom he had caught delivering tender epistles between the young lovers. However, he is fond of the company of a pretty girl, and goes to a ball where he meets a gay charmer. His troubles begin when the young lady proves to be a new maid his wife had employed in place of the other girl he had discharged. The young husband and lover discover the old man's pranks and that the two maids are great friends, and the four unite in a conspiracy to bring him to their feet. How they confront him with his wild doings, and finally settle things to everybody's satisfaction, with a narrow escape for Rufus, is ably portrayed by a cast of local young people, including: Joseph Schaffhauser, Julia Ulrich, Gertrude Dierman, Herbert Charnetski, Joseph Kirchner, Anna Voech, Johanna Schaffhauser, Michael Richard, Buster Disco and Margaret Schaffhauser.

The play will be followed by dancing for all. Angus MacDonald will give a clever exhibition of clog dancing, between the acts. Leith's Musical Aces will furnish music.

MOOSE

Baptist church service will be broadcast from the First Baptist church at Aurora, through Station WJJD (302.8) meters at Mooseheart, on Sunday morning, February 8, beginning at 10:30 o'clock. The service will be in charge of the Rev. Edward Babcock.

This will be the sixth Aurora church to have its service broadcast from Station WJJD by means of a special wire extending from Mooseheart to Aurora. The churches in the order which the services were broadcast were Episcopal, Presbyterian, Roman Catholic, Methodist Episcopal and Congregational.

V. F. W. AUXILIARY

A regular semi-monthly meeting of the E. E. Hourigan auxiliary, V. F. W., was held Wednesday evening at the post room, 2 Market street with the president, Mrs. Annie Turner presiding. Considerable routine business was transacted.

The entertainment committee has started plans for a rummage sale to be held in the near future. The welfare committee reported visits to the sick. After the business session the meeting closed at 9:30.

PYTHIAN SISTERS

Clover Temple, No. 9, held their regular meeting Thursday evening at Buckingham Memorial with M. E. C., E. Grace Fowler in the chair.

Regular routine business was transacted and plans were discussed regarding the convention which is to be held the first of May.

Grand Chief Lena Gates of Willimantic, Grand Senior Henrietta Audts of Meriden, Past Grand Chief, Lottie Gilman and Eva Adams of Willimantic were present at the meeting, the Grand Chief's official visitation. There were also visitors from Mystic and New London.

A delightful supper was served at 6.30 o'clock with Clara Busch as the chairman, assisted by members of the lodge.

ELKS.

Past Exalted Rulers' Night was observed Thursday evening at the Elks' Home by Norwich Lodge, No. 430, with appropriate ceremonies, the programme closing with a first class vaudeville presentation followed by refreshments and music.

The past exalted rulers filling the chairs during the evening were John Carney, exalted ruler; James Casey, esteemed leading knight; James Harrington, esteemed loyal knight; Arthur Campbell, lecturing knight; James P. Hayes, esquire, and Thomas Craney, chaplain. The 11 o'clock toast was solemnized by all members the benediction being given by Past Exalted Ruler James P. Hayes.

The entertainment was furnished by Clements entertainment bureau of Hartford, presenting The Five Steppers, Grayce Harper, Blanche Wadlund, Doris Dewey, Betty O'Donnell and Joy Miller, Mildred Arnold was accompanist. The ensemble number, The Scarf Dance, was a pretty number as were the individual numbers.

Another attraction was Eddie Mahoney, of Hartford, for seven years on the Hartford police force and famed as the Singing Policeman, having played the Poli circuit. Mr. Mahoney possessed a powerful baritone voice and his numbers were well received.

Refreshments were served later in the evening, the Wauregan hotel catering.

NUMBER FIVE

February 6, 1925," is the prophecy on which the local groups base their belief. Alpin, however said that did not necessarily mean the end tomorrow, it depending on the divine will as to how long the coming would require.

All necessary prophecies have been fulfilled, Alpin said. He mentioned a blight in crops in one section; a sea of dead fishes off the Florida coast; epidemics and plagues; a plague of grasshopper last summer and the caterpillar and tent worm visitations in various places.

MEMBERS OF THE FAITH WERE OBLIVIOUS TO JEERS

New York, Feb. 6.—Oblivious to the jeers of the unbelievers, large numbers of men, women and children at various parts of the country unflinchingly await the crack of doom tonight.

From several points in the United States came news of the patient vigil of the band, disciples of Mrs. Margaret F. Rowen, of Los Angeles, and self-styled members of the Seventh Day Adventist Reformed church, steady in their faith that Christ would start from His heaven on a second pilgrimage to earth, to lead the faithful salvation.

The beginning of the millenium was set for midnight, but it wasn't clear whether the sign from heaven was to be expected at that hour, eastern standard time, or Pacific coast time, three hours later. For the elect, seemed, to be in true accord on but one thing, and that was that all were to be transported to a mountain near San Diego, Cal., from whose height they were to watch fire and pestilence ravage the world of the faithless, after which they were to begin a seven-day trip to heaven, stopping at various planets en route, for food and to gather others of the chosen in their train.

From Hollywood, Los Angeles and Oakland, California, came stories of the patient vigil of the elect. Similar stories were told of their steadfastnessness at College View, Neb., at Washington, in up-state, New York, and a half dozen other places.

Less than two-score of the band, residents of Long Island towns, awaited the event, for the most part, in their respective homes. Their leader, Robert Reidt and his trusting wife and their four small children—two boys and two girls—awaited the sign from the skies under the guard of skeptical county policemen. The landscape for half a mile around their dilapidated little home on a hillside near East Patchogue was cluttered with automobiles of laughing men and women who had motored from points many miles away to feed their amused curiosity upon a sight of the simple band at their vigil.

Reidt, his family, Brother Willard Downs, a gaunt hairy man of 57 years, a policeman and two newspapermen were in the house, with the doors locked. Outside a half dozen policemen tried to keep the crowd in order, while a dozen traffic officers, stationed at various places along the nearby roads, had difficulty in routing the ever-coming motor car loads of curious.

Reidt, who terms himself the "Apostle of Doom," was placid, devout and sincere, though weary. Throughout the day and the early hours of the night, with only an occasional apprehensive glance through a window at the mounting crowds, he read his Bible, and led his family and the thick-whiskered Brother Downs in hymns or prayers. In occasional brief silences the guttural voice of Brother Downs boomed through his beard, uttering spiritual quotations. Mrs. Redit, her children within sight of her strangely-flowing eyes, said nothing. She sat and waited.

Tonight's predicted millenium was the first doomsday promised since 1919. On December 16 of that year a wide-spread belief grew that the earth was to be hurled into nothingness on the utterance of Professor Albert A. Porta, a San Francisco meteorologist. Although the professor later declared his statements had been "greatly exaggerated," the Millenium fever had a rather general prevalence at the time. Londoners "drank the old world out" the night of December 15 and Constantinople dispatches said several Turkish and Armenian women had gone violently insane in contemplation of the expected cataclysm.

William Miller, a native of Pittsfield, Mass., who settled in Washington county, New York, in 1818, predicted the second coming of Jesus for October 22, 1843. His prediction won wide credence; business men sold out in many instances, and thousands awaited the Epiphany on hill, and housetops, clad in starched robes of white muslin. Miller later said he had made an error in his calculations, and reset the millenium date for October 22, 1844.

The year 1831 also was notable as a "millenium year," particularly in rural England, where alarm prevailed over an imagined prediction by the curious Mother Shipton, uttered some centuries before. It later developed that the "prophecy" had been a Gargantuan hoax, accomplished through a forgery.

The next era of extensive misery, though not involving a millenium, was set by the British Journal of Astrology on a horoscope cast in 1921, predicting a parade of floods, pestilences, shipwrecks, wars, riots, revolutions, plagues and political upheavals, all to start in the year 1926. It is to end, according to the horoscope, in 1932 with the battle of Armageddon, after which "there will be few of us left and we shall all be so tired that peace should happen anyhow."

DOOMSDAY BELIEVERS DRIVE OFF INTRUDERS

Patchogue, N. Y., Feb. 6.—Callers at the home of Robert Redit, local leader of the band who believe the millenium is to begin tonight, were driven from the grounds surrounding his little home tonight.

Cans of boiling water were thrown at the fleeing crowd, consisting mainly of motion picture photographers and newspapermen, by Brother Willard Downs, chief assistant to Reidt. The leader, worn out by hours of meeting curious strangers, posing for newspaper photographers and giving out interviews, had taken to his bed and did not witness the outburst of his trusted lieutenant.

Downs, a gaunt, bearded man who quotes the scriptures by heart, was on guard at the door of the cabin-like home when he saw two news reel men grinding away at their motion picture cameras. He rushed into the house and returned with a can of boiling water. Screaming to the startled callers that they must "get away from here," he hurled the water toward the now-fleeing men. No one was hit, but visitors kept a respectful distance from Brother Downs from that time on.

County police arrived a short time later, to keep on the job the rest of the night.

ONE DEATH IN HOTEL FIRE IN PITTSBURGH

Pittsburgh, Pa., Feb. 6.—One employe met death and thirty firemen were overcome by fumes while fighting a fire resulting from an explosion in a sub-basement of the William Penn hotel tonight. The fire was confined to the area in which it originated and did damage estimated by fire department officials at $7,000. Guests in the hotel were not disturbed, the fire being two floors below the street level.

The entire sixteenth floor of the hotel was converted into an emergency hospital and physicians and nurses called in from hospitals to attend the firemen, who were seized with violent convulsions in the underground room. Three elevators were pressed into service to rush the stricken firemen to the emergency hospital.

The large ice-houses of the Arlington Belmont Ice Company, Arlington, Mass., were destroyed by fire with loss estimated at $190,000.

A THREE DAYS' COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL

Chronic coughs and persistent colds lead to serious lung trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with twofold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and kills the germ.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by the medical fraternity as the greatest healing agency for the treatment of chronic coughs and colds and other forms of throat and lung troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and destroys the germ that lead to consumption.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of chronic coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, catarrhal bronchitis and other forms of throat and lung diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or the flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter of how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Co., Atlanta, Ga. (Adv.)

MRS. WILHELMY SAVED BY FRIEND

Doctor Advised Operation Friend Said Try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound First

St. Paul, Minn. — "I was all rundown from overwork and worry, had no appetite, could not sleep at night, and looked like a corpse. I have six children (five boys and one girl) and did not get any strength after my last baby was born. I was getting worse and thinner every day. The doctor said I had to go to the hospital, but this I could not do on account of my family. So I went to a friend of mine and told her what the doctor had told me and she said, 'Now do as I tell you. Try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as I have done. It helped me.' So I started taking the Vegetable Compound and I noticed after the first few bottles that I felt considerably better. After taking 9 or 10 bottles I got over my fainting spells. Everybody who sees me now notices the great improvement in my health. I am gaining in weight and strength and am feeling fine. Eat well and sleep good nights."—Mrs. MARY WILHELMY, 309 Duke Street, St. Paul, Minnesota.

Resinol healed stubborn sore

Elyria, Ohio, March 1:—"I feel it my duty and pleasure to thank you for the wonderful cure your Resinol salve has wrought for my husband, who suffered from an open sore on the back of his neck for four years. Several doctors said that it was a cancer and advised its removal, but it was so near the base of the brain that we feared an operation. I had found Resinol Ointment so effective for cuts, burns and similar things that I induced my husband to try that. After using only two jars of Resinol, the sore entirely healed—every trace of it has disappeared. Resinol certainly was a God-send to us!" (Signed) Mrs. E. E. Kennedy, 24[illegible] E. 8th St.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

MARKET WAS IRREGULAR.

New York, Feb. 6.—Stock prices opened with a burst of strength, reacted sharply in sympathy with a violent decline in grain prices and the marking up of the call money rate to 4 per cent and then made irregular recovery when bullish operations were resumed by professional traders in the motor recovery and copper shares. The day's sales approximated about one and three-quarters million shares.

High priced industrial specialties again took a prominent part in the day's trading. United States Cast Iron Pipe soared ten points to 189, closing near the top, and Nash Motors jumped 18 points to 270 on three sales. Net gains of three to nearly six points were recorded by General Electric, Mack Trucks, United States Industrial Alcohol, American Bank Note, American Chicle, Barnet Leather, Commercial Solvents A, International Business Machines, LaClede Gas and West Penn Power.

Standard industrials showed mixed changes. American Can closed 1 5-8 higher at 166 but United States Steel common and Baldwin registered small fractional recessions at 126 7-8 and 132 respectively.

Oil shares, which have been under heavy accumulation for several weeks, were slightly reactionary on reports of a federal investigation of recent advances in gasoline prices. New peak quotations were established, however, by the Barnsdall issues and California Petroleum. Cosden and Shell transport each closed about a point lower, but the recessions in other issues were held to fractions.

Stiffening of red metal prices in the foreign and local markets brought fresh buying into the copper group, American Smelting and Refining crossing 102 for the first time since 1917 for an overnight gain of more than two points. Net gains of one to two points also were recorded by Anaconda, Butte and Superior, Calumet and Arizona, Chino and Magma.

Heavy buying of General Motors, which touched a record top at 77, up 1 5-8, featured the motor group. Substantial gains also were recorded by Hudson Motors, rJodan and Willys-Overland preferred.

The death of Julius Fleischmann brought a block of 4,300 shares of Fleischmann common into the market at the opening at 78 1-2, off 2 5-8, but it later rallied to 80. Brooklyn Union Gas dropped 1 3-4 and Famous Players 1 1-4, recessions in other popular issues being limited to small fractions.

Call money renewed at 3 per cent, but advanced to 3 1-2 and thence to four in response to an increased demand for funds for financing week-end commitments. Time money and commercial paper markets were quiet with no change in rates.

Foreign exchange rates were reactionary with business in reduced volume. Demand sterling ruled around $4.78 and French francs dropped below 5.40 cents for the first time in nearly two weeks.

Japanese yen stiffened in further reflection of reports that gold was being sent here to stabilize exchange.

ALLING RUBBER COMPANY STORE AT NEW LONDON IS ENTERED

(Special to The Bulletin)

New London, Feb. 6.—Another burglary occurred here last night for this morning when the sporting goods store of the Alling Rubber Company, 153 State street, was opened for business, it was discovered that the place had been entered and a small amount of plunder obtained. From the nature of the break it is believed that one or more youths are the perpetrators. The only stock as certain to have been stolen was a boy scout's knife and a blue sweater, boy's size. Entrance to was gained by the thief going to the rear of the store from Golden street where a high board fence was scaled. When the store was reached, a large pane of glass was removed from a window of a toilet, through which window the thief entered and left the store.

No tidings have been received today from John Stoddard, the agent of the Prudential Insurance company, whom the Bulletin reported this morning as missing. His accounts with the insurance company are in proper condition. He had served the Odd Fellows of Groton in all capacities as an officer of aFirview lodge and was held in the highest esteem by the members.

The planning board held a brief meeting Thursday evening, but as no citizen had commenicated with the board as to business, the session was brief. The board proposes to insist upon a street or wide passage way that will connect with Gibson street on the north and with Chappel street on the south of the proposed school building, which is to go on the lot at Mercer and Williams streets. It would not be surprising if, after the new school building is a reality, the section in which it is located would be called School center for there will then be six school buildings almost within speaking distance. They are the Nathan Hale, the Bartlett, the Chapman, the W. M. I., the Bulkeley and the new building. The Saltonstall and the parochial school are but little removed from this section.

Edward Bergo of Poquonnoc Bridge, will be presented in the Groton town court next Monday morning charged with operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor. Bergo was arrested last night following the car he was driving plunging through a lane of passengers that were alighting from or boarding a Groton and Stonington Trolley company car on Thames street, Groton, near the Poquonoc road. Those injured by Bergo's reckless act were Mrs. George Cassel and son, George, 3, of Mystic, Mrs. Archie Fletcher, Mystic, and F. C. Lyons, of Harris court this city. Mrs. Cassell got a fractured collar-bone and possible pelvic fracture while her little son received an injury to his back. Mrs. Fletcher sustained a laceration of the head.

Bergo was taken into custody by state police from the Groton barracks. All of those injured were either boarding or alighting from the Groton & Stonington car when it arrived at the station, near the plant of the New London Ship & Engine company. The automobile approached the standing trolley car at a fair rate of speed and Bergo instead of bringing his machine to a stop, continued to operate it past the trolley car and its passengers. Mrs. Cassell saw the automobile bearing down upon her as she carried her son in her arms. Realizing that she would be struck by the automobile, Mrs. Cassell hurled her child across the highway, the little boy landing upon his back, and in another instant Mrs. Cassell was knocked down by the machine. The automobile then run down Mrs. Fletcher and Lyons, while other passengers fled in all directions in an endeavor to get out of the way of the recklessly handled machine. All of the injured were given assistance by pedestrians and Mrs. Cassell and her son and Mrs. Fletcher were taken to the office of Dr. E. P. Douglass, who cared for them and then had them sent to their homes. Lyons was taken home and is now under the care of a physician.

Miss Madeline Reardon of Montauk avenue, and Miss Catherine Moriarty, Montauk avenue, patients at Lawrence-Memorial Associated Hospital, were able to return to their respective abodes today.

Miss Abbie Jane Daniels, 77, died this morning at her home, 701 Main street, after a long illness. Miss Daniels leaves no relatives, so far as is known. Her brother, John Daniels, many years employed as caretaker of the former Williams estate, corner of State and Huntington streets, died about two years ago.

Mrs. Elizabeth A. Goodale, 60, widow of Eckford Goodale, for a number of years in charge of the Nurses' Home and Registry, Manwaring street, died last night at Lawrence hospital, in which institution she had been under treatment but a day or two, although she had been in ill health for a long time. Mrs. Goodale was a graduate of the former Memorial hospital, and later became head of the Nurses' Home and Registry which position she held until a few years ago. She was well and favorably known about New London.

Patrolman Henry Hick, in making his rounds, through Montauk avenue early this morning discovered the entrance to the Montauk avenue Baptist church unlocked. The officer made the place secure for the remainder of the night. About a month ago the officer found the same entrance unlocked.

A manhole, corner of Ocean and Lee avenues, was discovered broken this forenoon, it being possible that the heavy iron covering was shattered by a heavy motor vehicle passing over it.

John A. Mann, U. S. A., a musician, stationed at Fort H. G. Wright, and Miss Mary R. Aguilar, Cottage Grove, Tenn., where Mr. Mann formerly resided, were married yesterday afternoon at the parsonage of the First Church of Christ by Rev. F. Romeyn Danforth. Mr. and Mrs. Mann will make their home at Fisher's Island.

Gilbert L. Parker, formerly of New London, now located at San Francisco, where he is manager of the Hemmway Silk company, is visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Parker, 35 West street.

A still alarm was received at fire headquarters this afternoon, causing the F. L. Allen Hook and Ladder company to be dispatched to the residence of Donald McArthur, 164 Bank street, where it was believed a fire existed because of smoke issuing from a window. When the firemen entered the house they found smoke coming from an oil stove, the supply of fuel of which had become exhausted. The burning wick was extinguished and the smoke ceased.

Thomas F. Farrell, paymaster, United States navy, assigned to the flagship Red Wing, stationed at the state pier, who was delivered to the county jail authorities by a naval guard a fortnight ago, is still a prisoner there. Farrell, it is understood, is accused of being short in his accounts. But a check-up by the war department at Washington has not been concluded, and not until it has been finished will it be known whether Farrell's accounts show a shortage.

An automobile owned and operated by William Z. White, 302 Ocean avenue, and a commercial truck owned by the Kelley Electric company were in collision late this afternoon on the approach to the Thames river highway bridge. Both automobiles were damaged, the pleasure machine sustaining the greater disfigurement.

Timothy Connors, an East New London youth, who has been arrested before, was taken into custody this evening by Patrolmen John Foley and Augustus Ray, charged with breach of the peace and resisting an officer. He was locked up pending the convening of the police court tomorrow morning. Connors went to the poolroom of Richard Skbagh, 159 Main street, about 6 o'clock, and was intoxicated. He became troublesome and during his row with others in the place he smashed a large plate glass window. The police were requested to take charge of Connors, but when Patrolmen Foley and Ray arrived Connors started to give battle with the officers. The offendar was handled roughly and was landed in a cell much the worse for his combat with the officers.

Of the dozen craft seized recently as alleged rum-runners and which are now held in port under guard of the United States coast guard, the government is planning to release several within a few days. Already the papers necessary to permit the releasing of three or four of the boats are being prepared, and early next week it is believed these boats will have been delivered back to their owners.

It is understood that City Manager William A. Holt will submit his report of the investigation of the special committee of the city council which is investigating the efficiency of the police department some time during the early part of next month, or possibly the latter part of this month. The probe is practically completed and no sittings of the committee have been held for several nights, in fact, the only meeting of the committee was last Tuesday night, when Policewoman Jane Cassidy and Patrolman Carlos Selesnitsky were interrogated. It is known, however, that the committee anticipates summoning a half dozen witnesses before the probe is concluded.

The street department did a commendable piece of work today in clearing the ice from Green street at Pearl, where it was a danger to vehicles and on the crossings was a menace to pedestrians. The job will now probably be continued on Pearl street east of Green. It should be commenced on North Bank street, for there is a dangerous spot as that street is traversed by many heavy vehicles drawn by horses. This afternoon the Perry Ice company horses might as well have been on skates, for they were all over the street, unable to keep the center. Milkmen were well frightened this morning when they attempted to drive through the street and delivery team drivers were provoked lest they should be injured and their horses sustain broken legs. It has been a long time since the streets were in so dangerous a condition where they are as narrow as they are on the thoroughfares mentioned. On Montauk avenue, the most frequently traveled thoroughfare in the city, there are several walks that are ice-covered, the walk at the Nameaug school building being one of the most menacing to pedestrians. In front of the carhouse on that avenue the city should compel the laying of a cement walk, for there the mud is deeper than the shoe taps. It is the only spot on the avenue where there is no concrete walk. There is righteous indignation because of this fact, but that doesn't seem to remedy matters!

About 65 members of the Catholic Women's club attended the annual banquet at the Mohican hotel Wednesday evening. Mrs. W. Frank Downing, president, was toastmaster. She delivered her annual message to the club and was presented a beautiful green gold bracelet by the associate members. Mrs. Thomas McElree of Providence was the guest of honor. Mrs. Harry J. Kennedy was chairman of the committee in charge, which comprised Miss Mary Jane Nelson, Mrs. J. E. Sullivan, Mrs. JohnHokanson, Mrs. Louis MacKenzie, Mrs. J. A. St. Germain, Mrs. F. E. LeBlanc, Miss Marion L. Kennedy. The decorations were arranged by Mrs. J. J. Gagnon.

MYSTIC

Mystic Grange held its meeting in G. A. R. hall Thursday evening with an attendance of 79. Three months ago a meeting was called to re-organize the grange under the direction of Assistant Steward of Connecticut State Grange C. M. Adams of Groton. Dr. C. F. Congdon has spent much time in getting old and new members and has aided in every way possible to make a successful grange.

Among the items of business was a request from the D. A. R. that a member be appointed from the grange to meet with the others appointed from all the churches and organizations to arrange plans for a permanent war roll. Mrs. Abbie Phillips was chosen. The new lecturer, Miss Louisa Schroder had arranged the following program:

Solo, Clifford Desley; reports of the state grange meeting by Miss Schroder and S. J. Swallow; viola solo, Miss Phyllis Hanks, accompanied by Mrs. Clifford Holmes. Miss Hanks is a promising violinist. A recitation by Miss Sarah Spinks was well given.

Alton Wheeler, master of Stonington grange was invited to sing and gave two selections that won hearty applause.

Word has been received by relatives of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Coogan, Mrs. Martha Morgan and S. H. Carr of their arrival in Florida. They spent several days with Mr. Carr's sister on the way and report a pleasant trip.

Alfred G. Colby is having an attractive cottage built at Groton Long Point. He built one a year ago, renting it the past season.

Mrs. Frank Wheeler is confined to her home on High street with a bad cold.

Mrs. Marion Pomeroy has returned after two weeks' stay in Hartford.

All are glad of the warm days to thaw the ice, for the streets have been in a dangerous condition

The body of a Westerly young man, William J. Martin, whose death occurred suddenly Tuesday in New York, where he was employed at the Waldorf-Astoria was brought to Westerly Friday morning.

He had been in failing health for the past few months and developed pneumonia which caused his death.

He was born in Stonington, in 1885, the son of Michael F. and Mary A. Martin. Three years later his family moved to Westerly. He attended the Westerly schools and later was graduated from the Princeton school in Boston, Mass.

He worked at many hotels in the larger cities of the country and for a number of years was located at the Adams House in Boston. Several years ago he went to New York city, to enter the employ of the Waldorf-Astoria.

He is survived by his mother, Mrs. Mary R. Graf of this town, a sister, Miss Mary A. Martin, of New York city and three brothers, Dr. John F. Martin of Los Angeles, Cal., and Thomas F. and Andrew J. Martin, of Westerly.

The death of Edward Samuel Burrell, 20, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Burrell of East avenue occurred on Thursday at a Providence hospital, following an operation for appendicitis. He was taken to the hospital Jan. 26 to undergo the operation also to receive treatment for pneumonia.

In addition to his parents, the young man is survived by two brothers, Clyde and John Burrell, and three sisters, Katherine, Emma J. and Mary E. Burrell.

Arthur N. Nash returned to Westerly Friday afternoon from Stamford and Hartford, where he was in attendance at the annual communication of the Grand Lodge of Masons in Connecticut being elected and installed Deputy Grand Master. Thursday night Bourdon A. Babcock, master; T. Edward Peabody, senior warden; and Frank L. Friend, secretary, all of Pawcatuck Lodge No. 99, returned to their homes in Westerly from attendance upon the two-day session.

Charles S. Tyan of Stonington was a business caller in Westerly and Pawcatuck Friday.

A number of Westerly bridge players had a chicken dinner Friday evening at the Cliff Tavern.

A truck of the New London Fruit Company 23-182 Conn., was in collision with a sedan automobile, 6358 Conn. on West Broad street Friday afternoon at 4 o'clock. Slight damage resulted, the left forward mud guard of the sedan was bent and jammed. Patrolman C. Wilson Brown investigated the accident.

Rev. Ernest E. Morrill and Rev. S. M. Cathcart were Westerly attendants during the past week at the meeting of the Congregational churches held in Providence.

J. Ernest Young, having completed his duties with the Westerly branch of the William Clark mill of the American Thread company, Pawcatuck, will begin work at the Bradford Dyeing association plant at Bradford.

THOS. W. PIERCE, NO. KINGSTON SECOND DEPUTY SHERIFF

(Special to the Bulletin)

Westerly, R. I., Feb. 6—Sheriff Fred T. Mitchell announced Friday afternoon, the appointment of a second deputy sheriff for Washington county. The new appointee is Thomas W. Pierce of North Kingston, town sergeant and a former chief of police there for a number of years. The new incumbant is thoroughly familiar with conditions in the northern section of the county and has acted as court officer for the past two or three years under the late Sheriff John R. Wilcox. The appointment follows the recent one of George S. Phillips of Kingston, who is the jailer of the county jail at West Kingston. Later the appointment of a third deputy may be made.

ARNOLD ADAMS, PLAINFIELD, IS SERIOUSLY INJURED

Westerly, R. I., Feb. 6.—Arnold Adams, 27, of Plainfield, was rendered unconscious and may have suffered internal injuries, Friday forenoon, about 11 o'clock on the Allen Main farm, above North Stonington, when a chain broke as he was making fast a load of railroad ties. With Herbert Newton, of Canterbury, who operates a Mack truck, the load had been made up and as Adams was pulling down on the chain it let go and he was thrown back against the pile of ties with such force as to render him unconscious.

Dr. C. Grant Savage of Westerly was called and attended the injured man. He directed his removed to the Otis Clapman farm, where his condition Saturday will determine whether it will be necessary to remove him to a hospital. Mr. Newton has recently begun the hauling of railroad ties from the Tillinghast sawmill to the Westerly railroad station.

VOLUNTOWN

Representative Howard E. James has presented a bill in the legislature to include in the trunk line system of highways the Voluntown and Westerly highway. This is a state highway between the places named and is in good shape, with the exception of a few miles of country road over Pendleton Hill, over which road there is a great deal of travel, and there some improvement is badly needed. It is to be hoped that the measure introduced by Mr. James will pass.

Tuesday morning at 2 o'clock Mrs. Betsy Whitman Johnson, 64, wife of George Johnson, died after a brief illness. Mrs. Johnson leaves her husband, an adopted son, a brother and sister and a large circle of relatives and friends who sorrow for her death.

The board of relief met in Union hall Monday.

Miss Gladys Young was a recent guest of her sister, Mrs. H. A. Dawley, at Hope Valley, R. I.

As a result of the recent storms, traveling has been very difficult both a-foot and a-wheel.

The state road has been kept in good condition by the state highway department.

TAFTVILLE

A valentine whist and social evening is being planned by St. Veronica's T. A. and B. society, the affair to be held in their rooms on Providence street.

The 2 year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Stoklosa of Norwich avenue got hold of a can of stove blacking Friday afternoon and emptied the contents over herself. The contents of the can burned the child severely about the neck. Dr. George M. Thompson of North Second avenue was sent for and Miss Louise Sigrist, one of the nurses of the Ponemah mills welfare department, assisted in making the little girl comfortable.

Troop 3, Boy Scouts, met Friday evening in the recreation rooms of the Taftville Congregational church with Scoutmaster Harold E. Linderson in charge.

At a recent meeting of the Sacred Heart Dramatic club it was voted to give a play in the near future, the proceeds to go into the treasury of the church.

The annual entertainment of the Ponemah Wheel club is under way. In the past the club has presented a minstrel show each year, but it is said that this year a play may be given.

The regular monthly meeting of the St. Louis society was held Friday evening in the society's rooms in their building on Dion street, with President Henry Phaneuf in the chair.

Special devotions in honor of the Sacred Heart were observed Friday at the Sacred Heart church.

George Helm of Lisbon, who was riding in a truck that collided with a trolley car in Greeneville one day this week, had to have six stitches taken in his head.

FITCHVILLE

At his home on Main street Friday Lewis Brand celebrated his 90th birthday, his daughter, Mrs. Julia Authier, serving a luncheon to several of his relatives and friends. Mr. Brand received many beautiful birthday remembrances and cards, all of which he thoroughly enjoyed. He continues in good health and enjoys the pleasures of the day. Mr. Brand was born in Canada Feb. 5, 1835, but came to Connecticut with his parents when a boy. He served in the Civil war when a young man. Mr. Brand has three daughters, Mrs. Mary Murphy of New Britain, Mrs. Carl Bentley and Mrs. Julia Authier, who lives with her father, and a son, Louis Brand, of Versailles. There are eight grandchildren and five great-grandchildren. In the evening a whist party was given in his honor, a number of his friends participating.

TWO WIVES ARE GIVEN DIVORCES SOUGHT FROM DESERTING HUSBANDS

Two out of six divorce cases on the uncontested list were heard and granted by Judge C. L. Avery in the superior court short calendar session Friday morning at New London. The wives were the petitioners in both cases in which divorces were granted: Louisa Rogers Kelsey was given a divorce from Gerge Kelsey of New London on the ground of desertion. She was also given the custody of two children, Alice and Zelma. She was represented by Attorney Morris Lubchansky.

Jennie L. Woodbury of Mystic, was granted a divorce from John D. Woodbury on the ground of desertion. Woodbury, it was stated in court, left his wife in April, 1917, and has since married in Canada. She was given the custody of two children Robert, aged 18, and Everett, aged 13. Attorney Benjamin A. Hewitt represented Mrs. Woodbury.

Other divorce actions on the list went off, being Ferguson Rennie vs Esther C. Rennie; Ada L. Collins vs Arthur A. Collins, and Charles A. Swift vs Gilda Swift.

Motion List Matters

In the matters on the motion list, the Yellow Cab Co., of New London, was given judgment against Joseph Sirgusa of the same place, whose cabs it claimed was painted to resemble its cabs, when the defendant failed to disclose defense before Judge Avery. In the case of the U. S. Trust Co., Mystic Manufacturing Co., application of receiver for authority to pay the six months' interest coupons, which matured on Sept. 1, 1924, on the $190,000 first mortgage 7 per cent. bonds and to pay the interest on said bonds from Sept. 1, 1924, was granted. In the same case, the application of receiver in behalf of William Kibrullen, a creditor for extension of time for presentation of claim of said creditor, was granted.

Perkins, receiver, for authority to sell a tract of land in the town of Old Saybrook, was granted.

ICE CUTTING ROW BRINGS $5,000 SUIT

William L. Richmond of North Stonington filed an action Friday for $5,000 damages with Clerk George E. Parsons of the superior court in this city. The civil action is brought against Martha Jane Lee and Joseph Lee of Stonington. The suit arose from an altercation between the two parties over the privilege of cutting ice on a brook that divides their respective properties. Last Tuesday a temporary injunction was issued by Judge Allyn L. Brown restraining the defendants from preventing Mr. Richmonds harvesting of ice on the brook in question.

According to the allegations in the complaint the west side of the land owned by Richmond, the complainant, adjoins that owned by the defendants. It is, however, divided by a small stream known as Aguilar brook. One-half of this belongs to the plaintiff; one-half to the defendant. It is said that the plaintiff dammed that half of the brook adjoining his own property and that when he attempted to harvest about 600 tons of accumulated ice he was threatened, assaulted and beaten by the defendant. Mr. Lee. According to Mr. Richmond the total value of the ice crop was $10,000 and that this was harvested by the defendants. He asks $5,000, or half of the profits.

"MARRIED FOR SPITE" HUSBAND TOLD WIFE

"I married you for spite and for revenge." That is what Clifford H. Rogers of East Lyme said to his wife, Carrie Routh Rogers, according to testimony brought forth before Judge Isaac Wolfe in the superior court in New Haven Wednesday. The woman was granted a divorce for intolerable cruelty. She said her husband was, after their marriage in March, 1919, most cruel.

When she was married she weighed 130 pounds. "He reduced me to 98," she testified.

SUPT. B. W. TINKER RESIGNS, AFTER 28 YEARS IN WATERBURY

Berlin W. Tinker, for the past 28 years superintendent of schools in Waterbury, submitted his resignation to the board of education meeting on Thursday, so affecting the members of that board that the assembly adjourned without taking any action. Superintendent Tinker will leave his present office in June.

Berlin W. Tinker was born 58 years ago, in Jerusalem, N. Y. He received his grammar school education in various places, his parents moving with him frequently. His high school education was acquired at Norwich Free Academy and he was graduated from Bates college, Maine, in 1888, after which he took a post graduate course for one year in Boston university.

Mr. Tinker taught school intermittently while at college, thus paying his way. Before and after being graduated from the University of Boston in 1889, he taught in various high schools among them those of Chelmsford, Mass., Southboro, Mass., Marblehead, Mass., and Marlboro, the last of which he served as superintendent for three years.

From Marlboro he went to Waterbury and has been there for 28 consecutive years. He and Mrs. Tinker, a Portland, Me., woman, were married in 1889. They have no children. The resignation is due to the state of health of both Supt. and Mrs. Tinker.

Mr. Tinker lived in Norwich when his father, the late Rev. Ezra Tinker, was pastor of the Methodist church.

MUST SPEED UP TO GET OPERATOR'S LICENSES

Connecticut motor vehicle operators will have to be licensed at the rate of twenty-five a minute unless many of those now licensed to drive in the state are to be without the legal right to operate motor vehicles at the expiration of the present month. This fact was given out at the state motor vehicle department in connection with an announcement that more than 200,000 of the present drivers had failed up to the close of business Thursday to apply for 1925 licenses. Less than 35,000 operators have been licensed by the department since January 15, when the main office at the capitol and the four branch offices at Bridgeport, New Haven, New London, and Waterbury began issuing licenses for the ensuing license year.

The date for the expiration of operators' licenses was fixed by law to be two months after the date for the expiration of car registrations to avoid unnecessary congestion in the closing days of the calendar year, when car owners are required to renew their registrations. The issuance of operators' licenses is a much simpler process than the registering of motor vehicles and the $2.00 fee for a license is much less than the minimum registration fee; yet, according to the motor vehicle department, it is impossible to induce many licensees to apply for renewals early and thus do their share to help reduce congestion near the end of the licensing period.

Seventeen times as many operators make application for their licenses by mail as now do so in person and the department is equipped to handle many more than are now being received daily. The record of every applicant must be consulted before the new license is issued to determine whether a renewal is warranted. Every case has already been passed on, and the names are classified for the convenience of the issuing clerks.

ERECTED BIG LIMA HOTEL IN 8 MONTHS

The West Coast Leader, published at Lima, Peru, devotes several pages of a recent issue to a description, with pictures, of the Grand Hotel Bolivar, the largest and most magnificent hotel in Peru, which was erected at Lima under the direct supervision of Charles I. Babcock, a former Norwich boy, who is chief engineer for the Fred T. Ley Co., Inc., of Peru.

The hotel was completed in time to hold a dinner dansant on the night of Dec. 6, fulfilling the pledge made by the chief engineer for the contractors to have the palatial hostelry ready for opening in eight months. The hotel has over 200 guest rooms, a main dining room to seat 500, a banquet room for state affairs, children's dining room, administration offices, reading room, ladies' tea room, all sumptuously furnished and provided with every modern convenience in hotel life. The building is of fireproof reinforced concrete construction throughout, three floors and a basement. The West Coast Leader says: "The fulfillment of the company's promise to build a new and modern hotel in less than eight months is a witness to their organization and efficiency in spite of a lack of skilled labor. Mr. Babcock, the engineer who took over the direct responsibility of the construction work, was on the job virtually day and night."

Mr. Babcock graduated from the Norwich Free Academy, class of 1918, and from Worcester Polytechnic institute, class of 1922. He is the son of Mrs. Idelle Babcock.

OAKDALE MEETING WILL BE HELP TO DAIRYMEN

There will be a meeting at Oakdale hall, Oakdale, next Wednesday in which many farmers of that vicinity are interested. It will particularly interest the dairyman as the subjects to be brought up should be important to all farmers deriving a part or whole of their livelihood from the dairy cow.

Prof. John A. Simms of the Extension Service at Storrs will give a talk on "Raising Better Dairy Cows." This will be a discussion of the value of using a pure bred bull of known breeding to grade up dairy herds to higher production per cow. Prof. J. P. Owens also of the Extension Department of the State College, will speak on "Raising Better Hay to Feed the Dairy Herd." This will take up raising more legume roughages like alfalfa and clover. This is a subject that is interesting many dairymen in New London county. County Agent W. T. Clark will discuss the pooling of lime and seed orders for the county.

The talks will be illustrated by slides and moving pictures. The meeting is free to everyone.

PARK STREET HOUSE DAMAGED BY FIRE

A fire in the back porch on the second floor of the house at No. 15 Park street, owned by Andrew J. Wholey, resulted in some damage to the house before it was extinguished. The apartment is occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Willard Botham who left Norwich Thursday for Bridgeport. Shortly before 4 o'clock Friday afternoon Mrs. George Chappell, who lives nearby sent her children to the house to get a bottle of milk left in the porch for her.

When the children opened the porch door smoke started to pour out and they informed Mrs. Wholey who sent in a telephone call for the fire department. Not knowing the exact nature of the fire as the second floor was full of smoke and the porch on fire Chief H. L. Stanton ordered a bell alarm pulled in from box 223 and the box was pulled by Sergt. Myron O. Morgan. A line of inch and half hose was laid and this stream of water with 28 gallons of chemical soon had the blaze extinguished. The recall quickly followed the bell alarm. Prompt discovery of the blaze by the children and quick work by the firemen prevented a fire of serious proportions.

STILL HOPE TO FIND CAVE IMPRISONED MAN ALIVE

Sinking Shaft at the Rate of One Foot Every Three Hours—Radio Tests Give Hope That the Imprisoned Man Still is Alive—Work is Progressing on Sinking of Shaft—Drill, Now Sixty Feet Deep, Has Not Yet Struck a Tunnel—Miner Expresses Belief That Collins May be Reached Wednesday—Collins Has Been Four Days Without Food or any Water Except Drippings.

Cave City, Ky., Feb. 8—(By the A. P.)—All the glamor and adventure of the struggle to determine Floyd Collins' fate in his sand cave prison had faded today under the monotonous work of digging the shaft to reach the entombed man. At 11 a. m. by actual measurement, a depth of 32 feet, 11 inches had been touched.

On that basis the mine had gone down only one foot every three hours since it started three days ago. More time is required for timbering the sides than for excavation and absence of skilled cribmen contributes to the slowness of that work.

Railroad ties are being used instead of the smaller timber previously cut in that vicinity. Fresh men are lowered every half hour or provide all speed possible. A small blast of dynamite was used this afternoon to dislodge a huge boulder.

A third test to determine the accuracy of the location of the shaft was made today by means of an electro-magnetic compass and the pneumatic drill. The compass was taken into Sand Cave as far as it is possible to go and the drill was lowered into its sixty foot hole which preceded the shaft. Dr. W. D. Funkhouser, geologist from the University of Kentucky, announced the original survey was nearly exact. The electro-magnetic compass pointed toward the drill in the same direction previous calculations had placed it.

These latest observations, Dr. Funkhouser said, indicated the shaft would reach the victim's level 10 or 11 feet away from him and slightly behind or to one side of him.

An unknown number of feet remain to be penetrated by the shaft, however, variously estimated to be from 33 to 45 feet more, making a total depth of 65 to 75 feet. The drill hole, now sixty feet deep, has not yet struck a tunnel.

None of the men working in the mine have lost hope of reaching Collins alive. The natives, however, are divided in opinion, some believing Collins has been dead several days and some of the opinion that Collins is not in the cave at all" attendants of the family still retained hope today.

Many of the Cave County folk were more pronounced today in asserting their doubts that he really is trapped. The other tunnel discovered Saturday, by Homer Collins, his brother, leading on the general direction of the huge cavern Floyd Collins has described to rescue parties, inclines many of those who know Floyd Collins well, to the belief that there may be exits known only to Floyd or that he may have a cache of food hidden somewhere.

But the few outside rescuers, who actually reached Collins are firmly convinced his leg is caught so he can not release himself. The near neighbors of the Collins family are outspoken in their characterization of Floyd Collins as a shiftless fellow, supported by his father although he was 38 years old, who spent all his time crawling around the numerous tunnels and caverns of the region. His principal achievement, they say, in earning a living, was the discovery in 1917 of Crystal Cave, on his father's farm, and its commercial exploitation as a show place for tourists.

It is this cave, Crystal, about which the neighbors say a dissension sprung up in the Collins family. Equad owner with his father in Crystal Cave, the natives tell of the differences over division of the guide fees from tourists which caused Floyd to stay away from home for long periods. When his exploration of Sand Cave led to his imprisonment, he was staying at the home of the tenant on whose farm Sand Cave belongs. Floyd's father last summer agreed to leave Crystal Cave to one of the more enterprising natives who might make more out of it instead of spending his time in search of other caverns. Floyd's opposition to this plan deepened the family disagreement.

There is considerable competition for the tourist-trade among the owners of those caves which can be visited in comfort and Mammoth Cave, Colossal Cave, and a few of the other large ones are profitable enterprises. All of them are privately owned but Mammoth and Colossal have been offered to the government for a pittance if they will be accepted as a national park.

GREAT HOLIDAY CROWDS ATTRACTED TO CAVE CITY

Cave City, Ky., Feb. 8.—(By the A. P.)—Gigantic holiday crowds came to Cave City today and made the six mile trip to Sand Cave, where Floyd Collins passed the ninth day of his entombment.

Long before noon a continuous stream of automobiles wound over the rough road to the rescue camp. At 11 a. m., there were two solid lines, going and returning. For three miles along the way the motors, two abreast, almost touched fenders.

Farm yards and fields were turned into temporary parking places. The field between the road and the scene of operations was crowded with cars bearing license tags from Ohio, Illinois, Indiana, West Virginia and Tennessee.

During the morning, the crowd standing outside the barbed wire enclosure which protects the workmen, numbered 5,000 and was constantly changing. The first hundreds arrived almost with the dawn and their numbers grew with the hours.

A spontaneous religious service was held. The group moved to a hilltop northwest of the cave entrance and prayed for Collins. They sang and the song drifted down the valley echoing from the narrow ravine where the shaft and mouth of the cave are located.

Additional lunch stands made their appearance and sandwiches, fruit and coffee were sold in large quantities to those who did not bring their own lunches.

Lunch baskets were brought from the cars, and men, women and children sat about in family groups. It was a holiday crowd, by whom the imprisoned men had largely been forgotten and whose interest was in the spectacue brought about by the rescue efforts.

Lee Collins, father of the cavern victim, moved among the crowd, introducing himself to anyone who appeared to be a sympathetic listener. Yesterday his casual conversations always ended with the old man handing the visitor a circular advertising Crystal cave, which his son discovered several years ago. Today the supply of circulars had been exhausted. His hope that his son's rescue alive was Still strong.

The Louisville and Nashville railroad added four coaches to the morning train from Louisville and said about 2,500 extra tickets had been sold. The railroad company's estimate of the total number of visitors today was 20,000, most of whom came by automobile.

NOTES PERTINENT TO IMPRISONMENT OF COLLINS

Louisville, Ky. Feb 8—In their search for pictures of Collins, newspaper photographers today discovered a print of Collins, posted in Crystal cave just ten days before he was trapped showing him crawling through a foot high crack between two ledges in almost exactly the same position in which he now is lying imprisoned. No photograph has been taken of Collins' present predicament.

Marshall Collins, one of the victim's brothers, is very well satisfied with the rescue work which has been done. Homer Collins, another brother, feels differently about it. "I could have gone down in the cave myself and got through to Floyd faster than the shaft," he declared.

If Floyd Collins is dead, his brother Marshall wants to get the body out if it is all possible. If it is not, then the Collins family will derive sorrowful satisfaction in the knowledge that Floyd had previously said, when he had no intimation that he might be entombed, that he wanted to be buried in one of the caves in which he spent his life work.

Twenty or more feet of rock and dirt of the same kind as thus far has been encountered, is expected by those in charge of the work. Limestone almost solid, at least 4 feet thick lie beneath the 45 foot level, but thus far only large stones and sandy dirt have been found.

Marion Collins, Floyd's uncle, arrived yesterday from St. Louis and said he thought everything within human power was being done to determine the fate of his nephew.

All the resources of the Red Cross organization will be available to meet any emergency which may arise, L. C. Berry, divisional field representative from Washington, D. C., told the Associated Press today shortly after his arrival. The local relief work thus far done, he said, has been "remarkable."

A. B. Marshall, of Danville, Ky. miner who has worked on every section of Timberling which has been done, said the shaft would not reach Collins' level "until Wednesday barring luck one way or the other." Those in charge of the work declined to speculate.

The last time that this cave country came into nation-wide prominence was 40 years ago when Jesse and Frank James of the noted Missouri outlaw band, robbed the mammoth cave stage coach. A few months later Jesse was killed and much of the jewelry was recovered.

COLLINS HAS BEEN FOUR DAYS WITHOUT FOOD OR WATER

Cave City, Ky., Feb. 8—(By the A. P.)—The race with death, to reach Floyd Collins, pinioned at the bottom of Sand Cave tonight had settled down to a contest of endurance for the human elements—the volunteer diggers in the rescue shaft and Collins' vitality.

Radio tests today showed, the experimenters said, that Collins was still alive and able to move the electric light bulb hung about his neck. Doctors and some of the state officials directing the work of rescue were not so sanguine, but the work proceeded at top speed just the same.

The shaft tonight reached 25 feet, with an almost equal distance to go before a 20 foot limestone strata is reached which will enable the diggers to advance twice as fast with no fear of cave-ins.

The thousands of sight-seers who crowded about the cave today and jammed the narrow mountain road from Cave City, had scattered by night fall, and three men at a time, in half hour reliefs, kept digging and hoisting. The finding of a lime stone ledge to support the heavy shaft timbering was one favorable break in the luck today, but the drill which has penetrated more than 60 feet below the surface has not yet reached a cavern.

Collins tonight had been four days without food, or any water except such as dripped from the roof of his prison and at 10 p. m. had been underground nine and a half days.

RADIO TESTS SHOW FLOYD COLLINS STILL IS ALIVE

Cave City, Ky., Feb. 8—(By the A. P.)—Radio tests, similar to those attempted last week, were used today in an effort to determine whether Floyd Collins is still alive. The radio experimenters declared after their tests, that he is.

A three stage amplified shunted by a condenser was connected across the two electric light wires leading to Collins and the experimenters claimed they heard the same faint rattle in the head phones that was heard before, presumably caused by Collins moving when his electric light went out.

The tunnel where Collins is imprisoned was entered today and further tests made to prove that the light globe hanging around his neck still burns.

FINANCIER THOMAS W. LAWSON DEAD IN BOSTON

Boston, Feb. 8.—Thomas W. Lawson, author of "Friday the Thirteenth," "Frenzied Finance," "The Leak" and other books and known as one of the most picturesque figures the American financial world had ever produced, is dead here today, following a recent operation from which he was expected to fully recover. Mr. Lawson died in a hospital early this morning, following a sudden relapse last night. His two sons, Douglas and Arnold Lawson, were with him when the end came.

"Tom" Lawson, son of a Nova Scotia carpenter, began his spectacular career by running away from school at the age of 12 and finding employment in the old State street firm of Stevens, Amory and company. By the time he was 16, he was counting his gains and losses in four figures. At that time a western railroad, now part of the "Big Four" was in financial difficulties, its stock falling to $3 a share. His employes were interested in negotiations for the return of some of their money which had been carried to Canada by an officer of the firm. Young Lawson made up a pool, buying stock at $3 and selling it for $22. He made $40,000 on the deal. Soon afterwards he lost all but $130 in another pool. It was characteristic of him that he gave a dinner to his associates with this money, handing the waiter his last $5 as a tip. Luck soon returned to his standard, however, and by the time he was 20 years old, his bank account was close to six figures.

From then on his life was a series of ups and downs with fortune alternately frowning and smiling upon him. Huge fortunes were made and lost overnight. It was said that in 20 years he made and lost $40,000,000. He carried emeralds and diamonds loose in his pocket. One story tells how he once produced 20 certified checks for $100,000 each which he had been carrying around with him and told his secretary to bank enough of them to pay all outstanding bills—then aggregating $400,000—and give him back the change. He is said to have always carried $7,000 in bills on his person.

Mr. Lawson is said to have spent $2,000,000 on "Dreamwold, his magnificent estate at Egypt, which included a village for his workers, a race track and the last word in stables and dog kennels. The Nest," a simple cottage to which Mr. and Mrs. Lawson often retired, adjoined the main building of the estate.

With the passage of years, however, Mr. Lawson's luck seemed to desert him, his golden touch lost its Midas-like power. And so in 1922 Dreamwold and everything connected with it went under the auctioneer's hammer to meet liabilities of about $255,000. It was said at the time that this did not mean that Mr. Lawson himself was insolvent. It seemed ironical that the sale should have been consummated on Friday, the 13th of October. Following the sale, Mr. Lawson disappeared from public view and there were rumors that he was dying. He spent most of his time living quietly in Maine and in Boston.

A year ago, suffering from diabetes, he went to a sanatorium in Montreal, and was reported to be on the way to recovery following insulin treatment.

Mr. Lawson was brought to this city from Bar Harbor, Me., about three weeks ago and on January 24 underwent an operation, preliminary to another which was to have been performed later.

Mr. Lawson is survived by two sons, and four daughters. Funeral arrangements have not yet been announced

FINE IMPRESSION MADE BY PRINCE OF WALES

London, Feb. 8.— The Prince of Wales last night made a fine impression upon the townspeople of Melton-Mowbray, in Leicestershire, through the attentions he showed to a blind girl who was among the guests at a ball given by the British Legation.

When the prince learned that Miss Mabel Southgate, former school teacher who lost her sight during the influenza epidemic in 1918 was present, he immediately expressed a desire to dance with her. Miss Southgate was led across the floor and introduced to the prince who foxtrotted and talked affably with her throughout the dance and three encores. Wales inquired sympathetically about her affliction and then talked to her about his approaching visit to South Africa and Argentina.

During the dance the conversation turned to the radio, and Miss Southgate informed the prince that she had heard him speak over the radio. The prince remarked that he supposed he would have to make numerous speeches during his coming tour.

SYSTEMATIC SEARCH OF ALLEGED MURDER HOUSE

Los Angeles, Feb. 8.—Systematic search for the house or shack in which authorities now believe May and Nina Martin were held captive before they were murdered and flung into a shallow grave on Angeles Mesa, in the suburbs of Los Angeles, was set in motion by the sheriff's office today.

Discovery, at some distance from the grave, of shoes missing from the feet of the little girls when their bodies were found last week, convinced investigators that the sisters were dead when they were taken to the Mesa months ago.

S. C. Stone, former private watchman in the residence district from which the girls, aged 13 and 8 disappeared last August 23 was held in the county jail tonight.

Steamer President Harrison in Distress

London, Feb. 8 (By the A. P.)—A distress signal from the American steamer President Harrison was received at the wireless station on the island of Chios, in the Aegean sea, today, says a dispatch received by Lloyds from Athens.

The position of the steamer was given as Latitude 38.58 north, Longitude 24.22 east, which is in the Mediterranean sea between the Greek archipelago and the coast of north Africa.

The steamer President Harrison, reported from Greece today as being in distress in the Mediterranean Sea, is a U. S. shipping board vessel of 10,533 tons. The steamer sailed from New York on November 13 for Alexandria by way of San Francisco and other Pacific ports.

OWNERS OF THE STEAMER DOUBT TRUTH OF REPORT

San Francisco, Feb. 8.—The Robert Dollar company, owner of the S. S. President Harrison, which was reported in distress today in the Mediterranean Sea, announced tonight that officials of the company had received a cablegram from Naples saying that the ship had left that port at 11 a. m. today and they did not think it possible that the ship was in trouble.

Company officials said that inasmuch as the President Harrison had left Alexandria Thursday for New York and had left Naples today it would be so far west of the Island of Chios in the Aegean Sea that a wireless station there picked up a report of a vessel in distress must have been mistaken in the name of the ship.

17 Japanese Lost In Vancouver Harbor

Sailors Were Returning to Cruiser When Boat Was Sunk in Collision—Nine Others Still Missing.

Vancouver, B. C.—Seventeen Japanese, including one officer, two petty officers and fourteen sailors were drowned in the harbor here early today when the pinnance in which they were returning to the cruiser Idzuma after enjoying shore leave, collided with the Canadian Pacific tug Nanoose. The bodies of the officer, petty officers and five seamen have been recovered. Nine other sailors missing.

The Idzuma is one of three vessels of the Japanese navy training squadron here on the last leg of a 20,000 mile tour. The others are the cruisers Asama and Yakumo.

Eighty members of the Idzuma's crew were aboard a barge being towed by the Binnace. The Nanoose also had a barge in tow. Owing to the fact that the night was very dark and foggy, neither vessel was seen by the other until too late to avoid a collision. The nanose struck the Binnace a glancing blow which caused it to capsize. Seven of the Binnace's crew were picked up by boats sent out from the cruisers, but two died before reaching ship.

HYLAN HELD RESPONSIBLE FOR NEW YORK TRANSIT SNARL

New York, Feb. 8—Mayor Hylan and his administration are held mainly responsible for New York's transit snarl and no cause exists for the removal of the state transit commissioner, said a report made to Governor Smith today by Supreme Court Justice McAvoy, who was named to investigate the situation.

Justice McAvoy, in his report, finds that "the repeated and persistent refusal of the mayor" and other city officials to adopt proposals of new subway routes and to approve contracts for routes otherwise suggested, "completely frustrated provisions for increased transit facilities."

This refusal was continued by the city officials, says the report, in face of the fact that the total number of passengers carried on all the city's subways had grown from 676,000,000 in the fiscal year ending with June, 1924. There was virtually no subway construction or increase of subway transportation facilities in that period, Justice McAvoy holds.

To remedy the situation, Justice McAvoy recommends that the city, now in complete control of the matter of initiating transit matters in the greater city, immediately go ahead with a comprehensive plan of subway construction to be linked with existing lines. Various small bits of construction now under way should be rushed says the report, and the two-tracked two-track routes should be converted into four track lines.

Justice McAvoy also upholds the contention of the transit commission that the city's dilatory tactics in constructing shop and inspection yard facilities for the companies' use, as it was obliged to do under contract, was a large contributory factor to the existing congestion and urged that the municipality rush this work to completion. He also urged that the lines should be enfranchised by the city to augment surface car facilities.

ATTITUDE OF GREAT BRITAIN ON THE FRENCH WAR DEBT

The Baldwin Government Declines to Agree That France's Payments Should Be Dependent Upon Germany's Full Payment of the Dawes Plan Annuities—Note Suggests That Premier Herriot of France or Finance Minister Clementel Come to London For the Purpose of Working Out Details.

London, Feb. 8—(By the A. P.)—Great Britain's note to France explaining the Baldwin government's viewpoint on the question of the repayment of France's debt to Great Britain proves to be a much shorter document than had originally been expected. It lays down succinctly the principles on which Great Britain hopes France will agree to meet her obligations, without going into any detail or figures. The idea is advanced that details may be threshed out in conference here should Premer Herriot or Finance Minister Clementel, or both, come to London for this purpose.

Apparently when the British draft note was under consideration in the British cabinet, it was found difficult to arrive at an agreement on many details, and hence it was decided to confine the note to broad principles. The main points of the note are, first, that Great Britain declines to agree that France's payments should be dependent upon Germany's full payment of the Dawes plan annuities; second, that, with a view of facilitating repayments, Great Britain is willing to accept fixed annual payments, irrespective of the Dawes proceeds, with a further annual charge of the French share in those proceeds, and third, that Great Britain will devote any surplus beyond requirements for her American indebtedness to diminish the burdens upon Great Britain's allies.

The note was published just in time to be discussed by parliament, which will reassemble next Tuesday for the first real legislative session of Premier Baldwin's second administration—the short session before Christmas having been a mere prelude to swear in member—elect and to hear the king's speech.

The session beginning next Tuesday, which will open without any special ceremonies, should prove of absorbing interest, both in the home and the foreign field. Up to Eastertide, however, the center of the stage will be held by the conservative party's newest recruit, Winston Spencer Churchill, chancellor of the exchequer, for during this period there will be little time to debate anything except the nation's finances, including the question of the French debt.

There is little doubt that the opposition will provoke debate on Mr. Churchill's note to M. Clementel, and it is not unlikely that the chief point of the attack will be that, under the stipulation that French repayments cannot be dependent upon a full yield of the Dawes plan, France would, in the event of a German default, find herself in the position of paying reparations to Great Britain.

The attitude hitherto has been that France can only pay either Great or United States, if she gets reparations from Germany; and this attitude probably will find a deal of support among the liberal and labor members of the house of commons.

Should the hoped-for conference in London materialize, it probably will be wisedly omitted details from his note to France in order to give an open field for negotiations as chancellor of the exchequer, Mr. Churchill is anxious to reduce the income tax burden, but with the admiralty pressing for a bigger naval building programme, and with only the smallest hope for reducing the national expenditure, his only resource seems to be to get some offset from France for the heavy debt payments to the United States. Therefore, the British government probably will be indulgent if France makes any acceptable proposition.

FRANCE REGARDS NOTE AS OF FRIENDLY SPIRIT

Paris, Feb. 8—(By the A. P.)—The French government withheld the British note on debts until after the Sunday afternoon papers had appeared because it was not willing that the text should be printed in France before it had been published in England. Therefore such comment as appeared in the afternoon papers today is based on forecasts of what the note would say.

This comment describes the note as having been conceived in an absolutely friendly spirit and as constituting the starting point for negotiations which may lead to a satisfactory settlement of the serious financial questions between France and Great Britain.

This view evidently is shared by the French government, as Premier Herriot, on receipt of the note, immediately telegraphed to Aime Joseph de Fleuriau, the French ambassador in London, to inform Chancellor of the Exchequer Churchill that the French government appreciated the friendly tone of the British note and would give it most serious consideration.

It is generally taken for granted that the note is the prelude to a visit by Premier Herriot and Finance Minister Clementel to London to discuss the debt question with the British government. The date of such a visit is not considered close at hand. It is prophesied that Minister of War Nollet will accompany the premier and the finance minister to London when they do make the trip, as discussion of the question of evacuation of the Cologne Bridgehead and the general question of security may follow the debt conversation.

CONSIDERATION OF NOTE WILL REQUIRE TIME

Paris, Feb. 8.—(By The A. P.)—Examination of the British government's note to France regarding France's war debt to Great Britain, which was received by the French government yesterday, will require considerable time by the minister of finance and the minister of foreign affairs.

The note proposes that France's repayment of her debt be divided into two distinct parts, one part to be taken from the Dawes plan annuities and the other in sums payable yearly notwithstanding what Germany may have paid France. Before negotiations can be commenced on these bases, figures which can be proposed under each head must be studied.

Two hundred million francs worth of payments in kind were offered last Friday under the Dawes plan to the representatives of the devastated departments to fulfill the reconstruction programme of the liberated regions for 1925. The effect of the British proposals on the particular part of the Dawes plan, it is said, will involve much study.

DOOM'S DAY BELIEVER WAS HOOTED FROM STAGE

Patchogue, N. Y., Feb. 8—Robert Reidt, of East Patchogue, who expected the end of the world yesterday morning, tonight was hooted from the stage of the Patchogue Theatre when he atempted to explain his belief that the millenium has only been delayed and will arrive within a week.

His appearance was preceded by the strains of "California, Here I Come," played by the Orchestra. The overture was interrupted by Michael Glynn manager of the theatre, who called it inappropriate.

Miss Catherine Kennedy, of Valley Stream, was the first of the group to speak.

Reidt then appeared and said that tonight's eclipse of the moon was one of the signs of the end of the world, which he said, will come within a week. He then started to talk of his early life in Germany until he was interrupted by a voice from the audience which demanded his withdrawal, which was rapidly augmented by others.

CHIEF OF DOVER, N. H., FIRE DEPT INSTANTLY KILLED

Dover, N. H., Feb. 8.—James Smith, chief engineer of the Dover fire department was instantly killed tonight by an explosion of illuminating gas in the basement of the Strafford bank building located in the center of the city. He had been called by the janitor to investigate the source of leaking gas. According to the janitor, Alex Thompson, a terrific explosion immediately followed the striking of a match by Smith. Thompson escaped injury and the building was not seriously damaged. Smith suffered a fractured skull.

WAR DEPT TAKES UP AIRCRAFT CONTROVERSY

Washington, Feb. 8—The scene of the aircraft controversy appeared today to have shifted temporarily from the capitol to the war department, where the reply of Brigadier General Mitchell, assistant chief of the army air service, to Secretary Weeks, demand for substantiation of testimony before congressional committees, is before officials for consideration.

The house aircraft committee, which last week made public the general's letter before it had reached the secretary, is in recess until Thursday. Secretary Weeks announced he would issue a statement on the matter as soon as he had time to examine the reply, which reiterated some of the statements objected to as having "seriously reflected," on the department.

In a statement made public yesterday, Secretary Weeks declared those charged with the drafting of army policies, including General Pershing, and who differed with the Mitchell air program had been subjected to "supercilious criticism," but he made no direct reference to the assistant air chief's letter, and another statement dealing with this is expected.

The question of General Mitchell's reappointment to his present assignment which expires next March, is being held up, meanwhile, pending the outcome of the present controversy. If General Mitchell is not reappointed, he will automatically revert to the rank of colonel.

HOTEL HARMONY, COHOES, BADLY DAMAGED BY FIRE

Cohoes, N. Y., Feb. 8.—Fire which broke out this afternoon in a stairway at the north end of the Harmony hotel building was brought under control tonight after it had damaged the hotel and destroyed the interior and stock of a paint store and a dance hall and bowling alleys. Damage could not be estimated tonight, although the store proprietor said $15,000 stock was destroyed.

George Wertheim, son of Walter H. Wertheim, manager of the Cohoes Building Supply company, who entered the paint store to save the books, was cut by falling glass and with the books was carried out by firemen. The 25 guests of the hotel escaped.

The fire apparently started in a stairway on the first floor of the north end of the hotel and because the stair opening acted as a flue, rapidly gained headway. It's cause was not determined.

WILLIMANTIC

NORWICH BULLETIN

William P. Jordan, of the Jordan Hardware Co., chairman of the campaign executive committee on the erection of the new hotel for Willimantic states that the building of a new and modern hotel in Willimantic by community effort will be the most important step this city has taken in a quarter of a century, and that the successful conclusion of this campaign will be a real birthday for Willimantic. It will be the date, he said, from which to mark a new spirit—"the spirit of cooperation that will put us on a par with all those other communities where we find splendid institutions and buildings that are a credit to their citizens through whose combined efforts they have been provided.

One of the points which everyone should consider when purchasing stock in the proposed enterprise is that the immediate payment of funds is not required for the entire amount of purchase. Only 20 per cent. of the purchase price is due on the first payment, and that is not payable until the fifteenth of March. After that 10 per cent. is payable every two months until fully paid. In this way money can be paid out of salaries and incomes and need not necessarily involve the capital account of any subscriber. Another point is the rating of the American Hotels Corporation, which has been satisfactorily investigated by the committee. In return for their services as operators, the corporation is to receive fifty per cent. of the common stock.

In answer to a question put by one of the business men as to whether there was danger that the corporation would gain control of the hotel and handicap the local stockholders, Mr. Jordan said that one must remember that the preferred stockholders are to be given the other fifty per cent of the common stock and will have, therefore, an equal vote with the operators. In order to insure an equal division of the board, the American Hotels is willing to place a clause in its contract stating that their stock will vote for directors named by the local Chamber of Commerce or some similar body. Mr. Jordan is confident that it can be done, and that there are enough "I will" citizens in the city to carry the project through successfully.

A fine of $5 and costs, amounting to $12.15 was imposed by Judge F. H. Foss Saturday morning in police court on Augusta Peterson, employed in the winding department of the American Thread Company, who appeared on the double charge of theft and damage to private property. The charge of theft was nolled, but Prosecuting Attorney Samuel B. Harvey informed the court that similar offences have taken place at the plant at previous times, when the women cut the skeins of imperfect thread instead of winding them on the spools in order to save time in getting off production. The spools thus treated were entirely unfit for use. The act was detected, and a bundle of damaged skeins brought to light and exhibited in court by Edgar H. Richmond, representing the American Thread Company.

In connection with the injunction granted in the superior court in New Haven Friday on application of Margaret M. Wilson of Meriden against Charles P. Cahill of Hartford, Frank S. Lynch of Willimantic, and the Hartford-Willimantic Jitney Association, Inc., it is said that Saturday officials of the association stated that the association itself was in no way involved in the suit against Cahill and Lynch, even though at the time of the accident and subsequent death of the Wilson woman they were connected with the jitney line. The company has been reorganized since that time, and Cahill is not at present even a member of the association. The automobile in which the Wilson woman was riding at the time of the accident was owned by Cahill and Lynch and operated by John Girard of this city, but on a private contract and not by the jitney association or over its route. Following the accident, the affair was investigated by the state police and their statement was to the effect that the accident was unavoidable.

When the case of Stephen Kucharski, charged with failure to send his son to school at the beginning of the winter term, came up in police court Saturday morning after being continued from last Thursday, Prosecuting Attorney Harvey stated that Kucharski was entitled to the benefit of the doubt. When the case came up two weeks ago, Kucharski claimed that Henry, his son, was only six years old, born in the town of Lebanon, on Nov. 23, 1918, but the records of the school enumerator, Jean B. Paulhus, and Archibald W. Buchanan, agent for the state board of education, and Rev. P. J. Mooney, pastor of St. Andrew's church, Colchester, went to prove that the child was born December 23, 1917, and baptised, December 25th of the next year. At that time a statement from the assistant clerk of the Lebanon town court was produced by Kucharski in which he had sworn that the child was born November 23, 1918, Attorney Harvey also said that he would not oppose a nolle in the case. Attorney Harry S. Gaucher, who appeared for Kucharski stated that the nolle was satisfactory both to his client and himself, but that some sort of clearance papers were desired from the court attesting to the age of the child. The request was granted by Judge Foss.

The third writ against Abraham and Molly Krug, charged with failure to properly heat a flat owned by them on Union street and occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Peck, was made out Thursday and the case was called Friday and postponed again until Saturday morning. A certificate from his physician, stating that Krug was ill and unable to appear necessitated a further postponement of the case that is now scheduled to make its next appearance this (Monday) morning. The Pecks claim that their apartment on cold days reaches an average of 55 degrees, 68 being the minimum temperature prescribed by the law.

The death of Philiass Gaudreau, 52, a former resident of Willimantic occurred Friday afternoon at the New Haven hospital, where he had lain unconscious since last Sunday. I., Archie of Norwich, Samuel of Hartford, Joseph of Willimantic, Ernest of Hartford, and August of New York City, also five sisters, Mrs. Auguste Roy of New Haven, Mrs. Philomene Parent of South Berwick, Maine, Mrs. Adelaide Marrotte and Mrs. Arthur Goodwin of this city, and Mrs. Agnes Boulin of Pittsfield, Mass.

The case of Aleck Tulski, charged with assault came up again in police court Saturday morning, with the complainant in the case conspicuous by his absence. Due to the fact that the case had been continued several times and there appeared to be no chance from it, Prosecuting Attorney Harvey recommended that the case against Tulski has indicated that he is not guilty of the charges laid against him and he was discharged without being required to pay the costs of the court.

In spite of intense pain caused when she slipped on the ice and sustained a fractured right knee, while leaving her home on Windham road, Miss Margaret Twomey boarded a trolley Thursday evening, rode about ten minutes to the terminal and then walked several blocks to the office of a local physician to have her injury treated. The fracture was reduced and she was taken to St. Joseph's hospital where she will remain until her recovery.

BOY SCOUTS' ANNIVERSARY OBSERVED ON SUNDAY

(Speical to The Bulletin.)

Willimantic, Feb. 8.—Several of the churches in town united in services Sunday morning for the Boy Scouts, in response to the suggestion sent out by national headquarters concerning the observance of the 15th anniversary of the Boy Scout movement in America. In the city there are five troops of scouts, Troop 1 of the boys of St. Paul's parish, Troop 2, 3 and 4 of St. Joseph's and Troop 5 of the First Congregational church. The movement was started here in 1912, two years after its organization as a national body, in the First Congregational church, by the then pastor, Rev. William S. Beard, and Robert Fenton, who served as the first scoutmaster. Since that time four others have been organized and the scouts of the Congregational church own their own camp at Eastford, where they go every summer. At St. Joseph's church the first troop was started four years ago, when the late Rev. John E. Clark was pastor, with Fr. Otto Beaumister, the curate, as the first acting scoutmaster. These troops camp in different places, going last year to Columbia lake. One of the most interesting things accomplished by these boys is the organization of a scout band of more than 60 members under the leadership of Charles S. C. Wheeler. It is said that this is the only Boy Scout band in Connecticut. Including the band and the three troops, St. Joseph's has a present membership of over 90. The active masters are William Meehan, Anthony Meehan and Jerry McCarthy.

At the services at St. Paul's Rev. Frederick C. Williams, the rector, who is also acting scoutmaster of Troop 1, spoke from the text I Am Among You As He That Serveth. Treating the subject from the scout standpoint that teaches the boys to serve rather than to succeed. This troop has 18 members, all of whom attended. It was organized four years ago by Frederick A. Benton, scout executive of Norwich, and Arthur L. Peale, president of the council in Norwich. Mr. Williams is making an effort as last year to send a message from the mayor to the governor by scouts, hiking from Norwich to Willimantic and to Manchester, next Saturday.

The scouts of Troop 5 attended the Congregational church in uniform, with 40 or 50 ex-scouts still living in the city. Rev. Arthur S. Wheelock preached from the text A Good Scout, saying in particular that a good scout is one who is willing to do more than his share for the sake of the troop.

HANS EBELL'S RECITAL DELIGHTS SUNDAY AUDIENCE

Willimantic, Feb. 8.—Hans Ebell, head of the piano department of Boston Conservatory of Music, gave the second in a series of three piano recitals Sunday afternoon in the high school auditorium before a very responsive audience. Mr. Ebell played from Bach: Two Preludes and Fugues from the Well-tempered Clavichord, C Major (Book I) and G Major (Book II); Three Part Invention in E minor, and Organ Prelude and Fugue in A minor, transcribed by Liszt; from Chopin: Preludes in B-flat major and G minor, Barcarolle, Two Masurkas; Waltz and Ballade. For the third part of the program: Poeme erotique, Grandmother's Minuet and Nocturne from Griegfi Bird Song by Palmgren; Pres de la mer (By the Seashore), by Arensky; March Wind, by Macdowell, and Waltz from the ballet "Naila" by Delibes-Dohnanyi. He responded to two encores with "Petite Valse" by Henseit and "Etude in A-flat" by Chopin. All the way through his playing there runs an indefinable "hunger after the perfect" in harmony and tone, to which he attained in moments of his playing with a poignancy that brought tears. His Organ Prelude and Fugue in A-minor, the Barcarolle from Chopin, and the Waltz from "Naila" were especially remarkable. He gave "Grandmother's Minuet" with a very unusual delicacy and simplicity. And if it were not so nearly faultless, one might be tempted to forget his technique entirely in the sweetness of his music.

WESTMINSTER

The combined church school and morning worship of Westminster was held in the temporary parsonage (the Coulter house) Sunday, the 1st, with a "baker's dozen" in attendance, in spite of ice-covered roads, two children and a lady walking two miles and over in each direction to be present. Family Sunday (the first in Sunday in February) when each member of the family from oldest down, including infants, is present in the morning service in the house of God, was the theme presented. This "day" was instituted in Groton, this state, some years ago; this year adopted by the churches of New London and elsewhere. It is planned to be observed about 40 days after Christmas; in commemoration of the presentation of Christ in the temple by his parents at that age; and is one of the "all there" efforts of the churches also.

For the hour of prayer in the homes Wednesday, Feb. 11, the requirement is to read Nehemiah, chapter 8—thro' the book. Did the Jews experience a real revival at the time depicted? Reasons for one's opinion. Will an individual revival follow each individual effort to sacrifice for God, reject evil and seek God, now?

"Power" is the title of an instructive but non-technical motion picture which is to be shown on Feb. 13th at 7.30 p. m., at the Elizabeth street schoolhouse under the auspices of the West End Community association. Everybody from every section of the town is cordially invited by the association to witness this test which cost Stone & Webster $15,000 to produce and which is lent to the West End Community association, through the courtesy of The Eastern Connecticut Power company.

The strides made in the electrical field have been so great even in the last twenty years that it was deemed well nigh impossible to put anything in motion picture form, but Stone & Webster have accomplished the seemingly impossible almost in the same ratio as each inventor created a miracle during the different stages of electrical development.

Every housewife and every husband is cautioned not to miss this treat at the Elizabeth street schoolhouse, Friday evening, Feb. 13th, at 7.30 p. m.

Strand Theatre

From a picture standpoint it would be a difficult task to find a more pleasing photoplay entertainment than was offered at the Strand theatre last night. It is easy to realise why the Strand is fast becoming so popular and that reason is because the pictures are carefully selected and properly presented in a manner which appeals to lovers of the silent drama. "Neglected Women" is a stirring drama that deals with the most important phase of human relationship—marriage. You're going to love this full-of-action, full of romance, full-of-interest picture.

Seena Owens, has been cast as the leading female star and in the character of Camilla Challenor gives one of the best screen performances of her brilliant career. Kenneth McDonald noted for fearless screen stunts was also on the same program in a feature picture chock full of action from the first flicker on the screen, "After A Million" was the title of the latter feature and in "After a Million," this clever film star has outdone himself in giving thrilling performances. Help Your Self, a very funny comedy was also shown and the same program will be repeated at the Strand today and Tuesday. Strand prices at all times are at all daily matinees except Saturday all seats are ten cents and at evening except Sunday, children ten cents and adults twenty cents.

Breed Theatre

Here is a novelty that will bring gasps from the women patrons; gasps of admiration and approval. It shows Hope Hampton in the very latest in Paris gowns, as displayed in McCall's Fashion News. The gowns are shown in their natural colors and neither they nor Miss Hampton will be hard to look at even for the men customers.

These creations which will be shown at the Breed theatre today, Monday and Wednesday, are by Paul Poiret, Lanvin, Worth, Bone, Jenny and Doucet. There are morning gowns, afternoon and evening dinner dresses and suits, with wraps for all occasions.

Scarfs and hats are also included, as are lounging robes and pajamas. There is no doubt for a novelty this will prove attractive.

Lyceum Theatre

"Odd Jobs", a new comedy drama by Fred Wall and Ralph Murphy, will be presented at the Lyceum theatre, New London, one night, Lincoln's birthday, Thursday, Feb. 12. The cast is headed by Tim Murphy, famous in the old Hoyt comedies and who has just completed a four years' engagement in "The First Year." Minnie Dupree and Charles Abbe also have leading roles and others in the cast include Olga Lee, Robert Middlemass, Eugene Lockhart, Glen Burdette and Elizabeth Allen. The play is presented by Sam Comly, Inc., and was staged by Edgar MacGregor. It will be shown on Broadway, New York city, the latter part of the month.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Broadway Theater

The Broadway theater management is advertising a big double show for one admission price for the first half of the week.

To our readers we will say that the show is just that and a little more. The photoplay alone, which was shown yesterday at that popular playhouse, attracted a capacity house and was spoken of as the best picture ever seen in Norwich for some time.

The B. F. Keith vaudeville which is to be shown as an added attraction is certain to uphold the picture's standing.

Amanda Gilbert and Howard May in Song Classiques and Booth and Mae in a 20th century novelty will close the show.

The Golden Bed now at the Broadway theater is a story of two girls, a pampered belle and her neglected sister—and what they do for a self-made millionaire who is an all too human combination of strength and weakness.

The Golden Bed will strike an unusually human note to those who have watched hard-working "nobodies" rise to wealth and social position over those who believe a marvelous family name did away with all necessity for work.

Rod La Rocque, Vera Reynolds and Lillian Rich have the principal roles in the production. Others featured are Warner Baxter, Theodore Kosloff and Julia Faye.

There's a great cast playing in support.

Breed Theater

A great part of the action takes place on the high seas aboard the yacht. These scenes were made in the Pacific ocean off Catalina Island.

The McCall Fashion news, the Pathe news and a Sunshine comedy make up the remainder of the bill.

CERTIFIED LAUNDRIES PROTECT YOUR CLOTHING

Certified laundries are coming rapidly into existence in this country and to be modern all must, in time, be able to pass the certified test that has been made in many laundries in this country.

This movement came about when it was rumored that strong acids and chemicals were being used in laundries and a statement to this effect made by an Englishman aroused the ire of Harold L. Belting of Northampton, Mass. A chemist and health expert was immediately called into inspect his laundry and after an exhaustive report on the work of the laundry, its employees and all other things connected with it the laundry was certified.

During the examination clothing received from families was checked and after completing the washing systems were found not to have been pulled nor rubbed in the rotary washing machines of the cylinder type.

Every machine was examined, all processes tested and the various materials used in the washing processes where put under chemical analysis. At the conclusion of the examination the reports showed that the laundry with modern equipment was not harmful to clothing, even the finest fabrics and immediately the laundry became "certified."

During the examination some troubles were found due to improper dyes of the goods received, adulterated goods or substitution materials. It also proved that the process of washing and drying sterilizes the clothing and fabrics and it is doubtful if any disease producing bacteria could withstand the treatment given in the rotary process machine.

Materials such as soap powder, caustic soda, bleaching agents, starch, bluing and all other materials used in the modern laundry were tested and reports given as to proper use.

The report of the certified tests appeared in the Literary Digest of the past week and the processes mentioned, with materials used were those adopted by the Troy Steam Laundry and many other modern laundries which have endeavored to follow this system of "certified laundry" business policy.

Daniel E. Swift, 101 years old and said to be the oldest granger in Massachusetts, died at the home of a relative in West Wareham, Mass. He was a Civil War veteran and attended the 59th encampment of the G. A. R., in Boston last year and marched in the parade.

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

There is a story going back into the ages about three wise men who came out of the East and as to their veneration for the new-born King of Kings—a Christmas story; but this has little to do with the fact that there came out of the west, or thereabouts, Saturday, a basketball team calling themselves the Judeans who had little or no respect for the east nor what it produces in the way of basketball teams.

These Judeans, let it be known, came over here from Hartford and had the temerity to defeat the Service Battery team, than which, it has been believed here, there is no better amateur organization in Connecticut. Possibly the Judeans had not heard of this and were a bit ruthless.

However, the battery boys did not do so bad. The game went into an overtime period before the visitors established their supremacy and then only by the scant margin of one point, the score being Judeans, 34; Service Battery, 33.

The game was tied at 30-30 when the final whistle blew. The battery had led at the end of the first two periods, 18 to 12, and things didn't look so bad. At the end of the third period the visitors were leading, 27 to 26. That was different!

No such exciting game has been played in the state armory this season and the attendants were in a frenzy of excitement and enthusiasm.

The Judeans won in the overtime period on sheer merit, after giving one of the best exhibitions seen here in years on a basketball court. They constitute a fast and aggressive team, thoroughly conversant with basketball and all the ins and outs of the game.

Incidentally, it may be mentioned that lovers of sport are overlooking an opportunity of the winter if they pass up the basketball games at the state armory. The Service battery has a real team, as may be indicated by reference to the fact that they lost by only one point Saturday night to the championship amateur team of Hartford and a team that is a contender for the amateur championship of Connecticut.

Nature continued on Sunday to work away, as it did on Saturday, toward clearing the business section of the ice that has accumulated there during the past three or four weeks. It happens that the business section and some of Danielson's residential streets are the most unsafe for travel of any of the thoroughfares that are much traveled within miles of the borough. The state highways are practically free of ice, thanks to the good work of the state highway crews in getting over them with plows soon after storms of the past few week brought snow.

The this same attention could not be applied to the trunk line highway through the business section is a cause of regret. That the town probably was not in a position to care for the slush before a freeze turned it into ice on many streets of the borough is another source of worry for motorists, these February days. Outside the borough tire chains are not require, but they are a real need if one is to drive about town. Various streets are in such a mess that there is neither safety nor satisfaction in trying to get through them, even if one would accept the risk. Notably bad places are at the corner of Cottage and Furnace street. Nothing like the condition of these streets has been seen for years in this territory.

Home owners, newlyweds and everyone having home needs will find it to their advantage to get in touch with George F. Davignon of 172 Main St., Danielson, special representative of the Plaut-Cadden Co., eastern Connecticut's largest distributors of home furnishings, pianos and victrolas with stores in Norwich and New London. He has a message of economy of interest to everyone.—adv.

A few people who figured that this would be a week of oblivion—a period a few days after the end of the world—are back at work again this morning; or if they don't work, are hunting around through the newspapers, or elsewhere, for something else to worry about. It's a great world! No one can regulate it or forecast it with any certainty, or tell what it is going to be talking about tomorrow. But make no mistake about it. It will be talking! Even if it doesn't know what it is talking about. That may be one of the reasons that makes it great.

POLICE DOG AND PUPPY BURNED AT BRINDAMOUR FIRE

(Special to The Bulletin)

Danielson, Feb. 8.—For the first time in years a dwelling within a little more than a mile of Danielson center burned to the ground early Saturday evening. The home, that of Elmer Brindamour, was on the West Side, outside the fire hydrant zone, and there was little that could be done to save the comparatively new house from destruction, when an alarm was pulled in from Box No. 16, at the corner of Main and Maple streets, shortly after 8.30.

Prior to that time Chief A. P. Woodward of the fire department had received a telephone call asking for aid, but he had pointed out that it would be practically useless to send apparatus depending on a hydrant system for water into territory where no water for fire fighting purposes was available.

The fire was of such a nature as to cause speculation as to how it started. Mr. and Mrs. Brindamour were away from home at the time, the house being locked and in darkness. They were visiting friends in Wauregan. Residents of the vicinity and passerby saw smoke and then flame issuing from the roof and at once gave the alarm.

A crowd that congregated was impressed with the possibility of the imminent destruction of the dwelling and after someone had forced entrance to the building some of the furnishings were removed, but it was impossible to do any great amount of salvage work because of the rapidity with which the flames spread. A police dog and a police dog puppy perished in the flames, their shill cries as the flames wrapped them in a minute of agony being registered in a heart-rending way with the people who stood watching the fire and powerless to help the poor animals.

No explanation of why the fire should have started was available Saturday night or Sunday. It is understood that Mr. and Mrs. Brindamour were careful to see that everything was all right about their home before they left.

It is estimated that the loss partly covered by insurance, was between $4,000 and $5,000.

PUTNAM NEWS CO. STORE ROBBED EARLY SATURDAY

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Putnam, Feb. 8.—Daring burglars—there are reasons for believing that there were more than one—forced an entrance early Saturday morning into the store of the Putnam News Co., on Front street, rifled the cash register of $4 or $5 in change, and carried off a 38-calibre revolver belonging to Leon S. Talbott, one of the members of the firm.

From a vacant room in the building a hole was made in the partition large enough to permit a man to pass through. This gave access to the store room in the rear. A heavy door doubly secured by a folding bar, was chiseled through, making an opening a ninch wide and about ten inches long, just under the bar. The blade of a saw was inserted through the hole and the bar lifted on its swinging hinge enough to allow the door to be opened.

The way in which the work was done indicated that it was by persons familiar with the premises.

Chauncey Talbott, who with his son owns and conducts the business, was at a card party Friday night at which Captain of Police Jarvis was a guest. At 11.30 they visited the store and got a quantity of ice cream and took it back to the party, which fixes the burglary after midnight. This is the first break of this kind in Putnam for more than a year.

HEMINWAY SILK CO. DINNER TO MARK 75TH ANNIVERSARY

(Special to The Bulletin)

Putnam, Feb. 8.—Representatives of the Putnam branch of the Heminway Silk company will be in New York Wednesday night to attend the celebration of the 75th anniversary of the spooling of silk. All of Connecticut has reason to be proud of its part in this notable dinner at the famous old Manhattan Club. For it was a Connecticut man, General Merrit Heminway, who introduced at Watertown in 1849 the innovation of putting silk on spools which made the sewing machine possible, virtually revolutionizing the silk industry all over the world, and has saved housewives countless thousands of hours.

The dinner, given by the Heminway Silk company, at the same time celebrating its own 75th birthday, ranks with any function ever held. It is not often that the executive officials of two states—Connecticua and New York—join with leading figures of an industry and prominent merchants from different parts of the country in paying recognition to an event which happened three-quarters of a century ago. New York state's logical place in the picture is as the present worldcented of the great industry born here.

Especial interest in the forthcoming anniversary exists among the people of Putnam because of the fact that one of the principal plants of the Heminway Silk company is located in this city. This is one of the five great plants of the company, the others being located at Waterbury, Watertown, New London and Woodbury. All of the plants are running on good time and forecasts of the year's business indicate a long season of prosperity.

It is so natural nowadays to think of silk on spools that one can hardly conceive of resistence when it was first introduced. Yet this innovation, without which the sawing machine and many other developments would have been impossible, met with the stoutest opposition when General Heminway sponsored it.

An unusual type of man was required to persist in the face of the discouragement to which he was obliged to listen. General Heminway had an unusual kind of early training. As a youth, he exhibited his progressive tendencies by leaving his birthplace in East Haven, Conn., and settling in Watertown in 1821, engaging in a general mercantile business with one of the picturesque characters of that day as his senior partner. This man, James Bishop, also operated a tavern, blacksmith shop and other ventures, so that young Heminway got a wide assortment of experience.

During the sericulture craze in the thirties and early forties, which culminated in the so called "Mulberry Panic" General Heminway first became interested in silk. He also got interested in manufacturing around that time, making his start as a producer of buckles. At length he decided to make sawing silk and spent considerable time studying various features of the new problems. Among other things he visited Charles and Ward Cheney, at South Manchester, Conn., who had already gained considerable experience in the manufacture of sewing silk—though not on spools. He returned to Watertown and embarked on the venture which lives after him.

At that time all silk thread was sold in skeins. General Heminway—he was a general in the state militia—decided to try spooling silk, as cotton and linen thread was already spooled, and took it to various merchants. Though he was then 50, the ultra-conservative merchants of the time considered him a victim of boyish enthusiasm and told him it was impractical to spool silk thread because of its elastic qualities, so different from cotton and linen. Only at his urging they agreed to try the little spools, on each of which was wound 12 yards of sewing silk, and see if the public wanted to buy silk put up in that way.

The American public, even in 1849, appears to have been able to detect a good thing on sight, for the silk thread on spools was a success from the start. The merchants having proved wrong in their predictions, other manufacturers adopted the idea which in a few years spread all over the world.

The original spools were very much smaller and different in shape from those used at the present time, and their 12 yards of silk constituted less than an eighth of the amount on the 100-yard spools of today. General Heminway made his own spools at Watertown at first, turning them out on a hand lathe. Nowadays more than a hundred cords of wood from the Maine woods are used every month in the machine manufacture of spools for Heminway silks.

At the start the enterprise was known as M. Heminway & Sons' Silk company. So it remained when, in 1909, it was the first of the silk thread companies to branch out into the field of artificial silk, bringing out the Texto brand. In 1913 the name was changed to the H. K. H. Silk company upon its consolidation with the Hammond-Knowlton company and the purchase of two other companies. It now makes fabrics and hosiery as well as thread. Last month the name was again changed to the Heminway Silk company. And so, once more, it is known by the name of General Heminway, whose introduction of spools for silk 75 years ago is the event to be celebrated at the company's birthday on the night of Wednesday, Feb. 11.

A man may be honest and still take chances.

FANTASTIC SHOES NOW THE VOGUE IN PARIS

Paris, Feb. 8.—Fantastic looking shoes are being made by the fashionable Paris bootmakers, and, naturally, the prices will be high, not only are rich brocades and carved and colored leathers and all sorts of imitation jewels to be used, but real seed pearls are prescribed for those who would be distinctive.

The custom shoe makers are trying out asymmetrical designs, in which one side of the shoe is cut very low, while the other side is shaped differently, with a strap covering only one side. There also are many elaborate cut-out designs, the straps always being in contrasting colors.

Some idea of what Parisian shoe houses expect of fashionable women is seen in the advertising of one of the chain-store firms, which says that the well dressed women should have at least twelve pair of slippers and shoes.

Tassels, bows and even large artificial flowers are offered as decorations to vary the usual cut steel and jewelled buckles, while gem-studded heels add to the glory of the newest footwear. This richness in shoe styles has prom etpdone Riviera casino to plan an elevated dancing floor in the center of the dining room so that the ankles of the dancers will be on the level with diners' eyes.

THE OPIUM FIGHT.

When Bishop Brent withdrew in disgust from the opium conference at Geneva there was a feeling that he might have acted in haste, and in view of the difficulty involved in getting the nations together on this matter that he should have discounted the luke warm attitude manifested by some and the oppositions displayed by others.

Now that the remainder of the American delegation at the international conference has thrown up its hands and departed, there may be a better idea obtained of the actual situation and a realization that Bishop Brent made no hasty analysis of the situation when he recognized the impossibility of making any headway weeks ago.

The aim of the American delegates has been to get the countries of the world to agree to a policy of curtailed production, so that there would be a ten per cent reduction in raw opium for a period of ten years, and that only enough should be produced as would be required for medicinal and scientific purposes.

This effort is based upon the need of stopping production in order to stop consumption. As long as it is produced it is next to impossible to stop the smuggling and illegal traffic in the various forms of the drug. The difficulties even after vigorous enforcement have to be admitted. The need, therefore, is to stop the production and to get those countries, which profit so much from it moneywise and which are not so anxious to give up the use of it as we are, to right about face and join the opposition.

That the American delegates are discouraged is not surprising. Perhaps they had good reason to expect that they would be when they started. That the adoption of the American plan would have been a great thing for the world ought not to be questioned, but the real task comes in making certain other countries take that same view and agree to aid in overcoming the difficulties that stand in the way of its attainment. Like all such fights failure cannot be permitted to end the efforts. Just as long as it is believed that the stopping of opium production is needed there must be a fight in its behalf. Perhaps the influence which American delegates have had thus far will bear good fruit in the future. There is much gained by getting thought headed in the right direction.

CONVICTS AND AUTOS.

Is there any wonder that New York feels the need of filling up some of the gaps in its automobile laws? Can there be any surprise over the belief that there has been a laxity in the past that is deplorable and that there should be no further delay in overcoming it?

If there is, there are instances brought to light almost every day which make it evident that improvement should no longer be neglected. Only a few days ago a young man hired a taxi in Manhattan at a fixed price to take himself and another to Brooklyn. It was a longer trip than it needed to have been because the taxi driver got lost and piled up mile after mile upon the riders. That was not overlooked by the one who ordered the machine, but he was willing to pay the bill according to the price fixed. That, however, was ignored by the driver who demanded several dollars in excess. The bill was finally paid without a tip, the whole matter leading to some words which resulted in the taxi driver drawing a gun and shooting the young man in the street.

It now develops, after the police succeeded in running down the driver that he is an ex-convict, that he had no driver's license and that he made a practice of hiring the taxi for the evening and got all he made over $5. How many more are engaged in the same kind of a game can be surmised from the statement of the taxi owner that not one in a hundred taxi drivers "is on the level."

They get away with murder, banditry and most anything in New York. Shootings are not confined to auto or taxi drivers. Murder would be committed if there were no automobiles, but New York must be thoroughly aware of the fact that there is crime enough there without making it possible through lax licensing of drivers to aid in its increase. New York has good and sufficient reason to keep the criminal class and automobiles as far apart as it is possible. When such conditions exist can be there any doubt about the need of strengthening the New York auto laws?

CANADIAN POWER PLANTS.

Canadians, or at least many in Canada, do not take kindly to the idea of having such natural resources as the water power developed for the benefit of those outside of the dominion. They know that there is much to be had, that it is going to waste, that it has been going to waste for centuries and yet they are willing that it should continue to go undeveloped for numberless centuries in the future except as Canada needs and makes use of it for itself.

Perhaps it is natural that there should be a proper guard placed over many resources. Canada might not want all its wheat sent out of the country, or all its lumber, or pulp or other raw materials which are required for use or manufacture at home. It is, however, willing and anxious to dispose of the surplus over and above its requirements until it comes to the matter of power. There it balks, or at least there is a strong opposition to taking any such step, even though the refusal does not mean the use at home of what might be furnished to points in this country along the northern border. Canada is keeping untouched a vast quantity of resources from which it is gaining nothing, and from which it might be reaping much revenue if power development was permitted.

This country might put up the plea that all our hidden wealth of coal is going to be required in this country if the end of the world doesn't come too soon, but that doesn't deter us from providing Canada with the bulk of such fuel. We would be quite as logical in claiming that it is going to be needed here sometime as Canada is in making such a claim regarding its undeveloped waterpower privileges.

Instead of resenting it, Canada should be pleased to have Americans interested in its natural resources, especially those which it is now permitting to go to waste, the product of which could be converted into dollars and so guarded that Canada of the present or the future would not be injured. Canada stands in its own light when it turns its back on power development projects over and above its immediate needs.

WORLD COURT ACTION.

Some disappointment is bound to be felt that action was not taken in this session of congress concerning the adherence of the United States to the world court. That it could have been disposed of along with the other business will be believed, but any such outcome is based upon the smooth working of the senate and the expediting of all measures before it. There may be times when expectation of this is justified. Such is not the case with the present senate.

For that reason, and in the interest of putting through the necessary bills and preventing a special session being forced upon the administration and the country, the world court will go over. It was not vital that action should be taken before the fourth of March. It can be acted upon at any time, but should it have been pressed at this session it would have served as one of those contentious bills which could easily have been made the stumbling block to the legislative programme that has been prepared, in the carrying out of which there will be none too much time.

Whatever is done in the way of delaying world court action must be regarded at this time as keeping the way clear for the appropriation measures and such other legislation as needs to be adopted at this time. Delay through the failure of the foreign relations committee to report does not signify the blocking of court action. Rather is it a sacrifice to prevent all the short session being wasted.

A GOVERNMENT EXAMPLE.

When 200,000 acres of government owned land which has been used for military purposes, such as training and parade grounds during the war period, are devoted to forestation work under government direction, it must be regarded as setting a much needed example.

This acreage is not all in one plot. It is divided between the three states of Alabama, Georgia and South Carolina, but will henceforth be used for national forest purposes by order of the president. Under our present peace time plans such land is not required for army purposes. It might have been permitted to grow up to brush, but there is sufficient need in this country for reforestation work and when such parade grounds are ordered added to the national forest land there will be set up examples which many individuals should note and copy.

It is not particularly in the three states where these particular parade grounds are that reforestation is most needed. There are numberless opportunities throughout the country where land that is not used for others purpose, or cannot be readily employed for other uses, should be devoted to the production of timber of which the supply in this country is decreasing and from which there are good profits to be obtained where nothing is the result at the present time. It will be interesting to note the quantity of timber that will be made available on these government tracts which are now idle.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Pennsylvania may pass its anti-tipping law but does it expect it can be enforced?

The groundhog and the baseball schedules tell the same thing about the nearness of spring.

The man on the corner says: Thus far the groundhog and his prediction are getting much applause.

The reservoirs are now cashing in on the snow and ice that fell on the watersheds. 'Tis very kind of February to permit this.

The president of the hotel managers' association says 99 per cent of the guests are honest. But you'll notice the hotels don't leave large cakes of soap lying around.

The way in which Norwich taxes have been boosted doesn't appeal to the state tax commissioner, and it is a wonder that those who have to pay them don't take a similar view.

"Norwich Free of Debt For the First Time," says a headline. But don't be surprised it doesn't mean Norwich, Conn., even though this is the promised year for a taxless city, and there has been some talk of selling our gas and electric plant. Reference was to Norwich University, Northfield, Vt. Nevertheless that shows how interesting it would look in print should such a near miracle occur.

WOMAN IN LIFE AND IN THE KITCHEN

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

The person who prepares food cannot keep his hands too clean.

Lukewarm water should be used for white silk stockings so they will not turn yellow.

A slice of bread in the doughnut box will keep your doughnuts soft and light.

Use dental floss when stringing pearls and beads. It does not break as easily as silk thread.

If potatoes, knife and fingers are held under water while paring or scraping no stains will be left upon the fingers.

If the cake should be burned a bit on the edges, remove this blackened portion with an ordinary grater. It will leave a smooth surface for frosting.

A sheet of oil cloth over the dining room table under the silence cloth, will prove a great protection against both hot dishes and spilled liquids.

As soon as baked potatoes are removed from the oven the skin should be broken to allow the steam to escape.

Cereals should absorb all the water they are cooked in; if too moist when nearly done they should cook uncovered for a time.

Do not allow food of strong odor to remain uncovered in the refrigerator. Covers may be made of waxed paper.

A CLOCK MUFFLER

When one lives in a boarding house, one cannot permit friend alarm clock to get too noisy early in the morning. Yet we must get to work in time. Procure a heavy rubber band and snap it around the sides of the clock and the bell. It will muffle the bell enough to prevent it becoming a nuisance and yet permit enough noise to waken the sleeper.

TO CLEAR DRIPPINGS

When the drippings used for frying become brown, add water and a pinch of bi-carbonate of soda and put it in the oven to boil. When cool, pour off water and the drippings will be clear and white once again.

CENTIPEDES

House centipedes are not such pests as many people think. They do not feed on household goods, but on flies, roaches and other household pests. They are ugly things, but really helpful so if you see one in your home, let it go peacefully on its way.

STORING PAPERS

Stored newspapers will not be unsightly if baled together in 5 or 10 pound bundles, then marked with crayon as to their weight. You will find you will get a better price for them from the junk man if you have weighted them yourself.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY

Dissolve a teaspoon of rock ammonia in the water in which you bathe. This makes the water soft and invigorating.

The irritation of trying to find the cinder often leaves the eye feeling painful. Wash it out gently, close the eye, and apply a cool moist bandage for a while. The coolness and the dark will stop the pain and the rest will do the eye good.

Women with thin necks should be careful in choosing neckwear, so as not to exaggerate the thinness. Low-cut, V-shaped neck lines should be avoided. The bateau neck line, with cocker beads and the round collar are usually becoming to this type.

A small clock that has seen better days is convenient to have in the sick room. The hands can be set at the time for the next dose of medicine for the patient and then any member of the family can administer it without doubt as to the correct time.

Exercise, especially deep breathing, is a great help in developing a scrawny neck to graceful proportions. Singing or playing on wind instruments helps keep the throat full and shapely. Neck exercises consist of bending and twisting the neck, raising and rotating the shoulders.

REFINISHING FURNITURE

No one can lay down a definite set of rules for refinishing furniture. Each piece constitutes an individual problem. When the furniture is badly scarred or the renovation has been delayed unduly, the task is beyond the amateur, and should be entrusted to an expert finisher. The building up of a new finish frequently involves the use of paint and varnish removers, brighteners and other products, from which the best results will be forthcoming only in the hands of an expert.

Several points must be definitely settled in connection with refinishing old pieces of furniture. First of all, the nature of the wood itself. Its present finish, and the finish desired. The materials to be applied must be seriously considered in connection with the preparation of the surface to receive them.

A surface as "smooth as glass" can be had by rubbing with linseed oil mixed with powdered pumice stone or rotten stone. After this, oil alone may be applied and the surface rubbed to the desired gloss. The use of varnish will produce a quicker finish.

THE FRUIT CAKE

If possible keep the fruit cake wrapped in a napkin that has been saturated with brandy or wine and then tightly inclosed in a tin box. In this way the longer you keep the cake the better it will be. But it must be kept wrapped and covered to keep moist and good for it dries out very quickly.

DISCARDED BLADES

Broken needles and used safety razor blades should never be thrown away promiscuously. One woman keeps a tin coffee can in her bathroom closet for this purpose and when it is full the entire can is thrown away with the lid pressed down securely. Then there is no danger of harm coming to people going through the trash.

DICTATES OF FASHION

Surplice closings are featured for the season, according to the Dry Goods Economist.

Boleros, real or simulated, have moderate representation.

Cape backs have returned to favor, especially in relation to evening gowns.

Wing draperies for afternoon and evening dress are in again.

More belts are seen on dresses, the wide leather belt, in particular, and leather trimmings are pronounced.

Jabots are very strong. They appear impartially on bodies, skirt and sleeve.

Yokes are featured for daytime and evening dress.

Aprons are continued, and so are tiers.

Pleatings are in, especially box pleats.

Embroideries in silk, wool and metal, bead embroideries, velvet ribbons, cretonnes, appliques, pearls, rhinestones, even mirrors, are trimming details emphasized.

One of the newest spring tailored suits has a skirt with an inverted box pleat at each side to give freedom and a short, double-breated, two-buttoned jacket with long, narrow reveras.

The vogue for plaits, box and knife edge, as well as inverted plaits, is giving freedom of movement in both skirts and coats. This is essential since the coats of the new two-piece suits end just above the skirt hem.

Beading is not by any means passe, but it is used with a great deal more skill than heretofore and with an appreciation of its value in forming designs and patterns that simulate motifs woven into the fabric itself.

This is particularly true of sport clothes, which are the piece de resistance of the modern summer wardrobe, and which to be really smart should be of the utmost simplicity of line but of the most impeccable cut and finish.

One of the differences between the sport costume of last season and this is the style of the sweater. The regulation sweater of other days has disappeared from fashion's horizon and instead one wears a gay little blouse or jumper which fits rather snugly and often has a high collar.

GOWNS APPEAR FULL

Some of the very latest evening dress models show a suspicion of fullness. But this is noticeable only when in motion. The material used is mousseline de sole and by the use of godets incrusted with silver or gold lace an appearance of floating grace is given when the wearer moves.

HATS OF SHAVED FELT

Hats of shaved felt are rising above the shaved necks of the boyishly bobbed just now. These hats are small of shape, the crowns high and pointed, with the tiny brims rolled up at the side and down in front. The shades preferably are black, dark brown, dark green and the warm reds.

TAPESTRY HANDBAGS

More money is going into tapestry today than ever before. The most popular of the flat envelope bags carried by American women are of that material. Many of the bags are finished with gold clasps.

LAUNDRY HINTS

Vinegar will remove whitewash stains.

Ripe tomato juice will remove ink stains and will not injure the fabric.

Lard will remove iodine stains, but it must be allowed to stand on the fabric for a while before removed with soap and water.

To remove indelible ink marks, just touch the spots with tincture of iodine and let stand a few minutes, then wet these spots with household ammonia, and wash in a solution of ammonia and water; rinse thoroughly.

Starch made with soapy water prevents the iron from sticking and gives a better gloss to the linen.

A very good stiffener for fine linens and silks is made by dissolving two ounces of gum arabic in a pint of hot water. Use in the proportion of two tablespoonfuls to two quarts of water.

GASOLINE BEST FOR DRY CLEANING

How many practise dry cleaning at home and with what metods do we obtain the best results? Almost all garments made of silk and wool retain their freshness and wear much longer when dry-cleaned than when laundered.

There are two kinds of dry cleaning —one with the use of powders, another with fluid.

In dry cleaning with powders the soiled spots must be recent for satisfactory results. French chalk is possibly one of the best powders although fine granulated cornmeal is excellent for feathers and some furs. Best results will also be obtained if the garment to be cleaned is placed in a warm room, the powder sprinkled generously allowed to remain about 24 hours and then removed by shaking. It may be used two or three times in a similar way if the soiled spots are not removed at first.

In dry cleaning with fluid, best results are obtained when the entire garment is cleaned and with a method very similar to regular laundering with water. Gasoline is the most satisfactory fluid. Before putting the garments in the solution, mark any spots with thread so that these may be given special attention in the cleaning. Warm gasoline is far more efficacious than cold. However, the greatest care must be used in warming it. A bowl of gasoline placed in a pan of hot water is the safest way. This should not be done in a room with any kind of a stove. Soap flakes also make the cleaning easier. The flake must be made from a neutral soap. Careful rinsing is very necessary. Each garment should be rinsed in warm gasoline at least twice and cold at least once.

SATEEN SLIP COVERS

If furniture has grown a bit shabby and one does not feel like affording the services of an unholsterer, one may have slip covers made of sateen which comes especially for this purpose and is very wide. The range of colors is very large and almost any desired shade may be found. It is not expensive and is as serviceable as it is attractive.

HOUSE CLOTHS

Many housewives enjoy the cloth flour sacks for house cloths, but find the colored letters objectionable. Apply pure lard freely to all the letters and trademarks and rub it in well. Then soak in tepid water for two or three days. Put in boiler with soap flakes and boil. The sacks will come out beautifully white.

CONCERNING WOMEN

Many native women in the Philippines are practicing lawyers, dentists or doctors.

Eighty-six per cent of the teachers in the public schools of Louisiana are women.

"No smoking" notices are now displayed in the women's waiting-rooms of nearly all the English railways.

MAKING GOOD PUDDING

A pudding must be mixed softer for baking than for steaming.

NON-SKIDS

A small piece of rubber overshoe tacked on the bottom of the step-ladder legs wil prevent the ladder from slipping on a wet floor. Save the next worn overshoe for this purpose.

RECIPES

Japanese Dish: Beat one egg and stir it into one tablespoon of chicken soup or weak consomme. Place in a small bowl a few pieces of canned fish, one small bunch of spinach leaves, a few button mushrooms and a few boiled shrimps and pour the prepared soup over them. Cover the bowl tight, place it in a pan of boiling water and steam the contents to to the consistency of boiled custard. Serve at once. This recipe is for a serving for one person.

Apple Doughnuts: Pare and core six cooking apples and slice them into even rounds. Beat the whites of three large eggs together, sweeten them with sugar and add a pinch of salt, a little flour and enough water to bring the mixture to the consistency of thick cream. Dip the slices of apples into it and fry them in boiling fat until they are crisp, puffy and brown, then drain them on paper and roll them in powdered sugar. Serve the doughnuts hot. For a small family three apples and the whites of two eggs will make a sufficient quantity.

Sims Failed at Examination

As a boy William S. Sims showed more interest in outdoor life than in his studies, but when he tried to acquire an education he failed at the start.

In his native Port Hope, Canada, and in Philadelphia, to which city his father, an American civil engineer, took him at 10, the boy was considered an indifferent scholar.

At 17 came his opportunity to take the examination for entrance to the United States Naval Academy, and failed so completely that when he determined to try again a year later, the superintendent at Annapolis asked that the boy's name be withdrawn. The request ignored, Sims barely "scraped through," and stood at the bottom of his class for several months, but was graduated at 22, twenty-eighth in a class of 56.

While stationed in China, at Paris and at Petrograd he sent reports to Washington criticizing the United States naval types and administration, but they were ignored. Then he wrote direct to President Roosevelt, and was summoned to Washington.

With possible court martial for insubordination hanging over him, he proved that our navy's gunnery was bad, and Roosevelt made him a commander in charge of naval practice, a position he held seven years.

Just as the American fleet started on a tour of the world, he caused to be printed his report, describing our navy's defects. Roosevelt stopped court martial proceedings, a congressional investigation proved that Sims was right, and a new program in the navy was started.

At a banquet in London he predicted that this country would aid Great Britain should she ever be attacked, and was reprimanded by President Taft, but his ability, his devotion to duty and his fearlessness won for him the title of captain at 52, the following year.

As commandant of the torpedo flotilla of the Atlantic fleet, he effected marked improvement, and was made rear admiral at 58. When the American navy was sent to foreign waters during the World War, Sims, then vice admiral, was placed in command. After peace was proclaimed he returned to his duties at the Naval War College and when he retired at 64, his praises were heard throughout official circles of the world.

YOUR INCOME TAX

Deductions for Contributions

The revenue act of 1924 provided more liberally for deductions for contributions than preceding acts. In computing net income the individual taxpayer may deduct from gross income contributions or gifts made during the year 1924 to or for the use of the United States, any state or territory, or any political subdivision thereof (city, town, county, or village) or the District of Columbia, "for exclusively public purposes." A gift of real estate to a city to be maintained perpetually as a park is an allowable deduction. Contributions by individuals to a fund raised for the purpose of inducing an industrial plant to locate in their city would not be an allowable deduction.

Other allowable deductions are for contributions to any corporation or trust, or community chest, fund, or foundation organized and operated exclusively for religious, charitable, scientific, literary, or educational purposes, or for the prevention of cruelty to children or animals, but only if no part of the net earnings of which inure to the benefit of any private shareholder or individual. The 1924 act provides also for deductions for contributions to the special fund for vocational rehabilitation and — a new provision—"posts or organizations of war veterans, or auxiliary units or societies of any such posts or organized within the United States or any of its possessions, and if no part of their net earnings inure to the benefit of any private shareholder or individual." Another new provision is the deduction for contributions to a fraternal society, order, or association operating under the lodge system, but only if such contributions are used exclusively for religious, charitable, scientific, literary, or educational purposes, or for the prevention of cruelty to children or animals.

Deductible contributions have been construed to mean money or property. The value of services to the organizations mentioned is not an allowable deduction.

George H. Moses, United states senator from New Hampshire, born at Lubec, Me., 56 years ago today.

Joseph J. Mansfield, representative in Congress of the Ninth Texas district, born at Wayne, W. Va., 64 years ago today.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE.

George Ade, who is in line for congratulations today on the beginning of his 60th year, is one of the most successful of American humorous writers. Of late years he has written comparatively little, but time was, back in the late '90's, when he was receiving thousands of dollars a week in royalities from his comic plays. Mr. Ade is a native of Indiana and still makes his home in the Hoosier state, where he gives his attention to a model farm of several acres near the little town of Brooke. After attending Purdue University he entered upon a career of fame. First as a writer of newspaper humor and later as a playwright. A series of sketches entitled Fables in slang was the first of his work to attract wide attention. His best known plays were The Sultan of Sulu, Peggy From Paris, The Country Chairman, The Shogun, and The College Widow.

Stories That Recall Others

Felt Out of Place

Those about the railroad station see tragedy, pathos and humor displayed every day. In telling of the things that happen Tim said: "You see the station was well crowded and an old man with overalls was standing near me. He kept shuffling back and forth and every now and then he would come over and ask me if there was anything new about the late train.

"He kept this up for some time and at last he sighed as he looked down at his great lumbering boots: 'Wal, I'll be shucked, if I wouldn't feel more to home in a cornfield.'

In the Eye of the Beholder

That it is pretty hard for many people to tell the truth though they may be earnestly and sincerely trying is the firm belief of one individual. Sometime ago he stopped at the intersection of two well traveled streets and was getting some information from a policeman. While the latter was standing with one foot on the running board of the car, a man crossing the street, who was deeply immersed in his newspaper bumped into the auto. He jumped back quickly and in doing so lost his balance and fell in the street. A man rushed up to the policeman and said:

"Officer, arrest this man, I saw him coming down the street and he was going every bit of 40 miles an hour."

"The man actually thought I was going 40 miles an hour," the car owner said in relating the incident, "and all that saved me from being locked up was that the policeman knew my car was not moving when the pedestrian ran into it."

$5,000 AWARD FOR SUPER NORMAL METEORIC PHENOMENA

Boston, Feb. 8.—An award of $5,000 to anyone successfully demonstrating super-normal material phenomena under rigid laboratory conditions with particular request to Mrs. Le Roi G. Crandon, known as a medium under the name of "Margery" to co-operate, was announced here last night by Dr. Morton Prince on behalf of the Journal of Abnormal and Social Psychology. All previous investigations of the psychic effects produced by "Margery" Dr. Prince in his announcement characterized as unscientific and futile.

Two fundamental conditions, Dr. Prince wrote, are essential in any investigation of the sort. The first is full, adequate light. If the medium declares this condition to be unacceptable, no adequate examination is possible, he said. The second condition is that the experimenters shall be free to alter, modify and determine the conditions at will. He criticized the work of the Scientific Magazine committees in the cas of "Margery" as not worthy of serious consideration. Other reports were valueless, Dr. Prince said, because they were sensationalistic.

Only Man and Cat Sing

A fact that is not generally realized is that, except for birds, the only creatures that sing are man and the cat. The cat's purr is a primitive song and its voice works very much in the same way as that of human beings. A cat's vocal cords are more like those of man than those of any other animal, although they are only capable of producing a single note.

Flowers for Perfumes

At the present time the principal flowers utilized for perfumery are roses, violets, jonquils, narcissis, jasmine, almond blossoms, cassia, heliotrope and geraniums. While the call for certain individual scents is still prevalent, various bouquets, such as Oriental and French bouquets, are made through combinations.

BAPTIST PASTOR MAKES ADDRESS ON LESSONS FROM LINCOLN LIFE

Rev. David A. Pitt, pastor of the Central Baptist church spoke on Lincoln, the Christian, at the evening service at the church Sunday, stating that he could not allow the birthday of this great man to pass by without thinking of the example the martyred president had set both spiritually and morally.

Before preaching on his subject, Rev. Dr. Pitt read a passage from a religious magazine which stated the creed of Lincoln, which showed that Lincoln believed in God and that the Bible was the best gift God had given to man.

This creed, said Rev. Dr. Pitt, certainly was held by a Christian man whether he belonged to any sect or not. I wonder today, if a man with such a creed, could remain outside some sect. Wouldn't he be asked to join somewhere.

I think the greatest thing in Lincoln's creed was his faith in God, whom he called the ruler of nations. Lincoln was a believer in Almighty God, he felt that he was responsible to God for the manner in which he handled the ship of state through the troubled water of Civil war days. In the second place, I think that Lincoln stated a fine creed when he talked of the development of a human life. The Sabbath day and the Holy House of God are here to develop the human life. Human life therefore, comes first. We need to be taught that today and the attention of communities, nations and the world should be called to the fact that the human life is most important.

Another thing about Lincoln that was great was his forgiving spirit, his "great heart." Lincoln had that wonderful power of being able to forgive his enemies and love those who despised him. It is one of the hardest things in the world to feel right towards and forgive those who wrong you. Christ asks this of us all if we are to be children of the Kingdom. Lincoln was able to do this thing that Christ asks of every Christian. "With malice toward none and charity for all." I wonder if with all our inventions and discoveries, America has given to the world anything as great as Lincoln, the Lincoln who was the most quoted man in England during the late war.

We should thank God for the great leaders we have had who were men of faith, asking prayer. Washington, a man of God, we can see him in prayer at Valley Forge, asking God to aid him. Lincoln who prayed every night in the White House, and, who we learn went to the home of Henry Ward Beecher and the two Godly men prayed for their country. Then there was Roosevelt, another man of God whom it has been said, he preached the ten commandments as though they were something new.

Then we come to President Coolidge. When he realized his chief was gone and that the burden was for him, did he not go to a Congregational church in Washington, ask for the privilege of partaking of the Lord's Supper, and receive it, thus humbling himself before God as he partook of the bread and wine. Let us thank God for the Christian leaders we have had in this country.

During the service the choir rendered several choice selections and Pietro Mordella, accordion soloist of Boston, rendered two groups of hymns and classical numbers. Mr. Mordella has had been announced was an able and accomplished musician and his rendition were received with pleasure by the large congregation.

ALMSHOUSE PRIZE BULL MUTILATED; IS KILLED

No clue has been discovered as to the identity of the mysterious degenerate that so badly mutilated the prize bull at the almshouse sometime Friday night that the animal had to be killed, Police headquarters was notified of the dastardly deed early Saturday morning by Superintendent Ellis of the almshouse and Chief Linton immediately started a thorough investigation. The chief detailed Captain Thomas Murphy and several officers and they went immediately to the almshouse.

Footprints in the snow leading from the barn to the river bank and indicating that the person responsible for the deed went to a small island in the river were found as were also marks left by a calf taken from the barn. The trail ended at the river bank.

County Detective William Lewis was notified of the crime and he also started an investigation. During the afternoon the calf with two boys leading it was seen on the ice on the river. After a lengthy chase Officer Lewis captured the two boys and took charge of the calf.

The boys, about 8 years of age, were taken to police headquarters and told the officers that the calf had been given to them by other boys. It is not thought the boys had any connection with the mutilation of the bull.

During the past few months a half dozen of these deeds have been practiced on animals on the West Side but the culprit has managed to keep his identity a secret. He is clever enough to leave no clue behind him. This is the second time that an act of this sort has taken place at the almshouse. The police are on the watch for the person responsible and it will go hard with him when he is caught and placed behind bars.

BABYLON TALMUD IS PRESENTED TO SYNAGOGUE

Questioning of the remaining few students who were on duty in the pharmacy dispensary during the week of January 26 to 31 will be resumed tomorrow.

Chester attached no particular significance to his call at the fraternity house. It is to this fraternity the numerous students questioned last week belong. It was at this house, however, that David I. Puskin, of Canton, one of the two students who died suddenly a week ago, spent at least part of the evening before his death.

During Chester's visit a quantity of medicine, said to be of a habit-forming type, was found in the possession of a student; previously questioned. This student had admitted that he took the tablets containing the same kind of poison as was in the "death capsules" as a stimulant.

A final report on the 98 capsules remaining in the so-called "death bottle" disclosed that all contained only quinine. One much larger than the rest and suspected of containing poison, was found to have been filled with quinine only. All capsules known to exist have not been examined. Poison has been found in only two out of perhaps 300 and is believed to have been at least six others.

TWO OTHER PERSONS PERISHED IN CAVES

Cave City, Ky., Feb. 8.—(By the A. P.)—Floyd Collins, should he not be taken from his underground tomb alive will be the third person who lost his life in the caves here, according to Lee Collins, his father.

A half century ago a skeleton was found in old Salt cave, but it was never learned whether this was the skelton of a cave explorer, or some one buried there by Indians.

The first death known to present settlers was that of Pike Chapman, a native of Nebraska, 30 years ago, who was buried in falling sand and pebbles which being lowered into a shaft on Old Grandaddy cave.

The other was Edwin Turner of New York, who discovered and developed Great Onyx cave, one of the most popular ones in this region. His health was so impaired by underground labors that he died soon after and was buried in Mammoth cave.

"Mugwump" Defined

In political parlance a "mugwump" is a man with no fixed beliefs or party affiliations. Horace Porter in the Cleveland-Blaine campaign of 1884 perpetrated a bonmot that became famous when he said, "A mugwump is a person educated beyond his intellect."

NURMI HAS NAPPED OUT SCHEDULE WITH SEVENTEEN ENGAGEMENTS ON IT

New York, Feb. 8.—Seventeen meets in thirty-two days—that's Paavo Nurmi's running schedule for the next month. Starting at Portland, Me., tomorrow night, the peerless Finn will compete in a meet at a rate of better than one every other night. Buffalo, Syracuse, Philadelphia, Washington, Baltimore, Louisville and Milwaukee, in addition to Hamilton and Toronto, Can., are included in the Finn's itinerary, which will wind up March 12 with the Greek-American A. C. games in New York.

During this strenuous campaign Nurmi will run every distance in the middle division against the best opponents America and Canada can toss on the track.

Ure Frigerio, Italian Walker, will heel and toe it in another sustained campaign, although his program is far less pretentious than that mapped out by the ambitious Paavo. The Italian heel and toe artist will compete in six different meets in fourteen days, showing his ability in Philadelphia, in addition to four meets in New York city.

Contrary to the generally accepted opinion, neither Nurmi, Frigerio nor the A. A. U. receive any financial benefit from these games. Nurmi told A. A. U. officials today that more than a dozen invitations have been extended to him to visit America since the Antwerp Olympics in 1920, but until this year he had turned deaf ears to all of them. It was a patriotic motive which prompted him to accept this invitation this year.

His fellow countrymen here were anxious to see him run and it was really in response to their appeal that he decided to take a vacation and make the trip, he has disclosed. Since coming here the Finnish communities have been keen to see Nurmi and while he has expressed dislike for traveling from one city to another, he has agreed to make a few trips in order to give the Finns in the different sections of the country an opportunity to see him in action.

Nurmi does not like to make engagements too far in advance, but an additional program will be announced later. Invitations have been received from New Orleans, Miami, Pittsburgh, Kansas City, Minneapolis, Chicago, Los Angeles, Detroit, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Pennsylvania relays, and Drake, Ohio State, Georgia Tech and Seattle relay carnivals.

It became known today that both Nurmi and Frigerio have been deluged with all sorts of publicity offers, but have referred all inquiries to the A. A. U.

12—106th Field Artillery, Buffalo.

SLATTERY-DELANEY BOUT IS FEATURE FISTIC ATTRACTION

New York, Feb. 8.—Jimmy Slattery of Buffalo, one of the most promising middleweights among the younger boxers, will furnish the feature fistic entertainment for the coming week when he steps into the ring against Jack Delaney of Bridgeport, Conn., in a six-round encounter at Madison Square Garden, Friday night. The match is scheduled for the short route owing to Slattery's youth, the boxing laws holding fighters under 21 years of age, to a six-round limit.

Kid Kaplan of Meriden, Conn., world's featherweight champion, will open his Pacific coast campaign at Vernon, Cal., Tuesday when he meets Bud Ridley, coast feather. His title will not be at stake in this match.

Ad Stone, Quaker light heavyweight, will start a comeback campaign in Philadelphia, by meeting Jim Slimmer of Millville, N. J., in a ten-round match at the arena. This will be Stone's first ring appearance since the injury he suffered to his eye in a match with Young Stribling of Macon, Ga., last September.

ARMY-NAVY CLUB TO PLAY BRISTOL TEAM WEDNESDAY

On Wednesday evening the Army-Navy club will play the West Ends of Bristol at Parish hall. The Bristol five handed the local team its first defeat at Bristol early in the season and was scheduled to play here several weeks ago but a storm caused the game to be postponed. The Bristol group is one of the fastest basketball aggregations in the state and a great game is expected.

DARTMOUTH AND PRINCETON STILL LEAD IN BASKETBALL

New York, Feb. 8.—(By the A. P.)—Dartmouth and Princeton, although idle for the past two weeks, continue to lead in the Eastern Intercollegiate Basketball League with the victories each in as many starts. Pennsylvania ranks third and Columbia fourth, the Quakers having won three out of five games while Columbia has broken even in four starts.

Deadlocked at the base of the heap, hopelessly out of the running, stands Cornell, 1924 title holder, and Yale, winner in 1923. Cornell has lost all of its three starts while Yale has met similar fate in four games.

Carmack of Pennsylvania holds the individual scoring honors by a thin thread, having scored 24 points in five games. He is closely pressed by Laub of Columbia with 23 points. Suisman of Yale is third with 21 and Baldwin of Columbia next with 20. Field goal honors are split between Laub of Columbia, Suisman of Yale and Cleaves of Princeton, each having scored eight, although the latter has scored his eight in three games.

Carmack holds his lead by virtue of his accuracy from the free throw mark, he having tossed in 10 foul goals, one more than Picken of Dartmouth, Davenport of Pennsylvania and Dake of Cornell.

Picken of Dartmouth and Hynson of Princeton have the best scoring averages, the former having scored 19 points in three games while the latter has annexed 18 points in his three starts.

The team and individual scoring records follow:

Standing of Teams.

Team.	P.	W.	L.	P.C.	Pts.	Opp. Pts.
Dartmouth	3	3	0	1.000	76	48
Princeton	3	3	0	1.000	82	45

(Special to the Bulletin)

Storrs, Ct., Feb. 8—Williams Memorial Institute of New London defeated the C. A. C. CoEd basketball team here yesterday afternoon in a well played game by a score of 20-16. The work of Pendleton of the Williams five enabled the New London team to come from behind and overcome the Aggies lead, and her accurate basket shooting put the Williams team into the lead. She made 17 of the 20 points garnered by the New London team, making 7 baskets from the floor and 3 from the foul line.

For Connecticut, Helen Grant was the outstanding player. She made every one of the Aggies points, getting 6 baskets from the floor and 4 from the foul line. Connecticut's chances were weakened considerable, when Captain Irene Ellis of the Storrs team was removed from the game because of personal fouls.

DEMPSEY AND HIS BRIDE ARE SOMEWHERE IN HIDING

Los Angeles, Feb. 8.—Jack Dempsey, heavyweight film actor, who has also essayed the role of world's champion boxer, Los Angeles real estate operator and manager for a Hollywood motion picture actress, tonight was appearing, or rather disappearing in that time-worn but ever-popular sketch—The Missing Bridegroom. Mrs. Dempsey was missing, too.

The couple were reported to have slipped out of their San Diego hotel in the early morning today "bound for Los Angeles." But Los Angeles had not greeted them at an early hour tonight, and the conclusion drawn by those familiar with the phychology of the newly married was that maybe the champion and his bride were abroad in the land in search of solitude.

Mr. Chartier issued his challenge at a meeting of the Eastern Connecticut Bowling association several weeks ago, saying "He would give Barber and Fillmore a match every week for $200 a side, but would not give Barber a match for a larger purse."

CONN. AGGIES OVERWHELM CLARKE IN ONE-SIDED GAME AT WORCESTER

Storrs, Ct., Feb. 8—Playing in rare form, the Connecticut Aggies overwhelmed the Clark University five at Worcester last night with a 42-26 score. It was the seventh game of the year for the Nutmeg Farmers marking the halfway point of their schedule, and the brand of play displayed by Coach Dole's men was of high order.

Taking the lead at the start, the Storrs outfit held it throughout the game, and the Clark team never seriously threatened the Aggies advantage. Captain Balock was in top form against the Bay Staters and scored early and often. Eddy, Makofski and Balock started things for the Aggies in the early minutes of the fray, at the end of the first ten minutes of play the Aggies were out in front with a 13-4 score. Connecticut maintained this advantage through the first session, and at half time the Aggies were leading 20-11.

In the second half the Clark five came back fighting desperately, but they were unable to penetrate the Connecticut five man defense to any great extent. The Aggie attack, however, swept on as before, with Captain Balock, Eddy and Makofski doing the bulk of the work. The diminutive Aggie captain gave a pretty exhibition of clever floor work and passing, which fooled the Clark guards time and time again. Connecticut held its lead over the Clark five, and in the closing minutes of play speeded up and started what had all the appearances of a runaway. The Aggies were piling up the points with great regularity, and the final whistle was all that saved the Clark five from still greater defeat.

Captain Balock was the high scorer of the game, making 7 baskets from the floor and 2 from the foul line. In all, he scored 16 of the 42 points made by the Storrs team. He showed a pretty floor game, and at the same time played a strong defensive game. Eddy, the big Aggie center, with 12 points to his credit came second with the scoring honors, while Makofski, with 11 points came third. Gerald Allard, Putnam boy, played his usual steady game at guard.

For Clark, the work of Amsden and Higganbottom featured. Amsden, although small and light, put up a great fight for the Worcester team. He scored 4 baskets from the floor, and 1 from the foul line, leading his team mates with 9 points for the evening. Higganbottom, the other forward, also showed up well for Clark.

It was expected that the Clark five would furnish the Storrs team with much more opposition than they gave last night, but last minute losses sustained by the Clark five greatly weakened its game. Instead of putting a veteran team on the floor as was expected, Clark had but two veterans, Sachs and Higganbottom, in the lineup that started. Kalljarvi and Spring, two stars who were being counted on to pile up the points against Connecticut were lost to the team because of scholastic probation. In addition to this, Towne, a one of the best forwards in the history of the Worcester College, transferred to Brown, leaving a gap that the Bay Staters were unable to fill satisfactorily. The team that went up against the Aggies, while putting up a great fight all the way, had played together but little, which hampered their teamwork.

NEW LONDON MAY SOLVE MYSTERY OF WOMAN'S DEATH IN NEW YORK

New London, Feb. 8.—The New London police are endeavoring to ascertain if a man and woman are missing from New London, the search being ordered by Captain Charles A. Pinney, Saturday afternoon, following it becoming known that a young woman, believed to be a resident of this city, had been found dead in the Hotel Imperial, Broadway and Thirty Second street, New York, under suspicious circumstances. Up to tonight no man or woman was known by the police to be missing. A young man whose name is quite familiar to that used by the man who registered for the couple at the New York hotel, has absented himself from the city, but was not supposed to return to his employment until Monday. Tomorrow it will be known whether the man has returned and when he does he will be interrogated by the police.

The couple registered at the hotel Friday morning as "Mr. and Mrs. John Lorens," and occupied Room 1016. Saturday noon when a domestic entered the room to prepare it for further occupancy, the woman was dead on the bed, attired only in her undergarments. The man was missing, so was the greater part of the young woman's outer clothing. When the police arrived at the hotel an examination of the underclothes showed the name of "Reynolds" on them, the mark it being believed, being that of a cleaning establishment.

A police surgeon was unable to determine the cause of death and ordered the body removed to a morgue where an autopsy has been ordered.

The young man who will be questioned tomorrow has been paying attention to a young woman and recently he stated that he was about to be married. The description of the dead woman, about 35, five feet, five inches in height, medium build, having chestnut bobbed hair, tallies with the girl with whom the New Londoner has been keeping company, except as to her age, the dead woman being much older than the girl suspected as the victim, provided the age is correct. An attempt to determine whether the girl was in the city today was made, but the girl could not be located.

Edward Foley, 28 Brewer street, where he is a lodger at the residence of Mrs. Richard Frusher, was taken into custody this afternoon by Sergeant John Cavanaugh, charged with the theft of $5 from Mrs. Frusher. He will be in the police court tomorrow morning.

Foley, who has been employed at local theatres, it is alleged had knowledge that Mrs. Frusher was anticipating Saturday the reception of a letter containing money from Providence. When Foley went to the Frusher house the letter, it is claimed, was found by him in a letter box at the front door. Foley took possession of the letter and removing the money from it, destroyed the letter. Mrs. Frusher inquired of Foley if he had seen the letter and the latter stated that he had not. This morning after Sergeant Cavanaugh went to the Frusher house and Foley was there. Upon questioning the young man it came out that Foley admitted taking the letter and the money, but that following Sergeant Samuel Hick's interviewing Foley Saturday night, the latter had evidently became scared and had returned the money to Mrs. Frusher. The latter admitted that Foley had returned the money to her.

Students at Bulkeley school are not to have the snap they have enjoyed in the past in the years that are to come. Where they do not maintain the necessary average in their studies they are to be demoted, and as a result will have to spend a year or two more in the school before they can be graduated. Headmaster Underwood has established a new order of things that will make the students toe the mark. When students received their last report cards they discovered that many of them had been demoted. About 100 students failed to attain a passing mark in the examinations. In the freshman class of 42 there were 17 demoted and must come back to finish their freshman year. In the senior class several students failed to pass their half-yearly exams and they must continue their studies. The seniors failed chiefly in mathematics. The result was a disappointment to the faculty, as well as to the students. In the case of freshmen who failed they were requested to leave school. The new order of things is endorsed generally by citizens for students from Bulkeley have too often been obliged to take post graduate studies to pass the examination that would admit them to colleges. Several juniors and sophomores were held back to continue their studies.

William McCarthy, who has been the agent and salesman for a Hartford cigar concern, is accused of having appropriated to his own use some $30C that he has not accounted for to his employers. He is understood to have admitted that his accounts are somewhat tangled, but denies that he has been dishonest and claims to have asked for an accounting without having been successful in receiving it. He denies that he had any intention of defrauding his employes and says he is ready to make an accounting at any time his delinquency is established to him. He was given a hearing in the police court Saturday and was held in a bond of $500 for appearance a week from tomorrow. It is probable that an adjustment of the matter will be made before that date.

Joseph Connor, was at a pool room on Main street Friday evening where some difficulty arose and the arrest of Connor was asked for and secured. Connor admitted that he was intoxicated, claiming that a sailor came into the place and gave him a drink of liquor. Connor said he accepted the offer and thus became intoxicated without realizing that such an effect would follow. He was fined $5. Connors resisted arrest and had a mix-up with the officer because he was wildly drunk.

Darby, who is serving an indeterminate sentence at the reformatory for passing a worthless check and who is understood to have operated in New London. The police here have no record of Darby.

A dog owned by James F. Reagan, Montauk avenue, was struck on that thoroughfare this afternoon and killed by an automobile owned and operated by Dr. E. P. Douglass of Thames St., Groton.

Mrs. Arthur Leiper, of Pleasure Beach, Waterford, believes that she was the victim of a pickpocket Saturday afternoon for she declares that she was relieved of her purse containing $8 and some change, while she was in front of the Five & Ten Cent Store, State street. Mrs. Leiper reported her loss to the police.

Mrs. Leiper declared that the purse was in the pocket of her coat when she arrived at the store and when she felt for it to make a purchase she discovered it missing. She does not remember anyone jostling her.

Patrolman Frank Philopena is the latest member of the police department to become ill. The offender reported for duty Saturday forenoon, but a few hours later was compelled to go home.

A petition was presented to the selectmen of Waterford, Saturday, signed by about 150 residents of the town of Waterford requesting that a special town meeting be called to give opportunity of the citizens and taxpayers to vote their opposition to the bills providing for a town court, the acquiring of the property of Edward C. Hammond by condemnation by the city of New London for park purposes and the proposed establishment of a third voting district in Cohanzie.

Ernest E. Wright, 37, colored, residing at 23 1-2 Tilley street and employed at a local hotel, was arrested early this morning by Patrolman Braxton Hill, charged with peeping through a window at the residence of Giovanni Gigliotti, 27 Richards street. Wright was locked up and will be given a hearing in the police court Monday forenoon. Wright went to the yard of the Gigliotti home, about 2 o'clock, and observing one of the rooms illuminated, is accused of going to the window and peering through it. His presence at the window was detected and a member of the household located Patrolman Hill a short distance from the Gigliotti house. The officer went to the yard and finding Wright took him into custody.

Complaint was made to the police this morning by a man named Lafreniere, 197 Bank street, that his home had been entered recently by a sneak thief and that a watch belonging to him and another timepiece belonging to his wife had been stolen. Lafreniere stated to Sergeant John Cavanaugh who investigated the complaint, that Friday night Mrs. Lafreniere discovered her watch missing, but believed that she had mislaid it and today while making a search for the timepiece discovered that her husband's watch was also missing.

YACHT ACOMA AGAIN SEIZED AS RUM-RUNNER

New London, Feb. 8.—The gas screw Acoma, a New York craft of 25 gross tons and having an engine of 300 horse power, was seized in Long Island sound early Saturday morning as a rum-runner. That the craft is engaged in the trafficking of liquor from the rum fleet at Block Island and Montauk Point there is no doubt, for the craft had between 40 and 50 cases of Scotch whiskey and between 150 and 200 cases of champagne on board. Late Saturday afternoon the crew were given a hearing before United States Commissioner Earl Matthewson of Norwich and all but the master, Edward Fields, were released, Fields being held for trial in bonds of $1,500.

The Acoma, which had taken on her supply early in the night, was headed westerly when the craft was sighted about a mile northwest of Plum Island and low in the water, by the crew of the United States Coast Guard destroyer Jouett. The destroyer gave chase to the Acoma and overtook her after a short run. The Acoma being brought to a stop officers of the destroyer boarded the yacht and on the deck was the whiskey cargo, while the champagne was stored in the cabins. The yacht was headed for this port and arrived at the pier shortly before daylight, where she is now under guard together with her cargo, which is valued at close to $50,000.

The Acoma was seized by a rum chaser several months ago when the craft was overhauled in the sound and believed to be engaged in the hauling of liquir. At that time no booze was found on the yacht, but the craft was seized and the master was held on a charge of violation of the navigation laws. Several weeks later the master was fined, but the yacht was released.

Mrs. Letitia Gardner, 749 Ocean avenue, complained tonight because of her annoyance through the acts of someone stealing her ash barrels and ripping pickets from the fence that surrounds her property. Saturday night three large oak barrels were taken from her yard.

DETAILS OF CAPTURE OF FAMOUS BANDIT RAISULI

Tetuan, Morocco, Feb. 8.—(By the A. P.)—Details of the attack of the Riffian tribesmen against the Yebalas, which culminated in the capture of the bandit leader Raisuli at Tazarut a week ago, are being brought to this city through native channels indicating that there was sanguinary fighting in which more than 35 Riffians were killed and many wounded, before the Yebalas were forced to surrender.

Tazarut was looted by the Riffians and in Raisuli's stronghold they found many treasures which the bandit chief had accumulated during his many year of conquest in Morocco. Priceless rugs, jewels, silks and other valuable objects fell into the hands of the Riffians, who are also reported to have come into possession of Raisuli's money, estimated at 5,000,000 pesetas He is believed, however, to have other large sums deposited in foreign banks.

After his capture Raisuli began negotiations with Abd-El-Krim, leader of the rebel forces, for permission to remain at Tazarut, but Abd-El-Krim ordered that he be transferred to Axdir, his general headquarters. Special arrangements were made to transport Raisuli because of his illness. He was placed in a great chair, covered by a canopy, and carried by two mules surrounded by a strong armed escort. According to last reports the convoy has reached Taguesut. There, Raisuli is said to have come face to face with Abd-El-Krim.

Raisuli's relatives are skeptical concerning the bandit's rate. They recall that death came to others who tried to dispute the leadership of Abd-El-Krim, and fear that the tribal leader will not hesitate to bring an end to Raisuli's life.

General Primo De Rivera, president of the Spanish directorate, announced on Thursday that he had received a report of the death of Raisuli while he was being conveyed to Sheshuan by the Riffians. The report, however, lacked confirmation.

MANY IMPORTANT MATTERS ARE CONFRONTING CONGRESS

Washington, Feb. 8.—With only a little more than three weeks left of this session of congress, the date of many important legislative measures is hanging in the balance.

Those that fail, automatically die, and if pressed in the new congress they must again pass through all of the legislative stages from reintroduction, through committees, the two houses and conference.

Leaders are prepared to bend every effort to complete action on the Muscle Shoals leasing bill, the postal pay and rate increase measure, a cooperative marketing bill, the McFadden banking bill, the measure for purchase of the Cape Cod canal and the $150,000,000 good roads bill.

If these can be put through, together with the remaining appropriation bills the republican leaders will be well satisfied with the accomplishments of the short session. But they are not at all certain that this program can be carried out and they are convinced that much other important legislation will fail.

In the realm of foreign affairs, the senate has abandoned all hope of action on the world court questions and there is about that a vote can be had on the Isle of Pines treaty. The German commercial convention was considered briefly yesterday and may be ratified with reservations broader than those suggested by the state department.

The house and senate agricultural committees are moving so slowly that even the friends of farm aid legislation realize that only a part of the program recommended by the president's agricultural commission can be translated into law before March 4. In all probability there will be concentration on a co-operative marketing measure, the chief feature of the commission's program.

Leaders, in arranging their legislative slate, are confronted with insistent demands of members for action on private and similar measures and in view of the inevitable jam in the last two weeks, they practically have given up hope for enactment of any railroad legislation or for putting through the government reorganization scheme.

Besides these measures, others pending include the Cramton bill for reorganization of the prohibition unit, which will be pressed by the "drys," and the Stalker bill to increase the penalties for prohibition violations, which appears to have been placed on the house shelf.

GUESTS OF PRESIDENT ON WEEK-END TRIP

Washington, Feb. 8.—Guests of President Coolidge on an afternoon and overnight cruise down the Potomac on the Mayflower today included Representative Dickinson, Iowa, a leader of the house farm bloc, who has been prominent among the critics of the recommendations of the president's agricultural commission.

Representative Dickinson, in a recent address in the house, charged attempts were being made "to Hooverize" the department of agriculture, referring to reports that the president intended to consult Secretary Hoover in the selection of a new secretary of agriculture and criticizing activities of the department of commerce touching on agricultural matters The president yesterday had a lengthy conference with Mr. Hoover, but whether a connection existed between this conference and Representative Dickinson's inclusion in the Mayflower party was not disclosed.

Other members of the Mayflower party, in addition to Mrs. Coolidge and Mrs. Dickinson, were Ray Benjamin, one of the leaders in the Coolidge pre-convention campaign in California; Senator Butler of Massachusetts and Mrs. Butler, and Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Stearns.

TO PREVENT DEALING IN WORTHLESS SECURITIES

New York, Feb. 8.—Creation of a special department of the New York stock exchange to investigate attempted frauds through worthless securities was announced tonight by President E. H. H. Simmons, who stated that the services of the bureau would be available, without cost, to any person in the United States.

The department was functioning fully, Mr. Simmons said, and already several hundred cases from various parts of the country have been submitted and examined. The most effective cooperation, he added, had been received from the securities commissioners of the states, law enforcing officials, the better business bureaus and other commercial and financial organizations.

J., national president of the American Legion Auxiliary, proposes discussion of the operations of the national defense act, and of pending legislation for universal military draft in war time. Organizations invited include the Daughters of the American Revolution, Ladies of the Grand Army of the Republic, National War Mothers and Women's Relief Corps to the Grand Army of the Republic.

New York, Feb. 8.—Consolidation of 21 of the largest outdoor advertising companies of the United States into a new corporation to be known as the General Outdoor Advertising Company, Inc., was announced today. The combined business of the merging companies for 1925, it is estimated, will exceed $30,000,000.

K. H. Fulton, head of the Poster Advertising company and the O. J. Gude company, and George L. Johnson of the Thomas Cusack company, who conducted the merger negotiations, will be president and chairman, respectively, of the new corporation.

The companies entering the consolidation operate in more than 600 cities and towns throughout the country and together control more than 100,000 display structures of various kinds. DOUBT AS TO VACANCY IN THE STATE SENATE

Hartford, Feb. 8.—Lieutenant-Governor J. Edwin Brainard said today that he will confer with Governor Trumbull Tuesday to determine whether a special election should be called in the twelfth senatorial district to fill the vacancy evidently caused by his advancement to the office of lieutenant-governor.

The question has arisen as a result of Attorney General Healy's opinion which was substantially to the effect that Mr. Brainard relinquished his seat in the senate, when, as president protempore, he automatically became lieutenant governor January 3 upon the vacating of that office by Colonel Trumbull to take the governorship. Mr. Brainard's duties have been the same as those of the lieutenant governor, in that he has presided regularly over the senate, the effect of which has been to leave the seat to which he was elected on November 4 vacant and the twelfth district without a voice in the deliberations of the senate. The presiding officer of the senate lacks a vote except to dissolve a deadlock.

The statutes require the governor to call a special election for the election of a senator in any district in which a vacancy occurs. A question exists however, as to whether the twelfth district seat actually is vacant under the circumstances, and Lieutenant-Governor Brainard intimated that the attorney general might be asked to advise whether it is incumbent upon the governor to proceed with the issuance of writs of election. The opinion which Mr. Brainard received from the attorney general did not say, in so many words, that there is a vacancy, but left it to be inferred.

NOBLEMAN MEMBER OF BRIDGEPORT FIRE DEPT.

Bridgeport, Feb. 8. — At midnight Baron Hermann Augustus Adalbert De Buderus Von Carlshausen, officially will begin his duties as a special member of the Bridgeport fire department, in the capacity of "door-slammer." He is probably the only nobleman in this country to hold such a position. His duties are to close the doors of the engine house after the apparatus leaves, and in return he gets his lodging.

Baron Buderus is a newspaper man. Baron Buderus, who is 28 years old, was officially cleared some time ago by the department of justice of charges of violation of the espionage act, which when preferred during the war resulted in his apprehension at the age of 14 and confinement in the internment camp at Fort Oglethorpe, Georgia, from which he escaped. This was after his appointment as director of war scout activity for Boy Scouts in Philadelphia and other cities, where he is credited with having sold over a million dollars worth of Liberty bonds.

Former Senator Frelinghuysen, of New Jersey, became interested in his case, and after the armistice a special investigation was undertaken, which resulted in his vindication. He is now awaiting final action on his application for American citizenship, renouncing his German inheritance, which now is in the hands of trustees for the German government.

FATALLY INJURED IN MOTOR TRUCK ACCIDENT

Torrington, Feb. 8.—Sidney Albert, 18 years old, of Waterbury, was fatally injured and his cousin, Sidney Albert, 20, also of Waterbury, was badly cut about the face and head when a truck upon which they were riding was struck by a northbound passenger train at the Water street crossing near the Torrington station today. The younger man died in the Charlotte Hungerford hospital soon after the accident.

The young man who was cut and who was driving the truck, said that he did not see or hear the train. The truck was dragged more than a hundred feet. The young man who died later was thrown to the ground and suffered a fractured skull. He had been in this country but three weeks and was making his home with his cousin at 20 George street, Waterbury. The truck was badly damaged.

POETRY FOR THE WIDE AWAKES

Lullaby of an Infant Chief

O, hush thee, my babie, thy sire was a knight,
Thy mother a lady, both lovely and bright;
The woods and the glens, from the towers which we see,
They are all-belonging, dear babie, to thee.

O, fear not the bugle, though loudly it blows,
It calls but the warders that guard thy repose;
Their bows would be bended, their blades would be red,
Ere the step of a foeman draws near to thy bed.

O, hush thee, my babie, the time soon will come,
When thy sleep shall be broken by trumpet and drum;
Then hush thee, my darling, take rest while you may,
For strife comes with manhood, and waking with day.

—Sir Walter Scott.

The World's Wanderers

Tell me, thou Star whose wings of light
Speed thee in thy fiery flight,
In what cavern of the night
Will thy pinions close now?

Tell me, Moon thou pale and gray
Pilgrim of heaven's homeless way,
In what depth of night or day
Seekest thou repose now?

Weary Wind, who wanderest
Like the world's rejected guest,
Hast thou still a secret nest
On the tree or billow?

—Percy Bysshe Shelley

UNCLE JED'S TALK TO THE AWAKES

If there is one thing we need if we are going to make a success of our lives, it is good health. Unless our health is good our bodies strong and well developed, we are greatly handicapped in climbing the ladder of success. When we are children, manhood and womanhood seem a long way off but boys and girls know pretty rapidly and before they fully realize it they are men and women. School days pass quickly and those who are fortunate enough to get to the higher institutions of learning discover that the four years in college pass very quickly indeed.

It is none too soon to cultivate good health in childhood. Nearly every boy and girl is healthy and no thought of broken down health ever enters their heads. But unless they take good care of the health they now possess they may come to a realization some day that the health that once had is gone. It is much harder to regain good health when we have lost it than it is to keep it while we have it.

If we take proper care of ourselves we can keep our good health. Regular exercise in the outdoors, plenty of wholesome recreation, proper meals, proper rest and clean bodies will greatly aid boys and girls in keeping well and strong. We should take good care of our teeth as it is a known fact that decayed teeth cause many diseases. Brush them daily and have a dentist inspect them for cavities and signs of decay at least once a year. Some authorities advocate a visit to a dentist for inspection of the teeth every six months.

We should also take care of our eyesight. Eyesight once gone is beyond recall. There is no more piteous sight than a blind person. Be careful not to strain your eyes by reading in semi-darkness or reading in poorly lighted rooms, for badly strained eyesight sometimes leads to blindness.

LETTERS WRITTEN BY WIDE AWAKES

Settled Boston

Dear Uncle Jed: One June day a group of people from England under John Winthrop came to Massachusetts. They settled Boston which is on Massachusetts bay. At first many people were ill from drinking impure water and, during the winter there was little food. Once John Winthrop gave his last bit of food to a poor man.

Boston is now a large city and the capital of Massachusetts.

My Trip

Dear Uncle Jed: My story is to be about our trip from Long Island to Connecticut. We all got up at five o'clock and dressed quickly and ate our breakfast as we were very anxious to see our new home. We got to the station just as the train was pulling in. From Hicksville, L. I., we went to Grand Central Depot in New York, and had to wait there for the train to Connecticut.

The train made several stops along the way. I thought we would never arrive at Willimantic. Mother went to call a taxi to take us to our home.

We had ten miles but it seemed to us a hundred miles. At last we saw a large white house and I spied my brother and the dog. We were also glad to see father and my brother that we couldn't wait till the car stopped.

Christmas With Santa Claus

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell you about Christmas with Santa Claus. We had a play at school and I was Christmastide. Santa Claus was in the play too.

We had a big Christmas tree at school. It was all trimmed up with pretty things. Under the Christmas tree was a lot of presents.

After the play was over Santa Claus and Mr. Tiffeny (that is our principal) gave out all the presents. I got a pretty pair of white beads, a nice box of handkerchiefs, and a little bottle of rose perfume. I had a very nice time.

Thrift a Good Habit

Dear Uncle Jed: National Thrift Week began on Franklin's birthday, Jan. 17. Thrift means to save as Franklin did. If we save a dollar every week we will try and save more this week. Franklin saved money for clothes and an education. He discovered electricity was in lighting. His money helped him to buy paper, ink and wood for his printing press.

We should all save for we may need it. If the money is put in a bank we can get it if we need it.

We may not need money in grammar school but we will in high school.

If a person owns a farm and he has a bank account he can buy machinery to work with. In this way he can make more money to put in the bank for things needed later.

If children in school are givien or earn money, they generally spend it for candy or something foolish, but if there is a school bank they can save it for that, for they may need it later. The money I put in the school bank goes to the Chelsea Savings Bank, Norwich, Conn.

Saving our money is like the squirrels saving food for the winter. They gather nuts, corn and seeds. Their bank is a hollow tree or a hole in the ground. They use their food when the cold winter is here as we use our savings for a home, sickness or an education.

I have read the stories of other children, but I have never written before. Hope you will like my story.

HARRY J. WILLIAMS, Age 13.

The Niagara Falls

Dear Uncle Jed: The Niagara Falls and rapids form one of the most impressive spectacles in the world. The Niagara river, which is the sole outlet of the great lakes, pours itself in two vast sheets over a precipice about one hundred sixty feet high. Goat island which is situated on the lip of the falls, divides the cataract into two sections, the Horseshoe, or Canadian fall, which is by far the more majestic, and the American fall. The limestone edge of both falls is wearing away in the center, the Canadian fall now being V shaped, and the American fall showing the same tendency although its process of recession has begun more recently. Lower down the river is the whirlpool itself, where a sharp turn sends the waters hurling against the Canadian side. The sight of the falls is equally awe-inspiring from the bridge on the lip of the fall, from the boat which plies from shore to shore below the cataract, or from the Cave of the Winds, reached from Goat island. The falls were first discovered by Father Hennepin in 1678.

SOPHIE PLOPA, Age 12.

Cotton

Dear Uncle Jed: I thought I would write to the Wide Awakes and tell them about cotton. Cotton is grown in the warmest climate we have in the states. First, let me tell about the seed, cotton is raised from. The seed is small and is planted in fields in rows. It grows to be a fine plant, then has little balls on it. As the balls ripen they become white and burst open. That is cotton. It is all fluffy. Negroes go out in the fields and pick it. It takes quite a lot to make a bag full. When the bags are full a team comes and gets them. They are taken to the mill where it is cleaned. The cotton goes on to the weavers. But let us follow the seeds that come out of the raw material. The oil that is squeezed out is called cottonseed oil. The rest of the seed is made into meal for cows. It is a light brown in color.

We will go to see the cotton now. It is put in a loom and woven into material for dresses and stockings. The cloth then goes to the dye rooms and is dyed and printed.

It goes then to different places to be made into clothes. After people get through with the cotton clothes the rag peddler gets them and they are made into paper. Maybe the dresses we once wore is our morning paper now.

A Lost Parrot

Dear Uncle Jed: This is the first time I have written to you. Hope you enjoy reading this. One day I was down at my aunts. She said her parrot had disappeared. Later I was taking a walk in the woods. I heard someone cry, "Help, I am lost." Then my uncle came and he said he heard it cry too. Then we saw his lost parrot. When he saw his master he jumped up on his shoulder and said "Give me a sweet cracker." My uncle said, "I'll give you a fire-cracker if you run away again." but the parrot kept asking for the cracker.

Egypt and the Nile

Dear Uncle Jed: May I tell the Wide Awakes of a wonderful country and a great river we have been studying about in school? The name of the country is Egypt and the river is the river Nile.

It almost never rains in Egypt, and but for the great river, Egypt would be a desert. Yet Egypt has been a granary for hundreds of years, and supported millions of people. A famous Greek historian has called Egypt "The Gift of the Nile."

What does the Nile do for the people of Egypt? It rises among the mountains of Central Africa where there is a heavy rainfall in spring. This causes the Nile to overflow its banks every year in June. If we were in Egypt in July the Nile valley would look to us like a great lake with islands here and there.

In September, the waters begin to go down and by October the river is back within its banks. The water leaves a fine silt which it brought from Central Africa. This silt is very rich and makes the land very fertile.

Now the farmers hurry to sow their wheat. The climate is hot and the soil both rich and moist so the wheat sprouts and grows quickly. Formerly the Egyptians did not even plow the ground, but now they are using American made machinery. They get a nice crop of wheat every year. Egypt is truly the gift of the Nile.

A Glimpse of the ZR III

Dear Uncle Jed: While visiting at Bethlehem, Penn., my attention was directed to a number of boys who were pointing upward and uttering such cries as "Gee, ain't that great though." Looking up I saw a long cigar shaped balloon floating above the city. Running into the house I told my parents to come out and see what I would show them. Fortunately the balloon was floating slowly or it would have passed over the city while I was in the house but as we came out the great balloon was directly over us. Running to one side of a vacant lot I read very plainly on the side of the dirigible the letters, ZR III, I knew then that this was the far famed Shenandoah. This queen of all dirigibles had come directly from Lakehurst, New Jersey, the make in some exercises in Scranton, Pennsylvania and from there back to Lakehurst on the same route. We determined to watch for it the next morning but our efforts were in vain. The big dirigible had evidently taken a different route on its home trip. We were glad to get the glimpse of it that we did however. This dirigible cost the United States government an enormous sum of money and is something that is ought to be proud of. I hope that all of our Circle might see this dirigible as I did.

Rip Van Winkle

Dear Uncle Jed: My story begins like this. In a little old town, in a little old house, there lived an old man, named Rip Van Winkle. Rip was very lazy, and the hardest work he ever did was hunting and fishing. One day, he took Wolf, his dog, for a walk. Before leaving the woods Rip stood his gun against a tree and lay down on the grass. Being very tired he soon fell asleep.

When he awoke his gun was nowhere to be found and Wolf was gone. He then got up and went home, but he could not find his friends for they were all dead. He soon found what he thought was was one night, was twenty years, and he had slept all that time.

Saved a Starling

Dear Uncle Jed: Thursday morning as I was watching the birds eating at my house I noticed a different kind of a bird than I had ever seen before. It had a dark dull yellow back with black and white striped wings. It's tail was rather dark. It was about the size of a sparrow. Later I saw a large flock of them. I would like to know the name of these birds. Some of the other birds, which came were blue jays, starlings, sparrows and juncoes. I was looking out the back window one morning and I saw two starlings. In about one minute I saw a hawk pick one of them off from the tree. It got away but the hawk immediately caught it. Then he held it on the ground. I rushed out and scared the hawk away. The little starling went in one direction while the hawk went in another. I was, very glad the starling got away.

Our Sleigh Ride

Dear Uncle Jed: I have been an interested reader of the Wide Awake Circle, for a long time. I think now I will write a letter and tell you about our sleigh ride.

It was a sleighing party for the fifth grade and our teacher. We went in Mr. Davis nice large sleigh which was fitted out comfortably, with sweet smelling hay, and merry tingling bells.

Our ride took us by the County Home and then far out into the snowy white country. We had great fun throwing snow balls, and singing songs. I guess the white woods rang, with out joyous laughter.

We reached home about 5:15 P. M. all happy, I can assure you. Sleighing is a fine winter sport, I wish we might have more of it. The cold crisp air makes you feel so vigorous.

On My Trapeze

Dear Uncle Jed: This is the first time I have written and I am going to tell you about my trapeze. Last summer I fell off into the mud. Then my dog, Bessie came and shook hands. When I tell her to roll over she will and she puts her paws around my neck.

My Day's Work

Dear Uncle Jed: I think perhaps some little Wide Awake would like to know what we find to do in the country in winter. I live in Ashford. You know our present governor of Connecticut was born in our town and the house still stands about a mile from our home. Everyone at my home is up bright and early in the morning and busy about their own work. My brother's first task is to water the horses, and while he is doing this I wash the dishes and sweep the floor while my mother is out milking. We have eleven cows in all. I wash, and dress my little brother two years old.

Then my brother, and I go to school. It is quite fun to ride down the lane on the snow on my sleigh. After school I play outside with my little brother, and when it grows dark I study my homework. Everynight my greatest chore is to fill the woodbox, and tonight I find it a very hard task because the snow is eight inches deep. Never mind I have done that hard work now and have written this long letter to you.

A School Teacher

Dear Uncle Jed: I always wanted to be a school teacher. So I asked my father to make me a desk. He made a desk and a blackboard. I did not expect that at all. I have some books and most every thing to play with. Now I can be a school teacher but not a real one.

A Good Time

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell the Wide Awakes about the good time I had Christmas. I got up early Christmas morning and went to the railroad station to meet my sister and my mother. When we got home I received a lot of presents. Some of them were a comb, pair of bed slippers, a stocking full of candy and seven pretty handkerchiefs.

Toward evening we had some company and we all had some fun. We didn't get to bed till one o'clock and then the company went home.

The day before we had a Christmas tree in school and each one received some presents.

I had a very good time Christmas and was very happy.

Tea and Coffee

Dear Uncle Jed: My story, to the Wide Awakes will be about tea and coffee. Tea is grown chiefly in hilly country throughout eastern and southern Asia. China, Celyon, India, Japan and Java are the chief producing countries. The cultivation of tea plant requires great care to produce leaves of perfect quality, young tender and fragrant. The very youngest leaves and leaf buds, when properly prepared, sell for the highest prices. In some places tea is picked only once or twice a year, while in other countries, where the climate is favorable to rapid growth of new shoots, the pickings are very frequent. Coffee is cultivated in many parts of the tropics. Brazil is by far the great producer, the coffee district being mainly in the states of Sao Paulo, Rio de Janeiro, Minas Geraes and Espirito Santo. Much coffee is grown in the mountains of northwestern South America, Central America and the West Indies. Coffee is grown in Java and other parts of the East Indies as well as in smaller quantities in Arabia, Africa and Australia.

The Eclipse

Dear Uncle Jed: Saturday January 24, was the day set for the eclipse. Everybody had their smoked glasses ready for the great event that was to take place. At about eight twelve the sun was getting covered by the shadow of the moon. Every minute it gained in getting covered and finally it was all out of sight. The sky was of a very beautiful green and other shades. There were also three planets and one over the sun. All of a sudden the sun popped out. It then looked like a diamond ring. Many people took pictures of this wonderful sight. It was a clear day and every thing turned out all right. The greatest thing to me was the way the scientists had planned for it. I thought it was well worth seeing.

The Eclipse

Dear Uncle Jed: I thought I would write and tell the Wide Awakes about the eclipse. First it went into a cloud and then came out and the moon kept creeping up over the sun and in a little while the moon was right in front of the sun and it got dark and it looked like the moon shining. Three stars came out and there was a white ring around the sun and then the sun came out from the moon and shone brighter. I hope all the Wide Awakes saw it.

A Narrow Escape

Dear Uncle Jed: One night my mother sent me on an errand. I did not want to go, and yet I didn't want to go against my mother's will. Half past seven came and I started on my task. Everything went well. I walked for about a quarter of a mile meeting no one. I began to feel uneasy and started to run. Coming to a cross road I stopped my running. It did not take long and I came to a large stretch of woodland, at both sides of the road. Suddenly I saw a great monster walking toward me. I stood rooted to the ground. What shall I do? Where shall I go? The questions I asked myself. There was the big monster nearly five yards away from me. At the top of my voice I yelled, screamed and called, but no one answered. So I took to running back home.

I fell about a dozen times scratching my face and hands. I did not stop until I came home, where I related everything to my mother.

In the morning my friends and I went to see what had frightened me so. There stood a large tree stump, right in the middle of the road.

I never ventured out after dark again.

Oats

Dear Uncle Jed: This is the first time I have written to the Wide Awake circle and I am going to tell you about oats. Before oats can be planted the ground has to be soft. This is done by a tractor and a harrow. Then a drill plants it. After that a binder cuts it and ties it in bundles. Then a threshing machine separates it from its stalk. It is then sent to the mill. At the mill its pointed ends are cut off. Then it is blown by hot air till it is roasted. It's coat is then taken off. It is then steamed cooked. After that while it is warm and moist from its steam cooking it is put into rollers and made flat then it is ready for your breakfast table.

My Trip to a State Prison

Dear Uncle Jed: I want to tell the Wide Awakes about my trip to Wethersfield state prison. Last August my father took us all to visit the prison. It was very interesting. I saw men there who look nice and smart but they were there for life. I also saw them at work. I saw a prisoner cutting out 196 shirts at once with an electric cutter. I also went in the kitchen and saw them getting dinner ready. It is a very clean place and it looked very nice. But I hope none of the Wide Awakes will ever have to go there.

Happy Jack's Bad Night

A careless or a foolish deed
To untold suffering may lead.
—Happy Jack Squirrel.

Never in all his life had Happy Jack Squirrel been more frightened or miserable. There he was in a little tree that stood all by itself away from the other trees, a tree so small that there was no place for him to hide. He didn't dare leave that tree because he knew that Reddy Fox was hiding and waiting for him. It would have been bad enough in daylight, but to Happy Jack it was far, worse because the night was already beginning.

In the first place it was cold. You see, there was no place in that little tree to curl up. Before morning it would be much colder. Happy Jack was afraid he would freeze to death if he remained up in that tree. But worse than this even was his fear that Hooty the Owl might find him. Happy Jack is one of those who go to bed with the coming of the Black Shadows. He cannot see in the night, as some of his neighbors can. So he is afraid to be out after dark.

He was bitterly disappointed, was Happy Jack. He had been sure that Reddy Fox had gone away, and he had jumped down from that tree and started for the nearest trees of the Green Forest. Then Peter Rabbit had thumped a warning from the bramble-tangle on the edge of the Green Forest, and Happy Jack had climbed back up into that little tree in a hurry. He knew what Peter's thumping meant. He knew that Peter could see Reddy Fox. He was so disappointed that he almost cried.

It grew darker and darker and colder and colder. Suddenly the terrible hunting call of Hooty the Owl sounded from so near at hand that it seemed to Happy Jack that Hooty must be in the top of that very tree. Of course he wasn't. In his fright Happy Jack almost squaled aloud. It was a lucky thing for him that he didn't. Hooty's wonderful ears would surely have heard him. Happy Jack flattened himself along a branch of that little tree and there he clung, shivering with both cold and fright. He didn't dare move.

Hooty hooted again. Happy Jack shook so that he almost fell. Once as he looked up at the twinkling little stars what seemed like a Black Shadow passed noiselessly overhead. Happy Jack held his breath. He knew that that wasn't a Black Shadow. He knew that it was Hooty the Owl. But because Happy Jack didn't move so much as a whisker, and was lying flat along that branch so that he looked as if he were a part of it, Hooty didn't see him. What seemed to Happy Jack like a long time afterward he heard Hooty hoot again. This time he knew that Hooty was far away. Still Happy Jack didn't move.

"I'll freeze to death. Yes, sir, I'll surely freeze to death," he muttered under his breath. And then he heard a little noise right at the very foot of that tree. He held his breath.

"Are you there, Happy Jack?" some one asked. It was Peter Rabbit. "Because if you are," continued Peter, "you needn't stay there any longer. There is a hollow log over in that bramble-tangle where you can spend the rest of the night. Come down and I'll show you the way."

You should have seen Happy Jack scramble down. He followed close at Peter's heels. Sure enough, in the bramble-tangle there was a hollow log. Happy Jack crept into it. And there he spent the rest of that night, the most dreadful night he could remember.

Cotton

Dear Uncle Jed: Cotton grows upon a shrub which is cultivated in the southern part of the United States and in some other warm lands.

If the seed is sown early in the spring the plants will come up and in a few months grow taller than you are. Then it puts out pretty white blossoms and as soon as these fall off you see a little pod left in the place where the flower was.

This pod grows bigger and bigger till it becomes large and when ripe it bursts open. It is quite full of white cotton just like soft fine wool and in the middle of this wool are the seeds.

The soft down must then be picked from the pods the seeds must be taken out and then it is done up in large bales and sent to mills.

There the spinners spin it into yarn and the weavers weave it into cloth which is used to make dresses, girls' coats and trousers for boys and indeed all sorts of clothes.

The Eclipse

Cleaning

Dear Uncle Jed: Any boy or [illegible] with self respect will at least have clean hands and face. One who learns how health depends on being clean will not need to be told to wash the back of his neck and behind his ears. Hands should be scrubbed and finger nails cleaned before each meal. Frequently take a good hot bath. It is of great benefit especially after exercise which has caused you to perspire. Always remember that these things are not just for looks, but to get rid of the germs which stay on the skin and hair and carry disease. If you intend going out into the cold after a hot bath, sponge yourself off with cool

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

WEEKLY FINANCIAL REVIEW

New York, Feb. 8—A sharp break in grain prices, which carried May wheat down over twenty cents a bushel from its recent high, was the outstanding feature of this week's financial and commodity markets. The reaction in wheat generally was described as a correction of recent speculative excesses in the trading in that commodity.

Stock prices fluctuated within irregular limits although several strong spots developed in the oil, rail, copper, motor, shipping and public utility groups. The advance in oils was checked, at least temporarily, by a threatened investigation of gasoline prices. Copper improved in reflection of the rising tendency of red metal prices. Speculative interest in the rails was confined largely to those issues mentioned in connection with favorable dividend or merger rumors.

Call money rates, which had fallen as low as three per cent. stiffened to four on Friday afternoon as a result of the withdrawal of funds from the local market by interior banks. Time money and commercial paper rates held steady.

Foreign exchanges were reactionary. Sterling lost ground steadily on liquidation by speculators, who had accumulated large blocks of sterling bills in anticipation of its early return to parity, and who apparently had become impatient at the delay. The other European rates yielded in sympathy. Japanese Exchange improved on reports that gold was being sent to this center in order to stabilize yen exchange.

SUB BASE WINS CLOSE GAME FROM SO. MANCHESTER

New London, Feb. 8.—A game with the thrills that the Sub Base-Atlas basketball contest contained Saturday evening at the state armory is very seldom seen locally, and after the regulation period of time about 200 satisfied customers left the armory entirely pleased with the exhibition put up by both teams. The local tars won handily by the score of 37 to 32 over the South Manchester five, but they were never in the lead by any large margin.

It was the best performance of the Base this year. Considerable improvement was shown in the execution of plays, and the manouvering of the players was such that no movement was wasted. The Base realized that they had a task cut out for them and went at it cheerfully from the very first whistle. Carrying everything before them in the first few minutes of play, the tars took the visitors completely by surprise. In two tap-offs the ball had rested in the basket after some fine passing made these goals possible. This early performance was convincing in its manner to point toward bigger things later in the season.

Most all the scores were made in bunches. A spasmodic offense which would net a team anywhere from 4 to 8 points was followed by a similar offensive spurt by the rival five. It was a give and take affair throughout, with the Base always in the lead. Only one point separated the teams at quarter time. This one point advantage was swelled to two points when the half time whistle sounded, with the teams standing 22 to 20 for the Base. The play in the second half was furious from the start. The Atlas by a fine spurt and two long baskets tied the count just as the third quarter ended, but the gobs scored a three-point advantage in the final quarter to give them their winning margin.

Although Compton was high scorer, it was Bartz and Robbins who pulled the gobs to the front in the final half. Bartz made several back-handed shots and netted four field goals. This was in the second half, and they all came when a Base victory was in doubt. Dietz and Gustafson played well for the visitors.

The score:

Sub Base.

WESTERLY

Pawcatuck users of the Connecticut state highway along the shore from Westerly to New London are generally interested in a petition, being circulated for presentation to the Connecticut road commissioner. This petition asks that a new highway be laid out from Old Mystic in the town of Stonington in an easterly direction by the pumping station to the Road church, then to Pawcatuck over the Hinckley Hill road.

The petition follows:

We, the undersigned town officers, citizens and taxpayers of the town of Stonington, respectfully petition you and your department to investigate and take into consideration, the importance and desirability of continuing the present state highway trunk line from a point near where it ends at Old Mystic in the town of Stonington, "To continue said highway in an easterly direction toward and by the pumping station to the Road church and then on to Pawcatuck over what is known as the 'Hinckley Hill road.'"

This highway will terminate at the junction of the present state highway that enters Pawcatuck at this point and then continues into Rhode Island. This proposed new highway when completed would give a short and direct route to Groton and New London, and relieve to a great extent, the heavy traffic conditions that exist at all times on the present state highway from New London to Pawcatuck.

Dated at Stonington, Feb. 5, 1925.

JEWETT CITY

A week ago Sunday the 4.15 northbound trolley took the upper end of the long siding at Jewett City to cross a southbound special. There was some inquiry among the passengers, many of whom came from Jewett City, as to the nature of the special. One man allowed as how he guessed the "elephant had set down again." Sure enough! When the special hove in sight around the Tadpole curce, it proved to be an engine drawing the disabled buzz wagon back to its stall. The observant citizen, being struck with the elephant simile, was overheard to remark that "Elephants were a bad thing, especially white ones, and worse still when they happened to be of the dreaded setter breed." It was learned that when Livingstone discovered the Victoria falls of the Zambisi in Central Africa, he was much disturbed by the great herds of elephants that infested the place. The man who knew all about it, declared that the elephants sat all around everywhere, and one even almost sat on Livingstone himself, adding that, "elephants was bad anyhow, but a setter was worse, because one never could tell when he was going to set and when he wasn't." Jewett City patrons of the New Haven system are relieved to learn that the gas-jumpers have been relegated to shorter hauls.

A report to Edward Howe Forbush, director of ornithology, for the state of Massachusetts, relative to the behvior of animals and birds, here, during the solar eclipse of January 24, brings the following report of local interest, as it tallies with actual home observances:

Many observers noted the behavior of birds during the eclipse, January 24. When it was not total, birds paid little attention to it, although in a few cases they became quiet for a time. When totality lasted longest, most of the small birds stopped feeding, calling or singing, flew to trees or thickets and remained quiet until the light reappeared. In one case a large flock of crows in their morning flight over an estuary stopped and turned back. In other cases they flew to the woods and became clamorous as they do when going to roost at night. Gulls circled high and started for their roosts or ceased their fight and settled on the sea. In some cases fowls went to roost. As the light reappeared the birds slowly and gradually resumed their normal activities and calls.

Mrs. Alex McNicol left Saturday to spend a month in Bermuda. Mr. and Mrs. Andrew McNicol go to Bermuda next Saturday for two weeks.

A number of people in town have received this week the beautiful and artistic calendar issued by the New York Central line. It is from a painting by Walter L. Green and shows the Twentieth Century Limited coming down the snowy line, with high lights and scenery colors, corresponding with the title, "When Winter Comes."

The beautiful carnations at the Baptist church Sunday were the gift of Mrs. Louisa Johnston of Willimantic, in memory of her husband, William J. Johnston, who died three years ago.

Saturday and Sunday in the borough were marked by unseasonably high temperature. Sunday the mercury rose to 60, with the foot of snow that covered all this section pretty well melted, and with every depression showing a reservoir of its own.

At the water company's dam at Stone Hill the gauges Sunday night were showing an appreciable pick-up, in the reserve esupply.

Local amateur astronomers had their second eclipse thrill Sunday evening when, in a clear sky, the moon rose with the earth's shadow well advanced. At the middle of the eclipse as seen here, about three-quarters of the moon's diameter was obscured.

Joseph Cadieux Sunday took his daughter, Aurore, to a Hartford hospital for an operation on her eyes, which operation will be performed today (Monday).

PLAINFIELD

Entertainment tonight (Monday) at the Community House, auspices of Congregational church, consisting of a sketch, farce, monologue by comedian, song and dancing acts, violin, harmonica and selection by orchestra.—adv.

Norman Whipple returned Saturday after spending a month in Chicago.

The Moosup Chamber of Commerce is on the water wagon and mean business. A big meeting is to be held today (Monday) to talk the project over. A big turnout is predicted and local business men feel certain that the water supply system will be settled at this meeting. The business men of Plainfield are waiting with interest the result of this meeting.

Someone observes, "As Moosup is on the water wagon, why can't Plainfield be on the fire wagon?" A little progress in this direction would put Plainfield on a safe and sound basis.

The Girls' Bowling League minstrel show has been postponed, until late in April.

A crew of the townsmen worked all day Saturday, clearing the gutters to allow the water, which had flooded the village streets, to drain off.

No one seems to be howling over the non-supply of water these days! The rivers, brooks and wells are overflowing.

Although the highway was very sloppy the motorists did not seem to care as more than a thousand cars passed through town Sunday afternoon.

A little over two weeks remains before the Lenten season sets in.

Bald-headed men would be satisfied if they could even make one gray hair grow where two others grew before.

water and spend plenty of time in drying yourself. Then wait a while after dressing so that you won't find the change too chilly. A clean mouth is necessary. Your teeth are usually perfect in school years, but the least carelessness then may cause their loss in middle life. The tooth brush with plenty of salt or a good powder or paste, should be used after each meal, or at least early in the morning and just before retiring at night. Every bit of food must be removed so as to prevent decay. It is well to have the dentist examine your teeth at least twice a year.

An Afternoon of Fun

Dear Uncle Jed: As John walked slowly down to the post office for his mail, a merry group of boys and girls came hurrying along. Come on skating John, get your skates and be ready in ten minutes rang out the happy voices. In less than five minutes he was in the doorway. He ran down the steps as the group appeared in sight and joined them. They were walking along swinging their skates. Henry called out suddenly, "Here is a secluded spot among the hills to enjoy ourselves." It was certainly a picturesque place. The limber branches were covered with ice and sparkled in the sunlight like masses of diamonds. A thin blanket of snow covered the pond. We soon overcame the difficulty of the snow because Bill happened to have a hatchet. "Oh this is luck," cried Bill, here is a cedar tree. We all took turns at chopping and soon had the top of the tree which we used for a broom, and swept the ice. To our amazement a spacious pond glittered in the sunlight.

When we saw this pond it did not take us many minutes to put on our skates. Joseph said, "Let's have a race from here to the other side." John won the race. Now you must make the figure eight, John to prove that you are the best skater."

Before John knew what had happened he was being carried on the boy's shoulders, amid, cheers and shouts.

"We are going to have a bonfire to warm ourselves before we start home," called out Henry.

Sticks were soon gathered and we sat aroundn the fire singing. The sun has disappeared, it's time to go home, sang out John. The bonfire was smothered and we started on our way. When we arrived home we were safe and very tired.

The Prodigal Son

Uncle Jed: A certain man had two sons. The younger of them said to his father. "Father, give me my share of the money which you have."

The father did so. Not many days after this, the younger son left home and went away to a far country. Here he wasted his fortune and lived a sinful life. After he had spent all his money there came a famine in that country, and the young man was in great want. He did not even have enough to eat. In order not to starve, he went to work for a farmer tending swine. While he was doing this work, he could not help thinking of the many men who were working for his father and had plenty of bread, while he was perishing with hunger.

He began to think how foolish he had been in leaving the good home of his father, and he wished he were there once more. He said to himself, "I will arise and go to my father and say to him." "Father, I have sinned against heaven, and before thee. I am not worthy to be called thy son, make me as one of thy hired servants." And rising up, he came to his father.

Father I have sinned against heaven and before thee. I am not now worthy to be called thy son."

The father said to his servants, "Bring forth quickly the first robe, and put it on him, and put a ring on his hand and shoes on his feet, and bring hither the fatted calf and kill it, and let us eat and make merry, because this my son was dead and is come to life again, was lost and is found." And they began to make merry.

Sliding Down Hill

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell you about sliding down hill. I have never had a new sled of my own till this year when my sister got a new one.

My two friends came and asked me to go sliding with them. The first time I went down I bumped into a fence and hurt my hand. I told my friends not to tell mother because I was afraid she wouldn't let me slide any more. Then my mother called me in the house. We played a few games. Then my friends went home, tired but happy.

Miss Edith Knott who spent the past two months with her sister, Mrs. Fussard, in Miami, Florida, returned home Thursday. A pleasant surprise to Miss Knott was carried out in a social and short entertainment at the close of the Thursday evening meeting, as a welcome home.

The exercises included singing, recitations by the children, a reading, piano solo and other exercises. Miss Knott was presented two silver candlesticks with candles and a silver flower vase and a large loaf of cake, all being a surprise to Miss Knott who responded in appreciative words for the gifts and the pleasing welcome received. POETRY

"Blessed is the man whose strength is in Thee;

I am lost in the valley of Baca,
In the deep arid valley of Baca.
No sunlight sifts here
Through thick branches drear,
No song-bird one sees
On the skeleton trees
In this low depressed valley of Baca.
In this hot stifling valley of Baca.

I am faint in this valley of Baca,
In this dark, lonesome valley of Baca,
Gnarled trees impede
All efforts at speed,
By no breezes fanned
I stumble through sand
Full knee-deep in the valley of Baca.
This burnt, blackened valley of Baca.

TAFTVILLE

The Occowasin Camp Fire Girls were entertained Friday evening at the home of Miss Mary Taggart of Norwich avenue.

The minstrel troupe of the Taftville Social & Football club went to the state tuberculosis sanatorium Friday evening to present the pleasing show that they gave last week in Ponemah hall. The affair was greatly enjoyed by the patients.

At the Taftville Congregational church Sunday morning, the pastor, Rev. Edwin G. Crowdis, preached on The Inspiration of Lincoln. At the noon session of the church school there was a special Lincoln collection for the support of the work of the American Missionary association in the southern states. Miss Selena Adams was the leader of the meeting of the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor held in the evening in the vestry of the church.

John Fitzmaurice of New London spent the week-end with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Fitzmaurice of South A street.

The strong sun of the past few days has accomplished a great deal in taking away the heavy blanket of snow and ice that has been in the woods about the town. Those interested in the preservation of game believe that now the game birds will be able to exist until spring. While the grouse is a hardy bird and manages to get through all but the worst winters, there has been some fear for the pheasants. Reports from other localities state that these birds are dying off in hundreds because they are unable to find food, and some towns have made appropriations to buy grain for them until they can again find their natural food.

OPEN FORUM TALK TO METHODIST MEN

Dr. Fred P. Schenk of Norwich state hospital gave an open forum talk to the Men's class of Trinity Methodist Episcopal church at noon Sunday on the bearing of the new laws of heredity and the treatment of the mentally and physically sick. His talk, which was very interesting and instructive, was listened to with much enthusiasm by the men.

REPUBLICAN PRINCIPLES RE-TOLD AT CONNECTICUT M'KINLEY BANQUET

John J. Davis, secretary of commerce and labor of President Coolidge's cabinet, told the 500 to 600 attending the banquet at the annual meeting of The Connecticut McKinley association, Saturday evening, in New Haven, that party responsibility was the strongest safeguard for the nation against the government of minorities, blocs or selfish interests in which lie that "germ of destruction which has swept so many countries of the world."

United States Senator Hiram Bingham, president of the association, who was toastmaster, spoke of some of his experiences in Washington, and his increasing conviction that real safety for our government lay in a definite policy of decentralization.

Governor John H. Trumbull made an address calling for a constitutional amendment to permit future sessions of the legislature to recess for a year after organizing.

Among those attending from this part of the state were Harry Prentice and George M. Young of Taftville, George H. Bradford, state central committeeman, Representative Ambrose Sullivan and Mrs. Sullivan, Mr. and Mrs Hubert Dart, Dan D. Horne and Fred Perkins, all of Montville, state Treasurer Ernest E. Rogers, Senate Leader Daniel M. Cronin, Frank Vickery and John Mallon, all of New London.

Officers Elected.

New Britain was selected as the place for the next annual banquet. House Leader Benjamin W. Alling of New Britain was elected president, Clarence G. Willard of New Haven, secretary; and Republican Town Chairman William H. Judd, of New Britain, treasurer, and the following members of the executive committee: Representative Eugene W. House, Glastonbury; Republican Town Vice-Chairman Mrs. Russell Lee Jones, of Hartford; Ex-Senator Charles M. Bakewell, New Haven; Mrs. Alfred C. Baldwin, Derby; Representative Helen E. Lewis, Stratford; House Clerk Daniel F. B. Hickey, Stamford; Frederic Mercer, New London; Mrs. Leora Woodward; Representative George R. Sturges, Woodbury; Mrs. Coe, of Torrington; Republican State Vice-Chairman Katherine Byrne, Putnam; State Agent Raymond F. Gates, Willimantic; Representative Annie Vinton, Mansfield; United States Attorney John Buckley, Union.

Toastmaster's Address.

We are fortunate in having with us tonight as our speakers not only the head of our state but also a representative of the official family of the president of the United States. Before calling on them for their addresses, however, I would like to make a few remarks in regard to the service at the national capitol with which I have been entrusted by the state of Connecticut.

You all know that there is very little which a new senator can do. I have heard business men ridicule the practice of the congress whereby the chairmanships of the important committees were assigned in order of seniority and length of service on the committee, rather than for ability or as a reward for efficient service.

As a matter of fact, the subject of seniority is a very debatable question. Personally I have come to the belief that it makes good feeling, that it helps rather than hinders the course of government business, that it does away with the jealousy and envy which would be almost certain to arise if men were selected for committee chairmanships because someone believed in their ability and efficiency and judged them to be superior to their colleagues. There would be pulling and hauling. Everyone would try to get a pull with those who made the ultimate selection. No one would be satisfied with the committees' decisions. It would interject into congress an element of bitterness and the difficulty of getting things done which is not present now. Since no one by wishing can add a cubit to his seniority stature that element of struggle is removed and a feeling of good fellowship prevails which tends to oil the wheels of legislative business.

It was with considerable diffidence and trepidation that I entered the senate chamber on the day of my first introduction. I felt much as a freshman does the day he enters college. I wondered how much hazing I was going to receive.

It was, however, my good fortune to be introduced in the senate by the senior senator from New England, who happens to be the senior senator from Connecticut, my colleague, George P. McLean. I could not have come in under better auspices, for I find that he is universally respected and admired throughout that distinguished body. His opinion is sought on various subjects and is most highly regarded. As chairman of the committee on banking and currency, and as a member of the great committee on finance and on foreign relations, there are brought to his attention matters which concern every tax payer and every citizen in the United States. Our congress necessarily does business as a government of committees. Business which comes before the congress is too vast and complex for any one member of congress to be able to familiarize himself with more than a very small percentage, usually only that part which is referred to his committees. It is consequently of interest to note that in those very important committees with which Senator McLean is connected, and in respect to the matters referred to them, he is regarded as an expert, whose advice is frequently sought by his colleagues. They have had occasion for many years past to form an accurate opinion of his ability.

Consequently, as I have said, my introduction to the senate was under most favorable auspices. When my colleague took me about the senate floor and introduced me to the leading senators on both sides of the chamber he gave me an "open season" to this very exclusive and much criticised body. As a result the impression which I derived on that first day and which came to me as a pleasant surprise was friendliness and a warm hearted welcome. It is something which I had never expected the upper classmen to give to the newly arrived freshman!

A few days later I had occasion to ask a bit of advice of the senior senator of the entire body and was again surprised at his cordial invitation that I occupy his chair whenever I found that from my remote corner of the chamber I was unable to hear the debate or desired to take part in it from a more advantageous position.

Few people realize the enormous amount of legislation which in our modern growth of centralization is proposed to the congress. I noticed the other day that bills were being introduced into the senate which bring the number of measures introduced in that body up to about 4,200. A few days ago there was introduced into the house of representatives a bill on resolution numbered 12,100. Think of it. 12,100 bills and resolutions introduced into the house of representatives! You will agree with me that it is physically impossible for any one person or any four or five persons to know what they are all about. These matters must all be referred to committees. Some of the committees are continuously at work, day after day, week after week. When important measures come up in the senate the committee business must have to be dropped temporarily and the members must report for roll call or to vote. In most cases their votes must depend on the advice they receive from their colleagues before whose committee the measure has been brought up.

During my first week in the senate the committee on military affairs held sessions all day long on the subject of promotion of colonel in the regular army to grade of brigadier general. A considerable number of officers and citizens appeared before the committee to testify on both sides of the case. From ten in the morning until six o'clock in the evening it was necessary for me to attend sessions of the military affairs committee, simply leaving the room to answer roll call or to get a bit of lunch. It was utterly impossible for me to follow what was going on in the senate. In the meantime I was receiving scores of letters and telegrams regarding other questions pending before the senate and which I had no opportunity to study. I presume some of my answers to those letters were annoyingly brief. On one subject alone I received one hundred and thirty letters and telegrams. I remember another day when a committee of ladies called with reference to a matter which since my entry into the senate I had had no opportunity to study. I think they were rather shocked to find that I was so ignored. The matter which interested them most vitally was only one of the ten thousand matters before congress.

My experience during the past month has still further strengthened me in the opinion which some of you have already heard me express, namely, that the only real safety for our government is deliberately to follow decentralization, rather than centralization. Instead of the congress being expected to legislate for any more kinds of things it should be relieved, and the states should assume more of their own responsibilities. As President Coolidge so strikingly said in his first message to the present session of congress:

"I am convinced that the broadening of this field of activity is detrimental both to federal and state governments. Efficiency of federal operations is impaired as their scope is unduly enlarged. Efficiency of state governments is impaired as they relinquish and turn over to the federal government responsibilities which are rightfully theirs. I am opposed to any expansion of these subsidies. My conviction is they can be curtailed with benefit to both the federal and state governments."

Secretary Davis Spoke

Secretary of Labor Davis spoke in part as follows:

Once a Laborer

"My faith in McKinley and in the McKinley principles in economics and politics dates from the early days of the last decade of the last century. Then I was a young man, of foreign birth, seeking to make my living in the iron and steel industry. William B. McKinley, as a member of the House of Representatives fathered the McKinley tariff bill, the repeal of which by the democratic congress elected in 1890 precipitated an industrial panic equal in its disastrous effects to any this country has ever known. Hundreds of thousands of men were walking the streets in the vain quest for employment. Mills and factories everywhere were closed down and the employes were left helpless to face adversity. The funds of charity were called upon to erect souphouses in our great cities where starving thousands might be fed from day to day. Only those who lived through those terrible days can realize the evils which visited the nation in those disastrous days of the early nineties. I myself made my way from the Pittsburgh district south to Bingham, Ala., and thence north driven by the imperative need for employment. Everywhere industry was at a standstill, and there were ten for every job.

Headed McKinley Pilgrimage

"It was under these conditions that I found a place in the tinplate mills of Indiana, and it was under these conditions that the McKinley philosophy was brought home to me. In the campaign of 1896, I headed a delegation of tin plate workers who journeyed from Indiana to pledge their support to McKinley, in his front porch campaign at his home in Ohio. The economic and political principles which were brought home to me at that time have remained with me ever since, and I believe will remain with me throughout my life. I learned then that the republican party is pledged to the protection of the man who works in America, to the betterment of industry, which provides employment for American labor, and to the maintenance of those fundamental doctrines of human rights which are set forth in the Constitution formulated by our forefathers when they founded this republic. There I became an organization republican.

"The tinplate industry, in which I was then employed proved a complete and thorough demonstration of the wisdom of the McKinley tariff policy. In the year before the McKinley tariff law was enacted this country imported more than a billion pounds of tinplate. Then there was no tinplate industry in the United States. With the re-enactment of the protective tariff law following the disastrous Wilson law of the early nineties, the tinplate industry began to boom. Today we are the greatest manufacturers of tinplate in the world. In the last year for which figures are available we produced nearly three and a quarter billions of pounds of tinplate and imported less than a million pounds. Under the protective tariff system for which McKinley fought we have built up a tinplate industry of 1,527 plants which pay out annually in wages to American workmen $350,000,000. In the meantime, our home manufacture of tinplate has materially reduced the prices of tinware to the American consumer. The development of the tinplate, iron and steel and tinplate industry in the United States under a protective tariff system has brought to this country 20,000 sturdy stalwart Anglo-Saxons, many of them from my native land of Wales, who have aided us in the building of our American civilization.

An American Republican

"This is one of the things which has made me a straight organization republican. The great McKinley was an organization republican. He knew that this tremendous representative self-government stretching from the Atlantic to the Pacific and from the Great Lakes to the Gulf, must succeed as a government of parties. He knew the need for party organization and the need for party responsibility to the people, in county, state and nation.

"As an organization republican, I recognize the need for party organization and for party responsibility. I know the country's need in these days of strang political groups for loyalty to party. Unless we shall maintain that loyalty we will fail in our duty to those fundamental principles of Americanism which were embodies in the Constitution of the United States. Today we must realize that loyalty to party means loyalty to the state, for in the development of small political blocs, groups and interests lies that germ of destruction which swept so many countries of the world. This nation cannot endure under a government of Minorities. It cannot endure unless the government, local, state and national continues to represent a true majority of the men and women in the community.

Abides by Primary Result

"I am one of those party men who can go through a hard primary fight, win or lose, support the candidate of the party in the election. I believe that is the kind of party men we need today. I am confident that you represent that kind of partisan patriots, men who know that the best interests of this country lie in putting forward the best man available for every public office, and in supporting those men.

"The principles and precepts of McKinley live in the republican party of today. We have but to look at the record of the present republican administration of our federal government to find the success which attends the principles of true republicanism as McKinley saw them.

"Most of us remember the conditions which confronted the country when the republican administration came in power in 1921. Democratic diplomacy had disrupted our foreign affairs. Although hostilities had ended three years before, the democratic administration had been unable to establish peace with the central powers of Europe. At home we faced economic chaos. War waste and democratic extravagance had debauched the public service and private business was in chains forged by unwise and uneconomic tax laws. The nation's industry faced a threatened panic. Everywhere factories were slowing down and more than 5,000,000 American workmen were walking the streets looking for jobs. It was a perilous time for the American people. Only sound legislation and wise administration met the multitude of problems which confronted this country in 1921. Here are some of the items which make up that record of achievement:

"Our foreign relations have been adjusted, peace restored with all the world, our independence of action as a world power preserved. Through the Dawes reparations plan, Europe has been put on the road to economic stability without involving the United States in any foreign entanglement. Economic restoration in Europe will mean much to American agriculture and industry.

Strides in Finance.

"In government finance this administration has made giant strides. Government expenditures were curbed through the institution of the first budget system in our history. From 1921 to the last year, the republican administration reduced the annual cost of government by $2,041,000,000 or more than the wages earned by a million and a third American workmen working 300 days, at $5 a day. The public debt, which the war and democratic extravagance had run up to $24,000,000,000, has been cut down to $2,750,000,000, an annual saving in interest of $120,000,000. Government bonds, which had slumped as low as 85 in the market in 1921 have been restored to par, and one bond has sold as high as 105. Prudent financial administration has reduced bank interest rates through the federal reserve system from six and one-half per cent. in 1921 to three and one-half per cent. thus permitting industry readily to procure capital for all legitimate purposes. The savings in government costs have been promptly translated into tax reductions. Internal revenue taxes have twice been cut, and this year the American people will pay $6,000,000 less a day for taxes than in 1921, a saving equivalent to the wages of 1,200,000 workers at $5 a day.

American Business Revived.

"An American protective tariff bill and legislation restricting the immigration of the millions of war weary peoples who were anxious to leave European countries were enacted. These measures promptly resulted in a revival of American business and today prosperity is in evidence everywhere throughout the land. The millions of idle workingmen have been put back to work at good wages. If we look at the economic conditions of other countries we find that America is practically the only country in the world where the workers have no wrinkles in their bellies.

"Through the conference on the limitation of armament, the administration succeeded in producing the first practical step toward relieving the peoples of the great powers from the intolerable tax burdens entailed in the maintenance of competitive naval armaments. The importance of the accomplishments are but little appreciated. No conference held in the history of nations did more to promote peaceful relations throughout the world.

"Through these accomplishments the republican party has live true to the ideals of such great representatives of the party as McKinley. The future success of republicanism lies in the striving for these ideals."

FIND DANGEROUS BACILLI IN EAST SIDE SPRING

Health Officer Dr. E. J. Brophy has posted the spring piped to the water trough on East Main street, this action following the receipt of a notice that samples of this water showed bacteria of the colon variety, therefore making it unsafe for drinking purposes. The water has been used for many years by people of that vicinity, many of whom are continuing to use it, disregarding the warning notice.

Another sample of the water in the FaNs section, the water in the spring recently posted, is to be taken in the spring to see if the water has improved since that time. Similar action will be taken at the East Side spring and if it is surface contamination steps will be taken to get rid of this danger at once.

Said an East Side resident who has been drinking the water there for years: "There must be a shamefaced lot of bacilli in these two springs to think that they have wasted their chances to spread hundreds of cases of typhoid fever, in fact fooled away their chance to make themselves felt until now they have been discovered by the health board and the people have been warned."

GOD'S LOVE TOPIC OF PASTOR'S SERMON

Another one in the series of Sunday evening services in English was given this week at the First Evangelical Lutheran church this week. The sermon by the pastor, Rev. H. Hunzinger, was in part as follows.

We will talk tonight about the greatest thing in the world, its entity and how it comes into appearance. The greatest thing in the world is divine love. Its entity is the perfect union between the soul and God. And its first appearance was made on earth through Christ Jesus. O He was human like you and me, but at same time He was divine because His soul was united with the Eternal Father by love. The son of God we call Him —and the son of man. Those names are very dear to our hearts since the days of our childhood—but for many of us they stay just names—and the real thing is love, in its purest, highest, and sweetest conception. The highest, the purest, the sweetest feeling on earth is the love of a mother for her child. We call it divine. But is it free from selfishness? O, no, it isn't. And take the so-called sexual love, it doesn't even deserve the name—in some rare cases it's glorified selfishness—in most cases it is the beast and nothing than the beast wrapped up in the thin veil of make-believe love. All earthly love is like a rose shining beautifully from afar on a bright June day—we come near it—we wish to own it—but it's dead already when we hold it in our hand and soon the wind will play with its faded petals. You may not believe it now—but you will find out later. It's a heartbreaking sight.

Yes, friends, we all would be utterly miserable if there was nothing else than worldly love to give us light and comfort in the wilderness of life. But by the hands of our Almighty Father a rosebush has been planted in the wild lands of the world, and it's name is Divine Love—and its appearance is Christ Jesus, the Lord. This rosebush is everlasting and its blossoms never grow old and faded and it defies sin and death. O wondorous power of God's love! It changes its soil, and its surrounding for you, O soul, it turns the desert lands into a garden of God. For you, O soul, it is planted amidst your life covered with blossoms and a thousand buds are the heralds of an even greater happiness to come.

Christ Jesus the Lord stands before us tonight. Behold all the beautiful roses He has in store, ready to be picked by. Blessed are the poor in spirit for theirs is the Kingdom of God, Blessed are they that mourn for they shall be comforted, Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth, Blessed are they that hunger and thirst after righteousness, for they shall be filled, Blessed are the merciful for they shall obtain mercy. Blessed are the pure in heart for they shall see God, Blessed are the peacemakers, for they shall be called the children of God, Blessed are they that have been persecuted for righteousness sake for theirs is the Kingdom of heaven, Blessed are ye when men shall reproach you, and persecute you and say all manners of evil against you falsely for my sake. Rejoice and be exceedingly glad; for great is your reward in heaven—for so persecuted they the prophets that were before you—I tell you—if you ever pick these roses of Christ and own them they will fill up your soul with divine love and their dew drops sparkling in the light of eternity will refresh your soul with everlasting gladness.

Let us enter the rose garden of Christ—let us enter the kingdom of God. All ye weary souls, He says: Follow Me—I will lead you to the throne of God's love. Let us consider the kingdom of God. We are the children and God is the father. And Christ is the door that leads us to the Father. But the Holy Ghost opens the door for us. It is very narrow. It looks like a cross. And in fact it is the cross. The cross of Jesus. If we want to get into the rose garden of God's love we must pass through the narrow gate, the cross of Calvary. That isn't so easy, as most people seem to believe. In order to pass through that narrow gate we must leave behind us all the big things we were carrying around, our vanity, our self pride our worldliness, and the heavy bundle of our sorrows. How can it be done?

Not by our own power—of course not! But by the grace of God. The kingdom of God is among us now. We don't need to wait any longer. God wants us to come in. Wherever the word of atonement is preached to the sinful soul—there is the kingdom of God.

THE SIN OF IMPURITY THEME OF FR. GALVIN

The unchanging attitude of the Roman Catholic Church against impurity among rich and poor was recalled on Sunday by Rev. Myles P. Galvin, preaching at the 9 o'clock mass in St. Patrick's church, in his series of sermons on the Ten Commandments. He considered together the sixth commandment "Thou shalt not commit adultery" and the ninth, "thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's wife." At the outset, Father Galvin expressed the hope that in his utterances he might not offend innocent ears—for the children of the parish formed a large proportion of the congregation which filled every portion of auditory and galleries. But, he explained, he had the duty of a priest to perform, and even in the youngest soul there is that consciousness of dismay and shame in the commission of acts of impurity which indicates that conscience tells one it is a terrible sin against God.

With great delicacy, then, but with due frankness, he took up the evil of impurity, immorality, immodesty, by act, word, look, desire or thought. Especially is such sin grave among Christians, who are, as St. Paul says, of the very flesh and blood of the sinless Saviour. The Jews, who did not know Christ, might have some excuse for their cruel treatment of Him during His passion. The mad mobs of the French Revolution who showed their hatred by turning the churches into stables and enthroning an impure woman on the very altar, excite indignation and disgust. Yet they did no more than does the so-called Christian who profanes by impurity his body, which he knows is or should be the temple of the Holy Ghost. The safeguard of shunning all temptation to impurity, of copying Christ, of invoking the protection of the Mother of Purity, of prayer, of the sacraments of cleansing one's soul by confession and then starting over again in the way of righteousness, were among the means cited by the preacher for overcoming this deadly sin. He expressed the hope that those who have kept from its taint may so continue and that those who have erred will not put off the time of their repentance. For all he hoped the blessedfate of one day having the Saviour look upon them with approval, while uttering the consoling assurance of the Beatitude, "Blessed are the pure at heart, for they shall see God."

The day was Septuagesima Sunday, about seventy days before Easter. Throughout the Catholic world the epistle read in every mass was I Corinthians 9, 24 to 10.5. The gospel was Matt. 20, 1-16, the parable of the laborers in the vineyard. The low mass was read by Rev. Augustus Chapignac, of LaSalette College, Hartford, formerly of Danielson, who assisted over the week end.

In giving Holy Communion Father Chapignac was assisted by Rev. John J. Reilly. It is noteworthy how many of the parish men continue their promises made during the recent mission going to Communion weekly, after confession the day before, Sunday they nearly outnumbered the women and children. The singing during the services was by the Junior Choir.

TWO NORWICH BOYS IN HOLY CROSS DRAMATICS

(Special to The Bulletin)

Worcester, Mass., Feb. 9.—Two Norwich, Conn., boys, students at Holy Cross college, have been assigned parts in Shakespear's "King Richard III." to be staged by the college dramatic association in a local theater the middle of this month. Matthew J. Sheridan, a member of the junior class, will portray an officer in Richmond's army, and John J. Brennan, a freshman, will take the part of a halberd.

"A Certified Laundry"

See the Article In the "Literary Digest" of January 31, 1925, on Page 21

This article in the Literary Digest gives a very interesting account of the system of washing used in Mr. Belding's Laundry in Northampton, Mass. Mr. Belding having heard public criticisms of the methods used in up-to-date laundries, had Prof. Lewis B. Allyn, chemist and health expert, make an analysis of the cleansing materials and processes of washing used in his laundry and Prof. Allyn certified these processes to be absolutely harmless to the most delicate fabrics, and the best methods of cleaning.

The TROY LAUNDRY belongs to the National Laundry-owners' Association and uses the same processes of washing as Mr. Belding, who belongs to this association. All our processes are developed by the chemists of the Mellon Institute of Pittsburg. Clothing washed by our methods will wear longer and last longer than any other way.

FOG IN NEW YORK THE CAUSE OF DEATHS AND ACCIDENTS

Two Persons Were Killed and Three Score Others Injured in a Series of Accidents—Traffic on Land and Sea Was Slowed Down by the Heavy Blanket of Fog—There Were Three Collisions of Elevated Trains, Ferry Service Was Disrupted and Ocean Going Steamers Collided in the Lower Harbor.

New York, Feb. 9—Two persons were killed and three score others injured today in a curious series of accidents due to dense fogs that prevailed over the eastern states and the seaboard today, bringing semi-paralysis to New York's Transit systems and causing a general tie-up of traffic on land and sea.

The gray blanket, thick as the proverbial London fog, was charged with responsibility for three collisions on elevated railroads in the city's outskirts; a disruption of the Ferry service between Manhattan and New Jersey, Brooklyn and Staten Island points, a collision of two ocean-going steamers in the lower harbor; a general delay of train service bound to and from New York, a surface car collision and a train of minor mishaps. Harbor traffic slowed down to half time and less, a dozen big ocean liners bearing thousands of passengers from foreign ports being imprisoned at quarantine or delayed in getting to port.

Although not the densest fog in the city's history, it was pronounced the most disastrous. Predictions of the weather bureau that the gray blanket would be lifted early in the afternoon were not fulfilled, the murk weighing down the city the entire day. Office forces worked under electric lights all day.

The most serious of the train accidents occurred at the 219th street station of the Interborough company's White Plains Road extension in the Bronx. Here, two trains waiting at the station for the signal that would indicate the slow-moving trains ahead were safely on their way were crashed into by a third train, consisting of five wooden cars.

Just what caused the collision may never be known, as the third train motorman, Frank Ackerstrom, was killed outright. The first car of his train in which he was stationed, ploughed half of its length into the train ahead, sending that train's first car a quarter of the way through the rear car of the leading train.

It took firemen two hours to extricate the body of Giles Wanamaker, 76, a court attendant who was the only passenger in Ackerstrom's car, was hurled half its length and almost instantly killed.

Forty persons were hurt, one of them seriously. The station was turned into a first aid depot, where the injured were treated by doctors and nurses hastily summoned by the police.

A second elevated collision occurred when two Brooklyn-Manhattan Company wooden car trains came together in the Fulton Street line, in the east New York section of Brooklyn. Here a dozen persons were injured sufficiently to demand medical attention, while twenty more received minor hurts. Many received their hurts in a panic which broke out among the passengers when a short-circuit set fire to the second coach of the colliding train.

A woman was seriously hurt and a half dozen other passengers received lesser injuries when the first car of an Interborough train partially telescoped the rear car of a Brooklyn-Manhattan elevated train at the Bliss street station of the Corona Avenue line. Both trains were made up of wooden cars. Panic swept the passengers on the two trains, sending the frantic crowd clawing toward exits. Most of the injured received their hurts in this scramble.

A subway fire, in the Manhattan end of the Interborough tube under East River, caused another panic which caused injuries to about a score. The train, Manhattan bound from Brooklyn ran over creosoted ties which had been fired by a motor spark. Dense clouds of choking black smoke filled the cars and the two guards had difficulty in restraining the frantic passengers, who imagined the train to be still under the river and plunged for exits.

The smoke-filled train was run to an emergency exit, where police assisted in getting the wild crowds above ground. One man fainted and a dozen women, partially overcome, were carried up emergency exits by the police.

The Canadian Pacific liner Empress of Scotland, with 420 passengers aboard for Mediterranean ports, poked her way down the north river to Quarantine this afternoon and was headed for sea when she collided with the Freighter Scottsburg. The Scottsburg, just in from London, had anchored to await a lifting of the fog before venturing into the river. The Empress of Scotland was damaged on her starboard bow, but not seriously enough to cause her to turn back. The Scottsburg got the worst of it, her after superstructure being badly torn. No one was hurt.

Two Harlem surface cars collided and four persons were injured. Another surface car caught fire from a short circuit and a mild panic ensued.

Several inbound Long Island sound boats, from New England points, were anchored off the Bronx, their skippers afraid to try to negotiate the East River in the fog. A dozen barges added to the confusion of East River shipping when they broke away from their moorings and went swirling with the current, menacing everything moving. They were loose three hours before pursuing firemen caught them.

Several liners reaching port from abroad had to remain in quarantine for the night, as it was feared they couldn't negotiate the North River in the thick weather. Others, due here today, didn't get in, held up by the fog. These included the Celtic, the Caronia, the Deutschland, the Patria, Fort Victoria, Tolca and Chateau Thierry.

DR. THIERY TAKEN TO HOSPITAL FOR INSANE

Cambridge, Mass., Feb. 9.—Dr. Raymond D. Thiery of Somerville, who shot and killed David M. Noble, his brother-in-law, at the Thiery home Aug 8 last, was taken to the Bridgewater State Hospital For the Insane today as a life patient. He was committed to the hospital by Judge Sisk of Middlesex county superior court after a jury impanelled to try him for murder, returned a directed verdict of "not guilty by reason of insanity."

When a jury had been drawn for the trial in less than an hour, Assistant District Attorney Robert T. Bushnell informed the court in his opening address that alienists retained by the commonwealth had found Thiery insane. The only witnesses called were five alienists who testified as to the results of their examination of the Somerville physician. They declared him to be suffering from "constitutional psychopathic inferiority."

In his talks with them, the physicians said, Thiery confessed that he killed Noble and declared that he was "urged by God" to do so. No other motive for the crime was elicited. Noble was shot down as he entered the door of the Thiery home in Somerville on August 8 last. Thiery, who was found in the cellar of the house with several knife wounds in his body, told police that his brother-in-law was killed by burglars who had turned their attention to him when he intervened.

GUILTY OF SLAYING HIS WIFE AND HER BROTHER

Geneva, Ill., Feb. 9—Warren J. Lincoln, the eccentric Aurora lawyer, florist, who confessed he killed his wife and her brother, Bryon Shoupe, burned their bodies in his greenhouse furnace and sealed their heads in a concrete block, tonight was found guilty of the murder of his wife by a jury which fixed his punishment at life imprisonment.

The jury which has spent several weeks hearing the evidence, deliberated for three hours and 35 minutes and took five ballots. The first ballot decided his guilt, according to report and on the second vote was 7 to 5 that he was sane when the crime was committed.

Skipper of Rum Ship Held in $50,000 Bail

New York, Feb. 9.—Mark L. Gilbert, skipper of the 5000-ton rumship Homestead and former president of the Globe Steamship company, was held in $50,000 bail today as a fugitive from justice.

He and his crew of 24 were captured last Friday night, after a 36-hour battle with revenue cutters 25 miles off Montauk Point, which ended when the Homestead's masts were shot away, her hull shattered and her engines crippled.

Federal Judge Augustus Hand set the bail high upon the representation of prosecutors that Gilbert had fled a federal indictment returned two years ago for conspiracy to violate the liquor laws through international rum-smuggling operations, and that he also was wanted by authorities in Massachusetts.

Prosecutors said they understood, further, that Gilbert also was indicted with Charles W. Morse, and others "for padding the payroll of the United States Shipping Board." Morse, with his three sons and 16 other persons await trial on indictments charging use of the mails to defraud.

Judge Hand was told that the Homestead, which had borne the name Lebanon, and more recently, Tobega, carried 5,500 cases of liquor when seized Friday. She was sailing within the treaty rum limit, said prosecutors, and although flying the British flag, was of Nicaraguan registry.

Gilbert's previous indictment was said to have been based upon his activities as president of the Globe Steamship company, which purchased the craft Korona.

It was related in court that the Korona several years ago cleared New York with a cargo of alcohol billed for Greece. Off Newport, R. I., the cargo was transferred to a barge and secretly returned to New York.

Then, according to the prosecutors, the Korona went to the Bahamas, took on liquor, and returned to Newport, where the process of relaying the illicit cargo to New York by barge was repeated. Seizure of the ship and her crew eventually was accomplished in territorial waters of Spain. Indictments were returned and Gilbert was freed on $2,500 bail, which he forfeited by failing to appear here for trial last May.

Gilbert was said by authorities to have been a much but vainly sought witness in a suit Mrs. Adelaide C. Nelson of Philadelphia brought against Charles W. Morse and others, for compensation for the loss of her son at sea.

The boy perished with the steamship Frederick, property of Morse and his associates. Mrs. Nelson alleged the ship was unseaworthy, with a rotten hull and putty rivets, and that her foundering was due to the negligence of owners.

ARREST MADE IN THE OHIO POISONING CASE

Columbus, Ohio, Feb. 9.—Lewis Fish, Canton, Ohio, tonight told authorities investigating the death of two Ohio state University students and the serious illness of many others from capsules of strychnine, that he had filled the prescription of David Puskin, Canton, Ohio, student, at the university's laboratory. Puskin died from strychnine poisoning.

Fish was arrested tonight.

Fish told officials that he had entered the college dispensary without authority and filled a prescription for Puskin for "six R. & W. (six red or aspirin capsules and six white or quinine capsules)" issued by Dr. H. Shindle Wingert, head of the university health service.

In addition to the strychnine capsule which caused Puskin's death, another capsule was found in his possession which when analyzed was found to contain nothing but strychnine.

Fish, who had been questioned by authorities at the opening of the investigation, without divulging any information, declared tonight he had "held back" because he did not wish "notoriety" in connection with the investigation.

Fish, a friend of Puskin's, said that Puskin had come to him complaining of a cold and that he volunteered to go to the college dispensary and get the medicine, and when refused admission by attendants in charge, went in another door and got the "quinine capsules" and gave them to Puskin.

Action in Senate on Alleged Monopolies

Washington, Feb. 9.—The federal trade commission was directed today by the senate to investigate alleged monopolies in the electrical power and the tobacco industries, and to inquire into the existence of a national propaganda to discourage public ownership of utilities.

A resolution by Senator Norris, republican, Nebraska, calling for investigation of the "extent to which the General Electric Co.," or its subsidiaries monopolize production and distribution of electric energy, was attached, by a vote of 55 to 25, to the tobacco investigation resolution of Senator Ernest, republican, Kentucky, after practically the entire day's session had been spent in debate.

The Ernest resolution, which provides for inquiry into reported agreements between the Imperial Tobacco company of Great Britain and the American Tobacco company, by which, it was alleged, cooperative organizations in the United States were boycotted, and each concern was given a monopoly of its own country, was then adopted without a record vote.

The inquiry into propaganda against public ownership of utilities was directed to an amendment attached to the Norris resolution before it was adopted as a rider to the Ernest proposal. It was advanced by Senator Norris himself who, in bringing forth his power investigation proposal as an amendment to the tobacco inquiry resolution, asserted that he had decided upon this course to obtain action because of repeated failures to get consideration for it in the routine manner.

Three democrats and 22 republicans were recorded against the Norris resolution. Many of these senators explained that their vote cast in the belief that ample authority for the proposed investigation already rested in the federal departments, and that it would entail an unnecessary inconvenience to business.

Those opposing included Senators Bayard, Delaware; Ball, Delaware; Bingham, Connecticut; Bursum, New Mexico; Butler, Massachusetts; Dale, Vermont; Ernst, Kentucky; Fernald, Maine; Hale, Maine; Keyes, New Hampshire; Means, Colorado; Metcalf, Rhode Island; Moses, New Hampshire; Oddie, Nevada; Phipps, Colorado; Reed, Pennsylvania; Smoot, Utah; Spencer, Missouri; Wadsworth, New York; Warren, Wyoming; Watson, Indiana; Weller, Maryland; and Willis, Ohio, republicans.

DOG TEAMS CARRYING ANTI-TOXIN TO NOME

Anchorage, Alaska, Feb. 9. (By the A. P.)—Dog team relays which started from Nenana, 300 miles north of anchorage yesterday with 480,000 units of anti-toxin for Name, are expected to make the journey in four days, it was reported today. This would better a record set by a special relay which started from Nenana January 27, with 300,000 units of the serum by a day and a quarter. Better equipment was the reason given for the greater speed expected.

The relay which left yesterday is to pick up 50,000 units of anti-toxin at Hot Springs, taken there from Nenana by regular mail horse team. This shipment came from Juneau. Hot Springs is 50 miles northwest of Nenana on the Tan-Ana river.

SOUND AMPLIFIER TESTS PROVE COLLINS IS ALIVE

Declaration Made by Dr. William Hazlett After Amplifier Had Been Attached to Electric Wiring Leading to the Cave-Imprisoned Man's Head—Miners Are Digging a New Entrance to the Cave—A Military Investigation is to be Made of the Situation at Sand Cave Because of Gossip Concerning Rescue Work.

Cave City, Ky., Feb. 9.—(By the A. P.)—As preparations were made late today for a military investigation of the situation at Sand Cave, where Floyd Collins has been entombed since Friday, January 30, miners digging a new entrance to the cave reached approximately the half way point and tests with sound amplifiers indicating that Collins lives, despite his more than ten days entombment, revived hopes that the imprisoned man may yet be rescued alive.

A military court, called by Governor W. J. Fields, will meet tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock to make an inquiry into rescue work done and circumstances surrounding Collins' imprisonment. Brigadier General H. H. Denhardt, who is in command will conduct the inquiry, M. E. S. Posey, general representative of the government, said.

All witnesses available will be heard in an endeavor to get at the bottom of the many rumors and charges that have been current here as the rescue work progressed.

As night settled over the barren county hills, the sappers were digging at around 33 feet. The tests drill had reached a depth of 70 feet when the testing was discontinued for the present. Hard rock had been struck at that depth.

The probability that Collins is alive was given credence late today when Dr. William Hazlett of Chicago, stated that Collins lives and that he is not suffering from pneumonia.

Dr. Hazlett made the statement after the sound amplifier had been attached to the electric wiring leading to the victim's head and a test made.

"The test proved conclusively that Collins was breathing at the rate of 22 to 26 times a minute," said the surgeon. "Normal respiration is 16 times a minute. It is natural that a person gasping for breath or whose vitality had ebbed low would breath faster. Pneumonia patients breathe at the rate of forty times a minute.

"Because of the irregularity of the vibratory sounds I am confident that the noises we heard were made by the electric light bulb raising and lowering with Collins' breathing.

"We tried in various ways to reproduce the same sound and were unsuccessful. The sounds were with clock-like rythm and I am confident it was respiration we heard."

H. T. Carmichael in charge of the sinking of the shaft to Collins said that he had knocked on the wires in the cave with stones and had moved the wires, but received no sound similar to that accepted as Collins' breathing. Dropping of water was tried he said, but did not produce the same effect.

BREWER'S SON SHOT IN FACE BY WOMAN IN NEW YORK

New York, Feb. 9—Shot twice in the face by a woman at the crowded intersection of Forty-Fifth street and Lexington avenue tonight, Christopher Huppel, son of Adolph Huppel, millionaire brewer and real estate dealer was in critical condition in Bellevue hospital.

Madame Kora Spalajkovitch, daughter of the former Servian ambassador to Berlin, and whose name has been linked with that of the younger Huppel before, was seized at the scene of the shooting by police, and later sent for observation to the same hospital that Huppel was taken to.

The names of victim and alleged assailant first were linked together in 1918, when the woman accused Huppel and two doctors of trying to have her confined as insane. She charged that he was moved to his act on her by refusal to marry him.

In January, 1923, she instituted suit against him for $750,000 charging malicious mischief. When it came to trial before Superior Court Justice Mullan, Huppel exhibited several threatening letters bearing Mme. Spalajkovitch's signature.

She admitted on the stand that she had written them.

During the testimony she testified Huppel had repeatedly urged her, during the war, to go to England or France, find employment as a cercain in the embassy and perform spy service for Germany.

TARIFF ON HIDES AS RELIEF TO LIVESTOCK GROWERS

Washington, Feb. 9—Advocating a tariff duty on hides as a relief measure for live stock growers, Representative Hudspeth, democrat, Texas, in the house today charged the republicans in congress with ignoring the recommendations of the president's agricultural commission on this point.

The Texas member, launching an attack particularly at republicans from New England, declared they declined to give protection to farmers through tariff on raw materials, but voted for heavy rates on finished goods.

Cattle growers of the southwest, he said, are facing a crisis which would be greatly relieved if hides were removed from the free list. A duty sufficient to meet cheaper production in other countries would not result in higher shoe prices, he argued, adding that the Dinley act carried a rate for hides, but shoes then were cheaper than after hides had been returned to the free list.

EAST HAMPTON FARMER REFUSES TO PAY TAXES

East Hampton, Conn., Feb. 9—Tax Collector Henry Cordes announced today that he would begin litigation this week against Jacob Rogers for refusal to pay back taxes amounting to $53 which were due April 1, 1924. Rogers has refused to pay the taxes, claiming that the selectmen have not cut the bushes along the road leading to his farm. He claims that the bushes have scratched the paint on his automobile and that the damage has amounted to as much as the taxes he owes the town of Marlborough.

CHINESE MISSIONARY HELD FOR FORGERY

Washington, Feb. 9—Chi Chun Haiang, Yale student and said by the police to be a member of the Chinese educational mission here, was arrested by detectives on warrants sworn out in Connecticut charging forgery of $5,500 in notes.

Notes presented by the Chinese student at the First National Bank at New Haven, Conn., were said by the authorities to have borne the forged signatures of members of the Yale faculty. It was said that Haiang would not fight extradition to Connecticut.

DEVELOPMENTS IN SCANDAL OF ATLANTA PENITENTIARY

Atlanta, Ga., Feb. 9.—(By The A. P.) A story charging bribery in connection with the sale of "soft jobs" at the Atlanta federal penitentiary today was told from the witness stand in United States district court by Father Thomas P. Hayden, former Catholic chaplain at the institution, in the trial of A. E. Sartain and L. J. Fletcher, deposed warden and deputy, respectively, of the prison, and Laurence "Heinie" Rhiel, Columbus, Ohio.

Freely admitting his participation in the alleged conspiracy with Sartain, Fletcher and Rhiel, the priest gave his testimony calmly through a long direct and cross examination, except when he heatedly replied to several questions asked by defense counsel.

After the "rum ring" exposure in Savannah, in 1924, the priest said Fletcher told him that some of the convicted men had offered to pay for several privileges and that the money should be kept from "outsiders."

The next development was a conference in an Atlanta hotel between Graham, Baughn, Willie Haar, C. C. Tuten and Richard Bailey, and himself, the witness related, adding that at this time it was agreed $10,500 would be paid for the "easy" assignments when the persons entered the prison.

Fletcher then instructed Hayden to go to Savannah to get the money the witness testified. Rhiel, who previously had been a guest in the warden's home, accompanied him on the trip, Hayden continued.

During a dinner and a conference at the home of Willie Haar, in Savannah, Hayden testified, Rhiel was given $10,500 and as the two were returning on the train to Atlanta, the Ohio man handed the priest $2,000 as his part of the "sale" money, the witness asserted, relating that he first deposited the fund in an Atlanta bank but later removed it to New York.

Willie Haar, Fred Haar, Carl Haar Baughn, Sam Goldberg, Tuten, and Bailey, convicted in Savannah, all received "soft jobs" and other special privileges after being admitted to the prison, Hayden stated.

Minnie Kessler and Morris Sweetwood, wealthy New York convicted bootleggers at the prison, and George Remus, "Bootlegger King" of Cincinnati, figured little in the testimony, as the court ruled that Hayden at the present stage of the trial could not testify further on the subject.

The priest declared, however, that shortly after Kessler and Sweetwood arrived at the penitentiary in the latter part of 1923, Fletcher asked him to see them and get $5,000 for special privileges.

"Who made you a present of electric range at your quarters at the prison?" Defense Attorney Howard asked on cross examination.

"It wasn't exactly a present," Hayden replied. "Mannie Kessler brought it there while he was with me."

Howard insisted that he intended to show that Hayden constantly received gifts and money from prisoners and that it was only when he "was caught with the goods," and the money in the New York bank that he attempted to connect Sartain, Fletcher and Rhiel with the alleged bribery.

An objection to this question was sustained, as was another by the prosecution relative to questions by the defense in regard to expenditures made by Hayden.

WORK TRAIN DERAILED ON THE VALLEY DIVISION

Hartford, Feb. 9—The locomotive and first car of a work train northbound on the Valley branch of the "New Haven" railroad were derailed and ten men were injured in a collision with a switching engine just south of Warwarme avenue about 5 o'clock tonight. The accident occurred during the heavy fog which hung over the entire city at the time. The injured were removed to their homes in taxicabs and commandeered automobiles. One man, Engineer P. J. Gallagher, of Springfield, was taken to the Hartford hospital.

WILLIMANTIC

NORWICH BULLETIN
Willimantic Office, 771 Main Street
Telephone 1121
Office Hours: 9:30 to 12 m.; 1:30 to 6 p. m.

The regular meeting of the Pastors' union was held Monday afternoon at the First Congregational house, with Rev. Arthur S. Wheelock, host. More than 20 ministers were present from Willimantic and surrounding towns, besides a number of guests. At the business meeting a resolution was passed declaring the Ministers union heartily in favor of the proposed change in the Willimantic city charter introduced some time ago before the house by Representative E. Linn Weatherhead. This bill provides that the police judge shall have the power to appoint the prosecuting attorney from either political party, instead of from the one of which he himself is not a member as at present. Dinner was served at 12 by the women's society of the church, after which the Rev. W. C. Norris spoke from the text "What is Man?" A short discussion followed. Rev. Edward P. Ayer, chaplain of the senate was among the guests.

A meeting of the executive board of the Drama League of Eastern Connecticut was held Monday afternoon at the Y. M. C. A. with every member present. It was decided to place the opening date for the appearance of plays to go on the circuit in April, with the plays selected by each town to be submitted to the board for approval on or before the 25th of this month.

The two-day warm spell was followed by a thick fog which settled over this section Monday and made that automobile driving a rather precarious undertaking. Some drivers kept the lights on their cars lighted during the day to avoid being run into. The ice continued to thaw, and the bare ground was brought to view on most of the highways and city street.

Arthur Greene, 25 of this city, was placed under arrest Monday and will be charged with a series of thefts from the cash register of the Star Lunch conducted by George Brown in the Hanover block, on Union street. Brown reported to the police some time ago that a little over $22 had been taken from his register during a few minutes that he had left the establishment on an errand. Monday and Saturday of last week the register was again rifled. A little sleuth work was then put into play. In the presence of officers Brown marked a number of bills and placed them in the cash register. About 11 o'clock Monday morning Brown left the cart to do some shopping. Officer Laramee kept watch from an establishment across the street. Green was seen to enter during Brown's absence and as he was leaving he was stopped and searched. The marked bills were found in his possession. In addition to these he had about $33. Greene admitted his guilt to Chief McArthur and was locked up to await hearing in the police court this Tuesday) morning. Greene seems to have been afflicted with "taking ways" for some time. On previous occasions he served a sentence in the Connecticut reformatory, Cheshire for securing and making use of a pass book on the Willimantic Trust company. The book belonged to a chum.

The proposed new hotel for Willimantic is to be of strictly modern type, fireproof and four or five floors high. It will contain sixty guest rooms. The exterior will be of pressed brick and the interior of reinforced cement construction with tile or gypsum partitions. On the lower floor there will be two or four stores and a wide lobby, with a coffee shop and a large dining room. A banquet room and ample lounge space will occupy the second floor. The sleeping rooms will be on the remaining floors and will be reached by service and passenger elevators.

In spite of his story that he was not guilty of the charge, Walter Wilk, of 95 Ives street was ordered to pay his wife $15 a week for six months and furnish a bond of $600 for that period, or go to jail for six months for non-support when in the police court Monday morning. Mrs. Wilk said that her husband had failed to provide for her and her two minor children, aged eight and eleven, for the past two months. Questioning by Prosecuting Attorney Harvey, made through Mike Maliga as interpreter, brought out the surprising fact that both Mr. and Mrs. Wilk have handsome bank accounts in local banking institutions. Wilk lost his job a number of months ago and he had started to draw on one of the deposits, a $1,000 investment in postal savings at the post office. Mrs. Wilk alleged that she had a half investment in that deposit and under her own name she had $650 with the Willimantic Trust company. Last Friday Wilk drew out $200 from the postal savings and she then took steps to have hi marreated. When arrested Wilk had $141 on his parson and was partially intoxicated. According to the evidence introduced the Wilks worked and saved for eight years and were well on the road to a real happy life. About a year ago Wilk got into bad company. He began to drink heavily and a few months ago he lost his job at the thread mills. Going from bad to worse, he stopped providing for the family and Mrs. Wilk had to support the household from her weekly pay. Wilk would stay away or days at a time and while she was at work he would come home and cook himsel something to eat. Asked how much she needed to run the house, Mrs. Wilk said that it would amount to little to name a price as her husband would surely not pay it. She preferred to have the court order to keep him away from the house. Finally she agreed upon the sum of $15 a week and Judge Foss then passed sentence. The court took as security for the carrying out of the sentence the postal saving deposit book which Wilk held.

A program of recitations, songs and musical selections followed the repost. The second day of the annual observance Sunday was given over to the interest of the young people.

In their drive to eliminate disturbers who frequent dance halls, especially on Saturday nights, Officers Hardisty and Heinold of the Stafford Springs barracks took into custody Saturday night Cullen Potter of South Coventry, when he attempted to gain admission to the Eagleville dance hall. The man in the ticket office did not deem Potter in suitable condition to join the dancers and he refused to sell the man the ticket for which he called. Potter started a little speech in which he asserted his rights, but he failed to convince the officers, and he was given a ride to the local lockup. Friends furnished a bond for his release Sunday. Monday morning Potter was brought before Justice of the Peace George H. Andrews and, in addition to a warning, a fine of $5 and costs, amounting to $19.60, was imposed and paid.

MAIN STREET MERCHANTS AGAINST PARKING RULE

(Special to the Bulletin)

Willimantic, Feb. 9—Considerable business was taken up and disposed of at the February meeting of the board of aldermen held Monday evening. Acting Mayor George W. Hickey presided and there was a full attendance. The reports of Chief of Police Allan MacArthur, Chief of the Fire Department James J. Tighe and Superintendent of Streets John S. Sullivan were read by City Clerk James S. Donohue. The fifteen minute parking limit on the north side of Main street, between North and Church streets was attacked by about 10 merchants doing business in that locality. The ordinance was branded as unfair and a petition asked for the establishment of a 40 minute limit as an amendment. John T. Meikle and C. Yril Lamoreux appeared as sponsors for this petition. The ordinance committee will take up the matter.

Claims for damages against the city as the result of falls on icy sidewalks were read, from Jennie Morin who sustained a broken leg when she fell on Oak street Feb. 2 and from Mrs. Henry Pageau who suffered a fractured arm in a fall on Bridge street, Jan. 18. A committee investigation was authorized.

One matter which excited discussion was the application of Ex-Chief of Police Edgar W. Richmond to be transferred on the veterans' reserve corps of the police department. Mr. Richmond resigned during the world war to take charge of the employment bureau of the American Thread Company. It is understood that fate dealt harshly with him. Sometime ago he was placed in charge of the gate tenders and still more recently he was removed from that post and named as a night watchman, being required to make 12 nightly trips through the mill. This was breaking down his health and it is said that his resignation is to go into effect this week. His application for a pension has been a subject of discussion since his resignation as chief. Alderman Lewis introduced a resolution requesting the police committee to report on the application and it was voted that that course be followed.

Another matter of interest was the declaration of an increase in the weekly salaries of the permanent members of the fire department of from $28 to $30 thereby placing them on the same basis as the police officers. Assistant Lieut. Roger Inglis received additional compensation of $1.75 per week. This increase has but slight effect on the payroll of the department there being but seven members to share the total weekly increase of $15.75. A resolution introduced by Alderman Buck giving the Acting Mayor authority to borrow the sum of $10,000 to defray current expenses was adopted as was also a resolution by Alderman Larramee giving the purchasing committee power to secure the necessary amount of road oil for the coming summer.

Another resolution adopted was to reimburse Fred T. Davoll $15.62 as a rebate on disputed taxes and Mr. Rosenberg $1.10 as a rebate for a tax on a piano which he never owned. Alderman Lee asked for some words relative to the belated report regarding the acceptance of construction of Chapman street and of the street lighting committee, the latter being in reference to better street lighting. Progress is being made on both of these matters. The community hotel corporation was given authority to place a sign advertising the proposition on the foot bridge abutments on Railroad street for a period of one month. Adjournment was taken at 9.15 o'clock.

Corporation Counsel Thomas J. Kelly has returned after from a months' trip to South America and Panama, the trip being his first vacation in many years.

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

It is probable that two men may be considered as being responsible for a burglary that netted the responsible parties two suits, two overcoats, some underwear and other things, from the stock of M. Goldwater in the Davis block. The loss, as far as a checkup on Monday indicated, is about $200.

Entrance to the building was gained some time during the early hours of Sunday morning. A small basement window over the coal bin was forced open, entrance to the cellar gained and that put the men into a position to cut through a door leading into the store.

A section of cloth from an old umbrella was used to make a black shade for a light burning in the store, while basement windows in the front of the building were blocked up with card board.

It is thought that the men worked leisurely and that they must have been in the store for some time. The rear door of the store, through which the burglars passed out when they were through with their plundering, was found locked when Officer John Gilbert made his final rounds for latching at 4 o'clock Sunday morning.

It has come to the attention of the police that an effort also was made during the early hours of Sunday morning to force a way into the Shumway Clothing company store, next to the Attawaugan hotel. The same method that was successfully used in getting into the cellar of the Davis block to loot the Goldwater store, failed at the Shumway store, because a soil pipe leads down past a basement window, making it impossible for anyone to enter that way. Likewise and effort to cut through a back door to get at a lock securing it failed.

Chief John McFarland has spent some time checking up the break and the attempted break. Up to Monday afternoon there were no developments in the case that would indicate that arrests are imminent, though the officer has certain information that may later prove of value.

A fog that must have made those here who have been in the capital of the British empire on such a day think of dear old London enveloped all of this territory Monday. The fog began to shut in shortly after 12 o'clock on Sunday night. It persisted through all of Monday, a happening that is very unusual in this section of New England. Sunday morning was foggy, but it burned off early in the forenoon. A repetition of this experience was looked for Monday, but there was no such luck. The fog compensated in a degree for the discomfort it caused by eating away at the ice that has covered the borough's streets and walks for so long and doing as much to rid the community of it as warm sunshine might have done.

William F. Eaton, Philip E. Kesch, Arthur W. Logee, Franklin D. Crosby, Miss Marjorie I. Gaffney, Miss Lucile E. Caron, Miss Antoinette LaBonte and Miss Frances Tillinghast make up the cast of a comedy drama, Take My Advice, that is in rehearsal in the interest of the Service Battery. The scenes of the play are set in a newspaper office.

What may be a spurious appeal for funds represented as being for a spiritual cause is coming through the mails to residents of this town. New York, most chaste of all the cities, is the source from which the appeal issues. The letters are of such a nature as to make a careful observer at least suspicious and for that reason it would appear well for the generously inclined to reject their appeal.

Out of his weather records of many years Judge James N. Tucker, of East Killingly, has unearthed an entry relative to such an unusually bright and warm winter day as that of Sunday. The date was January 31, 1906. On that day the mercury ran up as high as 70 degrees as far north as the White Mountains, touched points in the 60's in central New England and it was so warm in Boston and vicinity that many went to the beaches for bathing merely for the novelty of the thing. Here in Killingly the maximum temperature reading was 58 degrees. At points in the far western United States on the same day temperatures down to 2 degrees above zero were reported. On Sunday in Danielson some thermometers ran up to 62 degrees.

Progress is being made on the construction of the Longo block in lower Main street. Masons have been at work on the side and rear walls of the structure and have raised them to a considerable height. Weather permitting, the brick work will be completed with a few weeks.

Killingly men who hold Rhode Island fishing licenses in a number of cases made the most of their privilege of going over into that state during the mild weather at the week end to fish through the ice. Connecticut's closed season on pickerel began on February 1.

Anxious et be among those who have done something for the erection of the cathedral of St. John the Divine, numbers here have sent small contributions to the $15,000,000 building fund being accumulated in New York.

An envelope containing $1.65 that was left on the steps of a Mechanic street house for the milkman to collect Monday morning was taken before he arrived. A little while later William A. Graves found the envelope, empty, down the street. Evidently some uninvited visitors get around rather early in the morning.

As an extra precaution against accidents, numbers of motorists ran through the heavy fog that prevailed here all day Monday with the headlights on their machines burning.

Many found to their surprise that a much better view of Sunday's eclipse of the moon was possible here than they had expected. Hundreds watched the shadow of the earth as it obscured a large portion of the moon's area.

Ice on many walks that have been slippery for a fortnight was cleared away by the fog of Monday, which was rather unusual sort of the day for this section of the country.

So frequent have been the appearances here of some men that want a night lodging that Chief John McFarland has found it necessary to warn them that he will hold them for vagrancy and recommend that they receive suitable jail sentences.

A COUGH REMEDY WITHOUT OPIATES

Many cough preparations contain some one or more harmful drugs which are added to take the place of opiates. None of these narcotic substitutes have ever been used in Foley's Honey and Tar Compound. The name of every ingredient is plainly printed on every carton. You know what you are taking when you take Foley's. It clings to the throat. Good for old and young. You have a cough, why not try it? JEWETT CITY

The first in the series of Young Peoples' meetings to be held this week in the Baptist church was a union young peoples' meeting held at 5.45, Sunday evening. Winifred Scates, as the leader from the Baptist church presided. The subject was Christ a Blessing to Young People. After the devotional exercises Ethelle Parkhurst, a leader from the Congregational church announced their subject to be Christ a Blessing to Young People as an example called upon Doris Johnson, an Intermediate member and Mrs. F. E. Robinson and Mrs. E. H. Hiscox senior members of the Christian Endeavor Society. Each gave short talks, Evelyn Johnson sang Face to Face. David Carter, leader for the Epworth League gave their subject as Christ a Blessing to Young People as their Master. Arlene Burdick read a poem, and Irving Thornton spoke on the subject. Mrs. Irving Thornton and Mrs. Mary Howes sang the duet, I do not Ask. The subject for the Baptist Society was Christ a Blessing to Young People as their Friend, Winifred Scates being the speaker. Mabel and Esther Frink sang the duet, Day is Dying in the West. Ellen Prior and David Carter were the accompanists. After a brief address by the minister the meeting closed with the Mizpah benediction. Sixty-one were present at this service.

At seven o'clock a union service was held in the church auditorium conducted by the pastor, Rev. E. E. Scates. Rev. J. W. Payne conducted the responsive reading, Rev. A. H. Clement read the scripture, Rev. G. K. Gray offered prayer and Rev. J. W. Carter introduced the speaker, Emil Hohenthal of South Manchester. A chorus choir composed of five members with the leaders of the choirs from each church, sang Brightly Gleams the Banner, by R. M. Stults, Sadie Thompson, singing a soprano solo, Ellen Prior being organist. Mr. Scates read a letter from the Anti-Saloon League superintendent concerning the proposed amendment to the present enforcement law, which the congregation voted to authorize the pastors of the churches to sign. The speaker of the evening is one of the most prominent men in the temperance line in Connecticut, and has recently visited foreign countries in the interests of prohibition. His address was full of facts and statistics showing his belief of the growing benefit resulting from the Volstead act. He cited the increased attendance at schools and colleges, Thrift Saving among children and claimed that in years of "wet and dry" these conditions would fluctuate. He cited the great increase in the use of milk, loan and building associations, increased business, in bank deposits, purchase of motor vehicles, of which latter he said there were more than there are telephones in the country. He quoted Abraham Lincoln's words concerning keeping the law and said that not only was observance and enforcement of the law needed in the liquor question, but in other phases, of conditions in the country, mentioning the crying need of beter parental authority and better observance of motor vehicle laws. Disregard of any law is tending toward lowering the moral tone of the country. There were one hundred and twenty-four present at this service.

Monday afternoon, Captain E. W. Wilbur, of Norwich, from the Salvation Army Headquarters addressed a company of boys and girls in the vestry of the church. He was accompanied by Mr. Beebe, who sang and played the piano, Emory Campbell playing the tambourine. The children greatly enjoyed the service.

Harry Levine is going out of business. Stock, groceries, dry goods must be sold beginning Feb. 12. Lowest prices guarantee of save customers from 40 to 50 cents on dollar.—adv.

Emil L. G. Hohenthal, during his lecture Sunday evening said that there are twice as many motor vehicles as there are telephones. This statement of facts, unsubstantiated by figures, serves to suggest the unusual speed of other local fancies. It is almost necessary to go into the realm of fable to find a parallel to the rapid growth of the radio interests in this section. Since the beanstalk of Jack the Giant killer shot into the skies, few developments have been locally at the same time so marvelous and so rapid.

A little over four years ago, James Keen made a little crystal set at his home just south of the borough line. There was not much broadcasting then and he could get out little, except that when the trolley cars passed the lower Tadpole crossing, near the Burnt Mill, his machine let him know about it.

A. A. Young and A. L. Stebbins had fine sets about a year later. Today there are close to 80 outfits here of varying values in daily operation, with a total worth of probably not far from $10,000.

Mrs. Fred L. Tipton, who lives at the fort of Reservoir mountain on Stone Hill has it all over anything as yet reported in the line of harbingers of spring. Sunday evening, while Mr. and Mrs. Tipton were sitting by their fireside reading, an unusual sound brought them to the yard outside the door. Coming from the darkness overhead, they made out the sound of distant honkings of an evidently large flock of geese, bound north. First of the season Feb. 8th, gives to her credit Mrs. Tipton also gets the blue ribbon for finely opened pussy willows picked Saturday.

Saturday evening, the seventh day of February has gone on record as being the day when Greek met Greek in a three-string bowling contest.

It only becomes necessary to gaze upon the names of the contestants in this remarkable match to understand the stupendous score. Thomas Barnett and William Dealtrey, styled as the Hamburgs, on the one side vs. Homer Gagnon and Edmund Jodoin, answering to the carefully selected title of Hot Dogs, as their opponents.

A large gallery cheered their favorites on, chalk dust fell like snow about the score keeper, as he recorded the tremendous pin-fall. When the atmosphere cleared and records computed the score was found to be:

Dealtrey is an old timer and was expected to get the leading score. Barnett is shy one toe and it bothers him to hold to the floor, Gagnon hated to beat the boss, the same being street commissioner also, but he had to do it. Jodoin's arm was lame from cutting hamburg all day to supply the lunch cart. Another contest is seen in the offing with no quarter asked or given.

Few can remember when a fog so damp and impenetrable has settled on this section. From nine until eleven Monday forenoon, one hundred yards was the limit of vision. Automobile drivers preceeded with caution familiar objects took on strange shapes, while from Ashland street, near the A. A. Young greenhouses, not a trace of the big mill at the foot of the street, could be made out. And this at near midday.

It reminded several automobile parties of a memorable trip recently when it consumed two hours to drive from Danielson to Jewett City. Shortly after sundown the fog which had thinned perceptibly during the afternoon shut down again thicker than ever. Late in the evening travel over the state thoroughfare had almost ceased. Headlights were useless and only business of importance caused drivers to take the risk of running in the fog.

Very Reverend Michael McCabe Council Knights of Columbus has perfected plans for a public lecture, to be given Feb. 16th in the Finn opera house by Rev. G. J. Donahue of Pomfret, Conn. The topic is, Friendship. Those who have listened to this address elsewhere, declare it to be a masterpiece.

In Monday's Bulletin, Mildred Kinne, aged 12, of Voluntown, had a very interesting nature letter written to her Dear Uncle Jed. A local bird observer asks The Bulletin to answer her inquiry in these columns, and tell the little miss, that her strange bird which she described so accurately, was Mr. Horned Lark.

PLAINFIELD

A heavy fog enveloped the town on Monday, making travel dangerous. A person could only see ten feet ahead.

Many of the townspeople witnessed the eclipse of the moon Sunday night.

A birthday party was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry LaMotte Monday night, for their daughter Beatrice, who was 14. Many of her school friends were present. Games were played and sandwiches, cake, ice cream and cocoa were served.

A good crowd turned out to attend the Congregational church entertainment at the Community House Monday night.

COLUMBIA

Another class in dressmaking was conducted Thursday by Miss Mason of the extension department of the State Agricultural college at Storrs, held at Yeomans' hall. The meeting was a continuation of one held here two weeks ago and was attended by about 25 women, cutting and making making dresses with expert advice.

During the past week when the roads were very slippery employes of the state highway department were spreading sand on the road from Columbia to Hebron.

Because of the recent extremely cold weather it has been necessary to drive the fires, which has resulted in two chimney fires on the Green, one at the parsonage, where the soot in the chimney was burning for two days before it was extinguished, the other being the chimney in H. W. Porter's store, which was extinguished immediately by the use of a powder manufactured for that purpose and which was on hand. No damage in either case was reported.

Miss Madelene Holmes, who was successfully operated upon at the Hartford hospital last week for appendicitis, has improved sufficiently so that she is now able to sit up.

A whist party attended by 35 persons was held at Yeomans' hall Friday evening by the Columbia Improvement society, netting them $13.60, which will be used by the society in further improvements to the Green. During the past year the society spent a large amount in grading the Green and in laying cement walks. John Demiska and Miss Lillian Lyman had the highest scores in the game. Donations of cake and candy contributed by the members of the society were sold at auction at the close of the playing. One beautiful jar filled with chocolates, donated by Clinton Lewis, which netted $4.30, was awarded Mrs. Harvey Collins.

Miss Esther Granstrom, a former teacher of the West street school, now teaching in Coventry, spent the week end in town as guest of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Cobb.

BUILDING OPERATIONS IN NORWICH

Good progress has been made on local building projects during the past week especially during the last few days of the week when the weather was extremely mild. Many of the contractors have taken advantage of the warm weather to do cement work and considerable progress has been made in this work.

At the Norwich State Hospital where the H. Wales Lines Co. of Meriden has been erecting a new ward building and a new nurses' home work is fast nearing completion. In the ward building the construction work has been completed and the floor coverings are now being laid. This building will be ready for occupation within the next week or so. The nurses' home is not so far advanced and it will be another month before the building will be ready for use. Here the work is mostly on the interior finish, the exterior having been completed some time ago. Another building is to be erected at the State Hospital provided the appropriation asked of the legislature goes through. The H. Wales Lines Co. had the contract for all three buildings but were able to build only two as the appropriation granted last year was not large enough to cover the cost of the third building.

The work on the Sellas block on Franklin square progresses with marked rapidity and it is expected that, barring unlooked for delays, the building will be completed by the last of next month. Contractor Sweeney is rushing the work along and three walls have been raised to the fourth story.

In other parts of the city there is considerable building being done. On Mechanic street one house has just been completed and the cellar and foundation for another has been put in. The several houses being erected in the East Great Plain section of the city are well along and will be completed within a short time.

In Norwich Town several houses are being erected and are in the various stages of construction.

NEW LONDON

Plans are being prepared for the residence on Montauk avenue for Alfred W. Stone, Bellevue place. The house will be 28x42 feet, of frame construction, containing seven rooms and sun porch. There will be steam heat, tile baths, oak trim and other conveniences.

The contract for fencing at Walbach and Smith streets, Williams Memorial Park, the Old Town Mill lot, and two sections at Lake Konomoc, has been awarded. The bids for the various sections of fencing amounted to a total of $6,222.

The permit has been issued to H. R. Griswold, 181 Connecticut avenue, for a dwelling on Ledyard street to cost $8,500. The proposed house will be 36x42 feet of frame construction. It will be arranged for two families with all modern conveniences.

The frame is being started for the house for Maude Prentice on Nameaug avenue. The building will contain four apartments. Mr. Prentice is finishing the house at the corner of Ledyard and Bayonet streets for Charles Smith.

READ ESTATE SALES AND MORTGAGE LOANS

There were 14 sales of real estate in Norwich during the past week as compared to 13 sales for the corresponding week in 1924. The mortgage loans for the respective weeks were $53,500 and $37,800.

In New London during the past week there were 6 sales of real estate, four less than for the same week a year ago. The mortgage loans for the respective weeks were $102,750 and $44,350.

The State Building Permits

Weather conditions of the week are reflected in the report of building permits issued in the current week, but 6 having been reported in the Commercial Record for buildings costing $320,542. These figures compare with 167 permits granted in the like week of 1924, when the cost of buildings was $660,495, and 59 permits in 1923 for buildings costing $183,315.

NORWICH TOWN

The attendance at the First Congregational Young People's Christian Endeavor service Sunday evening, was considered by several the largest during the contest. There were 76 visitors, which with the regular members attending, filled the Sunday school room to the chapel. The reds had 43 visitors and the whites 35, the best showing thus far for the contestants.

The C. E. contest closes next Sunday evening, when a very fine programme is to be given in the church auditorium at 7:30 at which it is expected a large delegation from the several societies of Norwich Christians Endeavor union, will be guests. Miss Ruth Seabury of Boston is to be the speaker.

Rev. A. Norwood Foster, pastor of the Church of the Good Shepherd, Universalist, preached at the Sunday morning worship at the First Congregational church, in exchange with the regular pastor, Rev. Gurdon F. Bailey.

A special feature was the fine singing by the choir of seven voices, five young women and two men, under direction of Organist William Huber. Rev. Mr. Foster was accompanied by his church choir, as was also Rev. Mr. Bailey.

Mr. Foster expressed his warm appreciation toward Rev. Mr. Bailey for the courtesy tendered him in inviting him to exchange pastorates.

The text of the morning sermon was Matthew 13-16, Blessed are your eyes, for they see.

Following the church service, a programme on Abraham Lincoln (a friend of man) was given by the Sunday school.

The mid-week prayer service of the Congregational church on Thursday evening, will have for its theme, What Do I Believe About the Future Life? John 14:1-14.

At the First Methodist Episcopal church, the pastor, Rev. James B. Aldrich used for his theme at the Sunday morning worship, Christ Shrinking from the Cup. The text referred to was Matthew 26:39. And He went a little further and fell on His face, and prayer, saying, O my Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from Me; nevertheless, not as I will, but as Thou wilt. Special reference bearing on the lines, let this cup pass from Me.

In his evening sermon, Rev. Mr. Aldrich preached on The Four Gospels, giving a history of the writers, their object in writing, and who they wrote to.

The Young People's Christian Endeavor service which preceded the evening sermon was in charge of Miss Florence M. Bennett, who treated the topic, The Conquest of Selfishness. Romans 15:1-7. Matthew 16:22-27.

Rev. James B. Aldrich was in Norwich Monday afternoon, attending the two days' session of the Norwich district Ministerial Association, of the New England Southern conference and will attend the meeting today, Tuesday.

NORWICH DOINGS 75 YEARS AGO

Fire Company No. 2, dedicated their new hall on Union street 75 years ago. During the same week it was learned that elections had taken place in California, and that the state constitution had been adapted by a vote of 12,000 to 8,000.

Items of interest in 1850 taken in part from the Courier of that year are as follows:

Tuesday, February 3, 1850 — Fire company No. 2 had a first rate time one evening last week in dedicating their new engine house on Union street. They came out early in the evening in firemen's dress, with their beautiful engine and passed in torch light procession and with enlivening music, presenting a spectacle highly picturesque and beautiful. The torch light parade brought up at the engine house which was brilliantly illuminated and the company, together with guests, sat down to a spread in the hall.

Co., held at the telegraph office in New London, Wednesday, it was voted that a dividend of 45 cents on each share be declared to the holders of stock on that day. The company is now owner of 72 shares in the New York and Boston Telegraph company valued at $75 a share. The present par value of the stock of the local company is about nine dollars per share, on which a semi-annual dividend of five per cent. has been declared. The notice of the dividend was signed by Henry P. Havens, president and Thomas Robinson, treasurer.

Saturday, February 9, 1850—Alderman Huntington presided over the meeting of the common council held February 8th. Common councilmen present were Messrs. Prentice, Brackenridge, Tucker, Moore, Ridgway and Webb. A communication from S. B. Meech, one of the selectmen, relative to the funds of the Mohegan Turnpike association, was read and referred to the city attorney. It was voted that residents of Washington street between the dwelling houses of Aaron Martin and John A. Robinson be directed to put up a good and substantial fence on the inside of the walk adjoining their premises. A petition for the enlargement of the station house on the West Side was referred to the fire committee, Z. R. Robbins, David Young and A. F. Gilman were appointed assessors for the year 1850.

Latest reports from California tell of two large fires in which over 70 buildings were destroyed, the loss being over $1,500,000. The same report informs us that the state constitution had been accepted by a vote of 12,000 to 8,000. The state ticket elected is headed by Peter H. Burnett, governor, while John C. Fremont and William M. Gwyn were elected U. S. senators.

ENDEAVORING TO RECOVER BODIES OF JAPANESE

Vancouver, B. C., Feb. 9.—Divers made repeated efforts here today to recover the bodies of nine of 11 seamen of the Japanese navy who lost their lives Saturday night when a launch in which they were riding collided with a tug in the harbor here. Seven were rescued immediately by 55 men who were riding in a cutter in tow of the Pinnace, but two of those drawn from the water died of injuries.

Vice Admiral Saburo Hyakutake, commander of the visiting squadron, announced that an entertainment program arranged for the Japanese sailors would be carried out. An investigation will be started, he said.

WOULD PROTECT DOCTRINES OF PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

New York, Feb. 9.—"Both the historic polity and the blood-bought doctrines of the Presbyterian church are in danger," Dr. Charles Edward McCartney of Philadelphia, moderator of the Presbyterian General Assembly, told the Princeton Theological Seminary Alumni, in annual session at the Yale club today.

He pleaded that the church remain steadfast to its fundamental doctrines, and urged that its pulpits be kept free from preachers of modernism, "religious adventurers and theological freebotters."

"The Presbyterian church believes," he said, "that men should be as free to teach as the winds to blow. But it also believes it has the right to say what doctrines must be taught and preached and believed by ministers who stand in Presbyterian pulpits under Presbyterian orders.

"If man can be received in the Presbyteries of the church and installed in the pulpits of our congregations without whole heartedly accepting doctries which the church has repeatedly declared must be held by all of its ministers, then the creed becomes a scrap of paper.

"To receive men into the ministry of the church who disavow doctrines of the church is to defy the government of the church. Instances where this has been done are not lacking, and protests and complaints against such action will be made to the highest court, the general assembly.

"Nothing would please destructive liberalism and modernism so much as to see the Presbyterian church tamely submit to affont or disobedience on the part of any one of its constituent Presbyteries or congregations, for such acquisence would mean that the Presbyterian church had hung out the batter "All Welcome," to every kind of religious adventurer and theological freebotter.

"Preachers who are tossed about with every wind of doctrine may interest the people but can lead them nowhere."

THE CLOSING CONGRESS.

One of the questions now is whether the present congress will endeavor to wind up its activities in as favorable a manner as possible or whether it will keep the brakes on until the last moment and block the passage of many worthy measures.

It is the short session but the time that remains for action is exceedingly short. With three weeks left in which to act there is little wonder that the leaders are doubtful about the passage of all business scheduled. Such use has not been made of the time since the first of last December to make a record of accomplishment. The start was a good one, but there have been those who have insisted upon having things their own way or they would prevent anything else from being done.

The business that has not been reached includes a number of appropriation bills. It is fair to presume that those will be acted upon, but the fate of the other legislation is as uncertain as the weather. It is a time when few predictions are being made. Such an attitude concerning what this congress will do is thoroughly justified. But what it ought to do is another and entirely different matter.

Congress has been doing a lot of talking. That's to be expected, but also something in addition. That is the trouble with that Isle of Pines treaty which has been hanging fire for over 20 years and is not going to be acted upon now because there hasn't been talk enough concerning it.

Muscle Shoals is another matter about which there has been much talk, some progress from time to time, but there's no assurance that it will be made ready for presidential action. Departmental and supply bills should be assured, but on those action has not been completed, while the old practice of attaching riders leaves the Cape Cod canal bill in the position of an anchored vessel.

If there was reason for delay in dealing with legislative business there would be nothing thought of it, but when hours and hours and hours are spent by a mere handful in trying to block presidential nominations there can be little sentiment in favor of the tactics employed. Congress knows that it has been tested and found wanting, but it would naturally be expected that it would be anxious to mend its ways.

BATTLESHIP VS. AIRPLANE.

There has never been any question but what General Mitchell has full confidence in the ability of the fighting airplane. He has repeatedly set forth his faith in the importance of that branch of the national defense, and he hasn't modified it in the least in his recent statements. That he will ever abandon the stand that he takes, to the effect that the airplane has sounded the doom of the battleship, seems highly improbable. He is convinced, and doubtless has convinced others, but it doesn't appear that he has caused the navy department to swallow his views completely.

While his enthusiasm leads him to rate the battleship as obsolete and to maintain that it is at the mercy of an airplane, there are those who are rated as experts, who do not belittle the importance of the flying machine in time of war, but who are not willing to concede that the supremacy of the airplane is such that battleship construction should be stopped.

This is one of the instances where doctors disagree, which of course places the matter beyond the province of the layman. It is a time to have it thoroughly determined, however, whether claims are based upon actual facts or whether they are due to over enthusiasm. Thus when General Mitchell is called upon to produce the facts it either should be just the opportunity that he wants or it should provide the chance for those he is opposing to pick holes in his claims.

The importance of the airplane, and the fact that it can be expected to continue to grow in importance in connection with our national defense, cannot be hidden. No attempt is being made to do so by the navy department. The seriousness of the problem can be realized when it is understood that those responsible for the national defense cannot be expected to cast aside the most powerful units of the present first line of defense until it is established beyond a doubt that an air fleet can actually replace it, to say nothing of being more effective in its protection.

NEW YORK TRANSIT.

New York has many troubles. Some of them are political and it may be some of them are imaginary, but when it comes to its transportation problems there is no doubt but what they are real.

It is a big task taking care of the transportation requirements of a community of that size, but it cannot be overlooked that the need is for keeping up with the growth and the demand rather than stalling in the face of increasing requirements. For a long time efforts have been made to relieve the transit situation and a transit commission was named for this purpose. Obstacles were thrown in its way and the efforts have resulted in the provision of new transportation lines and the construction of needed subways. New York has been frightfully inconvenienced, but it has obtained no relief.

Mayor Hylan of that city has blamed the commission and tried to have the members removed. The commission has blamed him and the board of estimate which he dominates. Between the cross fire of charges nothing was done. Now comes the report of the special investigator, Justice McAvoy, who puts his finger on Mayor Hylan and says that his refusals and the refusals of other members of the board of estimate to validate new routes and approve contracts "completely frustrated provision for increased transit facilities."

Under claim of fighting the "interests" the mayor has been refusing to relieve conditions over which the public has been making such a long and frightful howl. He may now claim the report favors the "interests" and keep up his opposition to subway construction, but when a matter affects the public so vitally as that does and it finds its needs so ruthlessly cast aside there would be but one course expected from a disgusted public when election day rolls around. In fact it can be expected to express itself so clearly before that time that there will be no chance of being called upon to support the present city administration.

VILLAGE FIRE PROTECTION.

In days gone by about the only protection in the way of fire fighting apparatus for the small communities have been the antiquated hand pumping engines and the bucket brigades. But times have changed. While there has been a decided improvement in the fire fighting facilities of cities, the same advantages to a certain degree are available for the outlying communities.

The country village may not be able to maintain a paid fire department, and it may not have a water system from which a fire department might obtain the needed water, but it is possible for it to purchase and get the benefit of motor driven pumping engines, or chemical engines, and thus provide effective means of checking fires.

The chances for pumpers to work depend upon the conditions of a community. If it is favored with an adequate stream of water this is entirely feasible within a certain radius, while chemical apparatus which can be gotten to the fire soon after discovery can do most effective work.

The outlay for such apparatus when the service it can render is taken into consideration, is not prohibitive. These are the days when fires mean large losses, and the expense of maintaining fire fighting apparatus is far preferable to doing nothing and failing to prevent residential or factory property from going up in smoke. The chance to show greater independence and at the same time provide greater protection has stood out much more strongly since the coming of the auto apparatus. Prevention works best up to the time of a fire, and then something else is required.

THOMAS W. LAWSON.

For some time because of a period of ill health the name of Thomas W. Lawson has not been as conspicuous as it was in years previous. He was a doer of the unusual and that was what was expected of him. He was a man who amassed much wealth and as quickly lost it, and while his sickness found him with depleted funds he never abandoned hope of recouping his losses.

Thomas W. Lawson was a plunger. It made little difference what he undertook it was invariably on a most elaborate scale. He was a politician at times, a copper magnate, a horseman, a yachtsman and a writer of books and in all of these lines he attracted widespread attention. Likewise he had a large following and none gave greater consideration to the value of printer's ink in getting his views before the public.

Optimism was possessed by him in unlimited quantity, and he had the faculty of conveying it to others regardless of the ups and downs of his career. He was as likely to be posing as a plunger one day and a reformer the next, and he never lost confidence in his belief that the public was waiting for his views and was expecting to be guided by them.

His career was a most unusual one. It was so difficult to tell what his next move would be, or whether his course would cause him to land on his feet or his head, that it was hard to place a value on such a combination of opposites. Nevertheless he had many followers and many friends.

WASHINGTON AFFAIRS

(Special to The Bulletin)

Washington, D. C., Feb. 9.—"Just what position do members of congress occupy, and what are their duties and obligations between the time of their election in November to the convening of a new congress?" It is a question often asked.

From the date of their election to the following 4th of March, they are members-elect; they have no obligations and their special privileges are admission to the floor of the house and the use of the franking privilege. Their obligations may be summed up in the one word "none."

Moreover, quite contrary to popular opinion, they have no official obligations, as members of congress, from the 4th of March until they take their oath at the convening of the next congress, whether it be an extra session, or the regular session that convenes the first Monday of the following December.

Their salary and their privileges of full membership begin at noon March 4th regardless of the date they take their oath thereafter, and they cannot take oath until the congress convenes.

Moreover, the status, technically, of a member of the house who is re-elected, and a member elected for the first time, is absolutely the same. The oath of a member expires with his term of office—so all must stand on the same footing, so far as obligation goes, at the opening of a new congress. To be sure the re-elected member has great advantage in knowing the ropes; in assignment of committees and offices, but that is courtesy and custom, not written in the Constitution.

The office changes on the 4th of March every second year, a re-elected member holds office under his old appointment till then, but his status as an incoming member of the next congress, is as if he never had served.

And what about the time between March 4th and the convening of a new congress in December? How can a man perform his congressional duties until he has taken his oath? He cannot perform any constitutional duties till he takes his official oath after congress convenes.

But in the interim between March 4th, when he technically becomes a member, and the convening of the session, a member of the house has no constitutional duty to perform.

Under the Constitution he represents a certain state in congress, and under the Constitution the duty of the house pertains to national legislation, as befits the legislative branch of the government. The thousand and one matters a member of congress attends to for his constituents personally are a mere matter of courtesy on his part and in no sense a part of this congressional or constitutional duty. He has grown to be the special pleader, the friend at court and the messenger boy for his two hundred and more constituents, but that is by custom, and not by obligation.

When he has done his part in framing bills, voting and "representing his state in the house" he has fulfilled his obligation as a member of congress. All the rest is friendly interest and courtesy to the people of the state who sent him to represent them in congress.

Talking with Tyler Page, clerk of the house, your correspondent learned many things about the taking of the oath. A member of congress must take his oath before the speaker of the house. The only exception is when through illness, a member is unable to appear, the house may vote to authorize the speaker to designate some notary public to take the oath at the bedside of the sick man. In several instances there are records of Speaker Reed going to the sick member, and administering the oath in person. An oath taken except before the speaker after congress convenes, or duly authorized by the house, as in the instance cited above, would be entirely ineffective and not recognized or recorded. As the speaker is a member of congress elected at the same time as other members he is not qualified to administer oaths until he, himself, has had the oath administered to him, by the clerk of the house, whose authority holds over from congress to congress, in order that he may call the house to order and administer the oath to the speaker as soon as that official is elected to the position by the assembled house.

While technically a member of congress has no duty to perform before he takes the oath, or between session, he is in reality overcrowded with work that comes under the "courtesy" phase of the situation. He needs that franking privilege, for thousands of letters on congressional matters must be answered; he needs a secretary, he must watch out for his office room and equipment; he is no idler, whether re-elected or a new man on the job. Moreover he gets in close touch with the needs of his state and district, if he is a re-elected member, his office force keeps up the established routine; if he is a new member, he must organize an office force, and get ready for business, but that is preparatory and congressional obligations and duties, in a strictly technical sense, wait on the fall of the gavel when the incoming congress convenes.

Senator Hiram Bingham made his maiden speech in the senate a few days ago. It was short and entirely impromptu and came about when Swanson of Virginia argued certain steps be advocated in the good roads bill, stating among other things that "the government never interfered with the states in such work." Then Bingham rose to his feet and remarked that the experience of Connecticut did not carry out that argument. "Connecticut," said he, "has always been interested in the doctrine of states rights and state sovereignty, and has maintained it from the beginning up to the present time. "Mr. Bingham then cited instances where "in the state of Connecticut we enjoy the benefit of federal aid roads, yet questions have repeatedly arisen on account of federal engineers in Washington dictating to us how our roads should be built and where they should go." Senator Bingham opposed certain additions to the proposed bill on the ground that it was giving too much power to federal government and taking away states' rights.

Lively hearings took place before the house judiciary committee on the two successive days when the so-called equal rights bill came up. The first day the advocates of the measure testified that women were suffering from the unjust discrimination; on the second day women opposed to the measure testified that women would suffer if the bill was passed, as they would, under its terms, lose all the special rights now allowed for their benefit. Among those protesting against the measure was Miss Katherine Ludington of Connecticut, treasurer of the national league of woman voters.

During the short time Governor and Mrs. Trumbull were in Washington they saw much of its social life and received many attentions from the Connecticut delegation. They were guests at the white house reception given by the president in honor of congress, were dinner guests of Senator Pepper of Pennsylvania, Senator and Mrs. Bingham also being among the guests; Congressman and Mrs. Fenn gave a luncheon for them and Senator Bingham and Congressman Tilson took the governor on the floor of senate and house where he met a number of the most prominent senators and members of the house.

Congressman John Q. Tilson, who is probably to be the next republican floor leader of the house, owns a summer home up on the banks of Lake Sunapee, New Hampshire. The New Hampshire Society of Washington has just informally notified Colonel Tilson that he may regard himself as an adopted son of the Granite state, and in that capacity will be expected to take part in the entertainments given by that organization when Governor Winant and his staff come down to attend the inauguration. First Postmaster General John H. Bartlett of New Hampshire is the president of the club and a warm personal friend of Tilson.

Congressman Winslow of Massachusetts, chairman of the interstate and foreign commerce committee, has recently appeared before the house committee on education urging that the study of the Constitution be made a part of the study course of every public school in the country. "It should be studied in every school from kindergarten to college" says Winslow. A knowledge of the Constitution is fundamental to good citizenship, and a deplorable lack of such knowledge exists."

THE PRICE SHE PAID

"That's a pretty new frock, Gertrude," remarked young Mrs. Evan's mother as the two women were awaiting their respective husbands to join them at a little family dinner. "Where did you pick it up?"

"Pick it up?" Why mother, doesn't it look like a Nanine creation?"

"To be perfectly frank with you, my dear, it doesn't."

"Well, it isn't, mother. The truth is I haven't had a Nanine costume since the ones father paid for in my trousseau, though I'm always saying to Harold that I wish I could wear her things all the time, and he has told me over and over again to have her make me what he calls an outfit any time I like. Of course, I won't do it, not for a long while yet, anyway. I am not going to waste the money he works so hard for on Nanine. But I'm glad you like this frock, mother. Hal is wild over it. He thinks it is a Nanine!"

"Why, Gertrude, what do you mean?"

"I mean that I, the faithful, devoted wife of Harold Evan, have been wantonly deceiving him."

"Why are you deceiving that dear boy?"

"Well, mother, that dear boy has grown strangely indifferent, or at least seemingly so, to my appearance of late. If I put on something new for him to admire and told him that I had got it at a tremendous bargain at Hinckle's or anywhere else, he just looked at it casually, and said it was all right, he guessed, and then if I inquired if it were becoming he would say, 'Why, yes, of course you look nice in anything, dear!' Now, that's not the way for a husband to act, is it, mother?"

"Well, my child, you know we can't expect the same fervent—"

"Now, mother, I do expect a natural interest, and I want to tell you that I got it when I showed Hal this gown. As usual he didn't even observe that I had on anything new when we were dressed for the Burlingames' bridge dinner I preened around in front of him until he finally had to ask what was the great excitment. 'Got some new finery?' he asked at last.

"'Yes,' I answered, 'I thought it about time I got something really handsome. You always say you don't wish me to economize all the time.'

"'And I don't, either, Gertrude,' he said warmly, and I could see that my new attire was at last making some impression on him.

"'Well, this cost a pile. You know, Hal, dear, you can't get a really stunning costume at Nanine's for less than $200.'

"'Two hundred dollars!' he exclaimed. 'Well, you'll certainly cut a dash in that outfit. Those little bouquets are certainly striking. Are they woven in?

"'No, they're embroidered.' I answered, but I didn't say machine embroidered. 'Well, Im glad you don't think $210 was too much.'

"Two hundred and ten dollars, Gertrude?" he asked, and I just smiled for it really cost me at Hinckle's, marked down of course, just $21. Honestly, mother, it was just pitiful how easy it was to fool him, and I felt guilty all that evening every time he looked across the room at me at the party. He simply beamed, and I could see that he was glancing around, wondering if the others there noticed how much better dressed I was than any one else. Every time we go anywhere he wants me to put this dress on, and he says its the most becoming thing I've had since we were married. I suppose I ought to confess, I—"

"There, they're here now, said" Gertrudes mother, and as she opened the door to the two men, the younger one exclaimed happily, "Good for you, Gertrude, Im glad you wore that outfit. I've been wanting the folks to see it while its still fresh. Ma, your daughters getting to be some little dresser. Isnt she the queen's smile in that get-up? Are we late? Do we have to hurry?

"No, I wouldnt be in any hurry," answered the mother as she received her son-in-laws kiss, but she looked right at her daughter as she spoke.—Chicago News.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

A man whose experiments and researches have made him one of the great figures in the wireless world, though comparatively few persons have ever heard of him, is Captain A. G. D. West, who is at the head of the development section of the British Broadcasting Company. It is to Captain West that the radio fans of Great Britain are indebted for the American transmissions as well as many other surprises sprung by the broadcasting concern with which he is connected. He has a technical knowledge of the subject said to be unsurpassed by any person of his age, for he has not yet reached his thirtieth year, and his work has demonstrated that he possesses practical skill as well as theoretical knowledge. Captain West was an experimental wireless officer in the war, and afterwards became a student at Cambridge university. After winning his M. A. at Cambridge he took a special course in science at London University.

YOUR INCOME TAX

Contributions or Gifts

Deductions for contributions or gifts are limited to 15 per cent of the taxpayer's net income as computed without the benefit of the provisions of the law allowing such deduction. This means that from the total of all the taxable items there is subtracted all allowable deductions—business expenses, losses, taxes, etc—except contributions the remainder being the amount upon which the 15 per cent limitation is based.

A new provision of income tax legislation is that if during the taxable year 1924 and in each of the 10 preceding taxable years the amounts contributed for purposes specified by the revenue act of 1924 exceeds 90 per cent of the taxpayer's net income "as computed without the benefit of this paragraph," the full amount of such contributions and gifts made within the taxable year is deductible.

Claims for deductions for contributions or gifts must be substantiated. Taxpayers are required to state in their returns the name and address of each organization to which a gift was made and the approximate date and the amount of the gift in each case.

Gifts to an individual are not deductible, but if made to an organization described by the act—religious, charitable, scientific, literary, or educational—may be deducted even though the organization distributes that its funds to individuals. A church constitutes a religious organization for the purpose of this deduction. Donations made to missioonary funds, to church building funds, pew rent and assessments, and dues paid to churches are regarded as contributions.

Deductions for contributions for political campaign purposes are not allowed.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The Child Labor Amendment.

Mr. Editor: That the fight for the child labor amendment is on hot and heavy, there can be no doubt., The hardest work is before us; for there is nothing more difficult to overcome than misrepresentations such as the opponents of the amendment are scattering broadcast; for example I have before me a clipping from the Manufacturers' Record, which says: "Because the child labor amendment in reality is not legislation in the interest of children but which would mean the destruction of the boys and girls of the country, the Manufacturer's Record has given much attention to the subject." It goes on to class the defenders of the amendment as "socialists, communists and bolshevists." The whole article is curriious beyong belief. Let us take a look at the defenders of the amendment:

The Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America.

The American Association of University Women.

The American Federation of Teachers.

National Educational Association.

American Home Economic Association.

General Federation of Women's Clubs.

National Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

Young Woman's Christian Association.

Medical Woman's National Association.

National Congress of Parents and Teachers.

These are a specimen of the organizations that are giving time and energy working for the child labor amendment.

These organizations represent the educated and cultured side of our civilization. The bolshevists are bitter enemies of this side of civilization as all the world knows.

The only important woman's organization that I know of as opposed to the amendment is the D. A. R.'s—not national, only sectional chapters have taken action against it. I believe upon second thought they will reverse their action. They are the one organization of all others that should stand for the rights of minors to life, liberty and the pursuit of health and education.

Who are those who oppose it? Foremost the Manufacturers' Record.

The Southern Textile Manufacturers.

National Association of Manufacturers.

Pennsylvania Association of Manufacturers, and many others all who profit and hope to continue to profit from future debauchery of American childhood.

If the American people will consider the proposed amendment in its historical setting and with reference to its natural and obvious purpose, not be frightened by imaginary dangers that selfish opponents are dangling before their eyes they will vote for the amendment, which is the result of the long-growing popular conviction that child labor is a matter of national concern requiring national action and has been fathered by our wise and cautious President Coolidge in his first speech to congress and again in his recent speech of acceptance. The opponents are seeking to make the unthinking believe the amendment will give us an unoccupied childhood—that the minors under 18 will have nothing to do but run the streets and hatch up mischief. On the contrary its ratification means a well occupied childhood, in other words it will substitute for child labor suitable schooling, suitable work and suitable recreation, all of which will build up a strong, intelligent manhood and womanhood. Children who work in the beet fields nine or ten hours a day, boys and girls who spend eleven hours in the hot and stuffy factories and mines, those children 8, 10 and 12 years old working all day in the shrimp and oyster canneries; those boys 14½ years old doing a man's work in the anthracite mines in Pennsylvania on a boy's wages can never know a happy, free childhood. When states refuse to protect their children the federal government must step in and use its paternal power and demand justice for these helpless minors. This is just what the present child labor amendment stands for.

It seems to me that all this false belittling of our congress by claiming that if they are giving the power to legislate this vital question they will do foolish and tyranical things is leading to the overthrow of our federal government. If Americans have no longer confidence in congress, how can they expect foreigners to respect it? The true and most dangerous bolshevists and communists are those who belittle our congress and that is what every man and woman does when they say they can not trust congress to regulate, limit and prohibit child labor.

Herriot, the Poor Orphan

Left an orphan in early life, Edourd Herriot battled his way to prominence in public life, then had to fight misunderstandings and efforts to stop his progress.

Son of a penniless officer in an armory in France, his boyhood was filled with privation, and when his parents died he lived with relatives. While being cared for by an aunt who was a cook, he won a scholarship at 15 and entered the College of Sainte-Barbe at Paris. By winning other scholarships he made his way and was graduated, then attended the Sorbonne, from which he received degrees.

Wearing a shabby overcoat of his aunt's employer and with less than the equivalent of $10 in his pockets, he went to Lyons at 27. There he became professor of rhetoric. Brilliant and striking in appearance he soon was popular. He contributed to magazines and newspapers, one of his poems was honored by the French Academy and his ability as an orator was recognized. Later he was professor of economics at the University of Lyons, at 29 he took an important part in municipal counsels, afterward acting as assistant in the bureau of public instruction and the fine arts.

At 32 he was elected mayor of Lyons, the youngest to hold the office, and was re-elected 12 times. Marrying riches, he took his place in society. By herculean efforts he established the Lyons Fair, which became famous.

Elected to the Senate of France at 39 he was the youngest member of that body, and became leader of the radical and radical socialist party. At the outbreak of the World war he was appointed minister of national subsistance and labor, and made a record of success.

To gain a more strategic position against Poincaire, he entered the House of Representatives in 1919. Returning from a trip to Russia in 1922, he advocated recognition of the Moscow government, but his views were so misinterpreted that he had to step. After his return from the United States in 1923 he had to fight an attempted boycott of his articles and speeches by the press, but he finally compelled recognition.

And last year, at 52, he was made Premier of France.

CONSTIPATION means MISERY

Rouge and powder will not cover up the effects of constipation. The bowels are the worst abused and most variously damaged of any organ of the body. The bowels should act at least twice daily.

COLDS THAT DEVELOP INTO PNEUMONIA

Chronic coughs and persistent colds lead to serious lung trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with twofold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and kills the germ.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by the medical fraternity as the greatest healing agency for the treatment of chronic coughs and colds and other forms of throat and lung troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and destroys the germ that lead to consumption.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of chronic coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, catarrhal bronchitis and other forms of throat and lung diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or the flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter of how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Co., Atlanta, Ga. (Adv.)

$15,000 FIRE STARTED BY A FUMIGATION CANDLE

Hartford, Feb. 9.—Fire, said to have been started by a fumigation candle, gutting a room on the second floor occupied by a maid who had been removed to the isolation hospital with scarlet fever, did $15,000 damage early tonight to the house of Louis Mitnick in West Hartford. Christopher A. Kellye, a member of the Quaker Lane Fire company, had a vein in his wrist severed by a flying piece of slate. Mr. and Mrs. William Fried and their year and a half old baby were carried to safety from their apartments on the first floor.

TWO GYPSY LEADERS ARE RIVALS FOR POSITION OF KING

Waterbury, Feb. 9.—Two gypsy leaders are rivals for the position of king of the Romany gypsies left vacant by the death here last Wednesday of Nicholas John. Frank Josef, resident in this city and second in command in the Nicholas John regime, vies with Ritasra Jurka of Yonkers for the primacy of the tribe. Both men claim to be brothers of the dead king. The widow of Nicholas John leaves for Yonkers tomorrow to confer with gypsies there on the election of a new leader, which will be held in the near future, either in this city or in Yonkers.

Telescope Marvel.

Sir Frank Dyson, astronomer royal, while testing the big telescope at Greenwich Observatory turned it on London. He observed a menacing crack at the base of a church steeple. He measured the crack with the instruments used to determine lunar distances and was convinced it was dangerous. It was difficult to find where the church was, because the magnification was so great only the steeple showed in the telescope's field, but with the aid of a large scale map and instruments Dyson placed the church.

Apples From Cliff.

Apple trees planted near a perpendicular rock cliff at Cashmere, Wash., produced apples that were colored only on one side because the sun and light could not paint those next to the cliff. The trees were planted by John Lahmer and the branches pruned and trained to grow close to the rocks. This location was chosen so that the roots might find perpetual moisture at the foot of the cliff.

Why Corn Pops.

Popping of corn is simply an explosion of steam and all vapor held under pressure until the seed is burst and the pressure suddenly released. Corn to pop successfully, says Nature Magazine, must have just the right quantity of moisture, neither too wet nor too dry. The most common cause of poor popping is due to drying. Popcorn, when cured thoroughly, should be stored in sealed jars or other airtight containers.

There are mistakes that it would be a mistake not to make.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Edwin Fay.

People in Norwich and vicinity will learn with sorrow of the death, Monday night, of Maria Hutchins, widow of Edwin Fay, at her home, No. 245 Main street, following an illness of about one year. Mrs. Fay had not been able to be out of her home since last Easter but she had been seriously ill only for about one week. On Monday evening about 8.30 o'clock she was able to sit up in bed for a short time but only a few minutes later it became necessary to summon a physician and death came at 8.50 o'clock. During her long period of failing health Mrs. Fay had been tenderly cared for by Miss Mary E. Burke, while her business interests had been in the care of Miss Mary Cronin.

Mrs. Fay, who was one of the most widely known women of Norwich, was born in Killingly, Oct. 28, 1836, and spent her girlhood in that village, where, on May 14, 1863, she was united in marriage with Edwin Fay. Immediately following their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Fay came to Norwich and for several years resided on Main street. In 1866 when Mr. Fay purchased the confectionery store of Amos T. Otis, and the Hubbard property, Nos. 237 to 247 Main street, the couple made their home in the block and for many years conducted the Chelsea hotel in that block, changing the name to Chelsea Hotel building. Mr. and Mrs. Fay also continued the business they had purchased and added a full line of toys, their 99-cent store being one of the best known stores in Norwich for many years. After the death of Mr. Fay on January 21, 1900, the hotel business was given up and Mrs. Fay continued to conduct the souvenir and toy store at No. 247 Main street, until health failed her in April 1924, since which time she had handled the finances of the store only, the business being in charge of Miss Mary Cronin. At the time of the death of Mr. Fay the name of the building was changed from the Chelsea Hotel building to The Fay Building in memory of Mr. Fay, the block being known under that name at the present time.

For 60 years of business in Norwich, Mrs. Fay had made many friends in eastern Connecticut and her wide offerings of novelties of all kinds were considered the best in the city for years. Honest in her business dealings, kind and gentle, she won friends everywhere and in her death the community loses a most valued member.

Mrs. Fay was a member of Christ Episcopal church and took active interest in all church affairs as long as health permitted her to do so. She was not a member of any local fraternal societies, her interest being centered in her home and in the store that she had managed for so many years. She took great pleasure in visiting her relatives in Danielson, the anniversary of her birth being a cause every year for a family reunion in that village and it was with regret that she was unable to make her annual trip last year. The party, however, was held in Norwich as a surprise to Mrs. Fay and proved most enjoyable.

The business which had been conducted by Mrs. Fay, following the death of her husband, is to be closed for the present in respect to Mrs. Fay.

She leaves no children, the surviving relatives being three nieces, Mrs. Ina Keech and Mrs. Josephine Franklin of Danielson and Mrs. Charles Moore of Dayton, Ohio; two nephews, Dr. F. F. Hutchins of Indianapolis, Mo., and F. Leon Hutchins, superintendent of the W. W. Backus hospital of Norwich; three grandnieces, Mrs. Henry Crosby of Danielson, Mrs. Luzerne Custer and Mrs. Eleanor Randall of Dayton, Ohio, and two great grand nephews, John and Franklin Crosby of Danielson.

Mrs. M. W. SCOTT

(Contributed)

At her home 79 School street, Eliza A. Brewster, widow of Moses Walter Scott, passed away peacefully at 1.20 o'clock Sunday afternoon. Although Mrs. Scott had been an invalid for several years, but she had been able to be about the home and assist with light duties until about week ago when she was taken suddenly ill. In her weakened state she was unable to rally and on Thursday last was taken seriously ill. At her bedside when she died were her daughters, Miss Idella Scott and Mrs. A. F. Drury who had tenderly cared for her. Mrs. Scott was an ideal wife and mother and was beloved by all who knew her. Having once gained her friends she always retained them. She was a kind neighbor and always ready to befriend those who sought her aid. Mrs. Scott was a member of Mt. Calvary Baptist church, having joined in 1871, being the oldest member of the church and was one of its faithful workers until health began to fail. Although her health failed she did not lose her interest in the upbuilding of its cause. It can be truly said that Mrs. Scott was loved by all of Mt. Calvary members and was often sought for advice and her memory will live on.

She was born in Scotland, Ct., the daughter of Anna Mara Freeman and Edmund Brewster. After the death of her father she and her mother came to Norwich where she has since mad her home.

Some years after coming to Norwich she was married to Moses Walter Scott Norwich, where she has since made her away several years ago. Mrs. Scott also leaves a niece, Miss Henrietta Davis and several other relatives.

Aztecs Grew Corn

The only related plant with which corn will cross fertilize is teosinte, a large, semi-tropical grass growing wild in the uplands of Central America and adjoining regions, says Nature Magazine. It is in this country of the ancient Mayas, Aztecs and Incas that the most abundant evidence has been found of early cultivation.

CIVIC ASSOCIATION HAS PRESENTED BILLS BEFORE STATE LEGISLATURE

The special legislative committee of the Eastern Connecticut Civic association made its report on the bills prepared and introduced at the present session of the general assembly. The report was accepted and the association has endorsed the several bills, all of which will work for the betterment of eastern Connecticut roads. The meeting opened at 6 o'clock with a luncheon. Following the luncheon the business session was called to order by Vice President Arthur L. Peale in the absence of President Valentine L. Murphy of Willimantic. The minutes of the previous meeting were read by Secretary John J. O'Rourke and were accepted as read. Herbert R. Branche, chairman of the special committee on legislation, made his report for the committee on the highway bills prepared and presented to the general assembly. A summary of the bills follows:

That portion of the highway leading from a point where present state highway terminates south of Voluntown to a point in the town of North Stonington at the end of the present state highway in that town, a distance of approximately six miles, be included in the trunk state highway system.

That the state appropriate a sufficient sum of money to safeguard the lives of the traveling public on all state trunk highway railroad crossings, by the building of overhead or under-passes; or by providing state officers to safeguard the traveling public on all such railroad crossings.

That approximately four miles of road be included in the trunk highway system extending north from the end of the present state highway from Lyme in the town of Lyme to a point on the Norwich-East Haddam state highway near North Plain be included in the trunk state highway system.

That portion of the highway in the towns of Montville and East Lyme from a point on the Hartford-New London state highway near Chesterfield to a point in the town of East Lyme called Niantic, in said town of East Lyme be included in the trunk line system of state highways.

That approximately four miles of highway from Mansfield Center to Warrenville be included in the trunk state highway system.

The project of state parks was brought up and the proposed site at Fort Shantok was favorably remarked upon. Several of those present remarked on the advisability of advertising the Mohegan Trail which runs through Norwich from New London to the White Mountains.

The suggestion was made that the support of the various patriotic women's associations in eastern Connecticut be secured for advertising and beautifying the Mohegan Trail. This matter will be discussed at further length at the next meeting. The elimination of curves and present narrow bridges in eastern Connecticut also came in for more or less discussion.

The meeting adjourned about 8 o'clock.

WEST END PARENTS ARE TO BE PUT ON TRIAL

Paul A. Brown, president of the West End Community Association announced Monday night that next week those members of the association who are parents will be placed on trial at a meeting of the association. Young America, children of the city have brought charges against their parents complaining of lack of sympathy, lack of companionship and lack of interest in their future welfare and the trial of the case has been set for next week. Judge Allyn L. Brown of the superior court has consented to preside at the "court" session and Judge Arthur F. Libby of the city court will be the attorney for the defense. Other well known barristers will take part in the trial and the accused parents will hear the verdict from the foreman of a juvenile jury, names to be announced later.

The object of the mock trial is to aid in providing some solution of the juvenile problem and at the same time to try to show the young folks their parents' side of the question. The evening promises to be a very interesting and profitable one for all who attend.

Friday evening of this week the association will show a moving picture of the electric industry depicting the manufacture of electricity from the time a dam is erected in a river until the current reaches the home of the consumer. This is free to the public especially the young people, children of the schools and the students of the Norwich Free Academy.

The community orchestra is progressing satisfactorily and will hold its first big rehearsal in the school auditorium Thursday evening.

WOMEN'S MISSION CIRCLE AND W. W. G. MEETING

The Woman's Mission Circle and the World Wide Guild of the First Baptist church held a very enjoyable evening Monday at 7.45 o'clock in the church. As the meeting was the union effort of the two societies, both groups joined in the program after a brief business session.

The subject for the evening was the Right Heart Attitude Towards the Nationalities in America. It was appropriate to the Valentine season in its emphasis on the heart. Verses of the scripture were read by several each verse containing the word heart. Mrs. William Gilchrist offered prayer.

Miss Mazie Stamm took the part of Columbia and introduced the speakers on the program. A short survey was given of the early Pioneers in this country. Some of the leading discoveries and their countries being described by different ones present. This was followed by consideration of latter immigrants. Interesting facts were given showing their contribution to America. Each nationality responded by telling Columbia the gift it brought. Mrs. Gertrude Amburn as a Chinese girl brought out the importance of the church in making a better America. The music was furnished by a quintet of girls from the W. W. G. Misses Dorothea Tucker, pianist, Mildred Tucker, Evelyn Rankin, Rose Thornes and Alice Sandberg.

Among the songs they gave were the national anthems of Russia, Italy, France and Japan. Following the benediction there came a social period during which Miss Dorothea Tucker pleased the audience with music. Refreshments were served by the guild under the direction of Mrs. Fred Wilson.

All indications pointed to a successful presentation, members of the cast in their final rehearsal putting the show through Monday evening with a smoothness that indicated success.

PROPOSED MERCER ST. SCHOOL MUST ME BUILT FOR $150,000

(Special to The Bulletin)

New London, Feb. 9.—The matter of awarding a contract for the proposed school building on Mercer street was again before the council this evening and by the members it was discussed long and seriously. The contention was that the council should make sure that the building would not cost over $150,000, completed in all respects, furnishings, heating, electrical work, etc, including the cost of construction. The fee of the architect is under no circumstances to exceed $8,400. There was contention that should the cost of the building exceed $150,000, alterations and cuts in the specifications must be made to reduce the cost of the figures stated. The proposed contract gave the city as owner of the building the opportunity of concurring in the reductions, but it was believed it divided the responsibility with the architect and that the latter might make additional charges for his services, in the even that there was a dispute as to the extra work occasioned by the alterations. The result was that the council took a recess about 10 o'clock for the further consideration of the plans and the contract.

It was the opinion of Mayor Clark that the contract should be disposed of at the meeting tonight, that the project might be entered upon before spring work should open and there was a greater demand for labor and material. It was vated to authorize the city manager to contract with the Connecticut Power Co.(, to provide another fire alarm circuitat a cost not to exceed $2,164.75. The Connecticut Power Co. and the Southern New England Telephone Co. were the bidders for the work, but the Telephone Co., would have to employ the power company to do some of it; so it was decided to award the contract to the power company.

A snow and ice removal ordinance with teeth in it was read for the first time after it was presented by the director of law. It provides a penalty of $2 for violation of the ordinance, and the penalty of $2 an hour for each hour the sidewalks are allowed in dangerous condition from snow and ice and the property owner or tenant fails to distribute sand, ashes or other material on the walk to avert danger to pedestrians.

A water and sewer ordinance of 40 sections was adopted that binds the parties using the sewers and the water, so that there is no escape from compliance with the provision set forth. If there is any gate by which the property owner can escape, such was not apparent to the members of the city council. There does not seem to be the slightest loophole by which he or she may escape.

The city manager was authorized to purchase cast iron pipe and sewer pipe and fittings.

GAVE GREAT PERFORMANCE OF VERDI'S IL TROVATORE

Fortune Gallo's San Carlo Grand Opera Co., which came here for the first time last year at the Palace theatre in Madame Butterfly, made its second annual appearance Monday evening at the theatre, playing Verdi's tuneful Il Trovatore, before an audience that came near to filling the house and was most enthusiastic with its applause to express its genuine satisfaction at the fine performance given by the strong cast. Curtain calls at the end of each act brought the principals out to bow time and again, while the conductor was also called to the footlights with the principals.

Elda Vetteri, singing the part of Leonora, was beautiful in face and voice, while Ada Salori as Azucena, the gypsy, gave an especially satisfying portrayal that won pronounced applause and Freda Werlein sang pleasingly as Ines.

The male leads were excellantly played by Ludovico Tomarchio as Manrico, Guilio Fregosi as The Count and Amund Sjovik as Ferrando for which his bass voice was admirably fitted. The familiar Anvil Chorus and the Miserere by the men's chorus were given with fine effect and the scenic and costume effects were complete and the entire performance sent the audience home satisfied with the second appearance of the San Carlo company here and prepared to give it a warm welcome when it comes again.

Fishing for Baby

A father's ability as a bait casting fisherman is believed to have saved the life of his infant child. N. D. Steckles, Lincoln, Neb., had stopped at Arnolds Park, Iowa, with his family for a few days' fishing. While he was on the lake with his wife and infant son, the baby crawled over the side of the boat. Steckles cast his line toward the baby and succeeded in hooking the child's dress near the sleeve. He then reeled the baby in.

Odors of Metals

Experiments have been made to prove that metals have odors composed not of the atoms of the metal but of the products of their chemical changes. At ordinary emperatures the odors frequently could not be detected or were almost imperceptible, but became more pronounced as the metal was heated and then disappeared after the heating had been continued for a considerable length of time. The experimenters also have succeeded in isolating the odorous matter.

BIMBO WILL BE CLEVER AND PLEASING REVUE

On Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, February 10 and 11, Robert O. Fletcher Post No. 4, American Legion will present its second annual musical comedy, offering John B. Rogers super production, Bimbo, at the Palace theater with a cast of 150 local performers of talent and merit. Elaborate in scenery with an extravagant outlay of gorgeous costumes this production is rich in its wonderful stage colorings and effects. Swift-moving as to plot with a host of interesting and fascinating dancing and singing groups interspersing its unusual story, Bimbo takes the form of a musical revue but gives you more because of its story.

After two weeks of concentrated constant rehearsing the various members of the cast are moving through their parts whether it be a principal role or a member of a group, with the ease and precision that would do credit to many who are appearing every day on the legitimate stage with a rating as first class professionals. It has been predicted that Bimbo will prove to be the most professional like amateur show ever staged in Norwich and those who have been allowed to witness the final rehearsals are loud in their praise at the smoothness with which the production moves from the opening chorus to the close of the grand finale. Patience and hard work are the sacrifices made by those who appear in such a production but like a true performer the appreciation of an audience is sufficient recompense for all the hardships that were necessary to make their performance as near perfect as is possible.

While the tickets for the play have been selling rapidly it is apparent that there are still enough left to give every one a good seat. It is hoped that a capacity audience will greet Bimbo at both performances for the American Legion as well as the members of the cast are deserving of the patronage of the general public and those who enjoy an evening of unusual entertainment will not be disappointed.

Tickets may be secured now for either performance and inasmuch as the seating capacity of the Palace is limited, reservations are advised to avoid disappointment.

"Bimbo" Has Clever Plot

The name of the American Legions second presentation is taken from the island of Bimbo which is supposed to be one of the South Sea group. It is under the supervision of the United States and it is due to a mistake made by the State Department that the story of the play is responsible.

Trouble has been brewing between the Eastern and Western Bimbonians and the presiding governor is removed. The new governor is expected to arrive just about the time the revolution is ready to break. However he is delayed for some unknown reason but a motion picture photographer lands from the boat and is mistaken for the new ruler. Before he has a chance to contradict the deception he is placed in full power of the island and being an adventurous sort of chap he decides to allow things to "carry on." He is having a royal time and Jack Daman, a young American civil engineer finds him a worthy though not entirely respected friend. Jack is building a railroad from coast to coast under a time contract so he stirs up this revolution in order to get his job done in time getting the Easterners to build his road to the west and the Westerners to assist with the road to the east. He selects the spot where the road is to meet and when it does he will get his bonus and will be able to marry his sweetheart, Sylvia Vanderveer, a wealthy American girl. But about the time things are moving along smoothly two of the governer's former sweethearts arrive on the island and stir up an awful mess for this chap, "Hiram Budd," is terribly fickle and quite a ladies' man. A native princess who has fallen for Hiram's charms also lends excitement and he has a terrible time avoiding the fatal poppy.

Lord Algernon of Lambourne Arms is also on the island presumably to collect dances and his recollections of tall green drinks with the ice clinking merrily on the sides of the glass are most annoying to those who haven't seen the sight of a piece of ice in months.

Sylvia's Aunt Portia is bugs on bugs and some on men. Poor girl was in love once when she was young and beautiful. Why, she was so beautiful that even a horse ran away with her. The general is batty about Latin but that doesn't interfere with his tales of his wonderful bravery. The general has some army a few of which wear almost the same kind of uni-

Georgianna wants to go back to Oshkosh to her Clarence and Portia and the General get together accidentally to be soure but it seems satisfactory; so that everything ends as you like it.

The comedy situations are a scream and would make the Sphinx hold his sides with laughter. The lines and business are clever and aid to the enjoyment of the entire production.

WEST ENDS OF BRISTOL TO OPPOSE TAFTVILLE ARMY-NAVY CLUB TONIGHT

Encountering their strongest opposition of the season, the Army-Navy club lines up against the fast West Ends of Bristol in Parish hall this evening. The aggregation from the Bell City, considered to rank with the top-notchers in the state, comes here with a remarkable record and a powerful lineup. This season the Bristolites have defeated the Kaceys and Dixies of Hartford, Endees of Meriden, All-Middletown and the Waterbury Collegians, which list includes the strongest opposition this state can afford. At the earlier part of the season they also defeated the local team in a one-sided contest.

The West Ends will present in their lineup the following: Bill Tracy and Dewey Carpentier, in the forward berths; Joe Rozasky of Terryville American Legion five will do the tapping at center, while Capt. Sheehy and Heinie Carrington will be assigned to duty as back court guardians. Bill Tann and Jack Moore will be held in reserve.

The local quintet will present practically the same lineup as in previous games. Normandin and Jim Murphy will form the forward line of attack, with Harry Mills doing the jumping at center. Coleman and Belair will be in guard positions. Eddie Murphy and Tom Coleman will act in the utility role.

The game is scheduled for 8 o'clock and dancing will follow the game.

CRIPPLED CHAPMAN TEAM TO PLAY WINDHAM TODAY

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, Feb. 9.—Chapman Tech faces its toughest week in basketball this week, when two of the strongest teams on the schedule will be opposed. Windham High of Willimantic leads the two teams which come here for conquests during the week. This game is scheduled for this (Tuesday) evening, while on Saturday night at the school auditorium Naugatuck High, with a fast five, plays opposite the Red and Black. Besides the high school game for Tuesday evening, two local teams will settle their differences in a preliminary contest. These teams are the Mebs and Army, two fast fives, which are expected to provide a fine game.

With the situation little improved in the way of capable substitutes taking the place of those two players suspended because of a school prank. The work of grooming two players for the two open positions is not as easy as it seems. There is plenty of work ahead of the Tech mentor which comes at a time when the loss of the suspended players will be felt the most. Windham High defeated Chapman Tech earlier in the season at Willimantic, finishing the contest with plenty to spare. At that time the Tech five had its full strength in the play, and with the weakened condition of the Red and Black five it is doubtful if a victory will result on Tuesday.

Alexander I. Hewitt, a brother of the suspended Tech center, is filling the open position, there is something missing in the work of this player. The deposed captain could be relied on to send a good share of the baskets through the hoop against any team played on the Tech court, and his jumping is better than that of his younger brother. Zaparniok also does not fit in at forward so well. His playing in practice games is not up to the standard required of a forward.

In Windham's recent victory over Killingly the difference between the teams was 15 points. Chapman Tech with her full strength finished the game with a much larger margin separating the two teams. Tech players are basing the showing against Killingly as a comparison between the two teams. But the handicap of two suspended players was apparently forgotten in the comparison of the merits of the two teams. The loss of the two players will more than overbalance any attempt made to compare the two teams.

A. A. U. TRACK MEET TO BE HELD FEB. 24TH

New York, Feb. 9.—The Amateur Athletic union today announced it had changed from Feb. 25 to Feb. 24 the date of the indoor track meet to be held at Madison Square Garden as part of the campaign to raise the $150,000 pledged by amateur sportdom to the fund to complete the cathedral of St. John the Divine.

The change was made at the request of church authorities to avoid holding the event on Ash Wednesday. The 71st Regiment A. A. indoor games, which were scheduled on Feb. 24, have been advanced to March 2.

JOHNSON WILL BE BACK WITH SENATORS THIS YEAR

Reno, Nev., Feb. 9.—Walter Johnson has given up any hope of acquiring a Pacific Coast league baseball club and will pitch for the Washington American league team again this season, he said today. He will join the team in Florida in two weeks.

"I'll be with Washington this spring," he said. "I do not know whether I will sign a contract for one year or for two years, but there is no chance of getting a Coast league club. The chance to buy the Vernon club was good, but it seems that William Wrigley wanted his friend, H. W. Lane, of Salt Lake, to run it, and the deal fell through. I'll be in Florida in two weeks to train with the team. As for my salary, I can only say that it will not be $30,000 a year."

Johnson said he had had a tentative offer to buy the Sacramento club but that his mind had been set on getting Oakland or Vernon, and now he had given up any idea of buying into a Coast league club this year.

STATUS OF CAPT. BINGHAM IS YET UNCERTAIN

New Haven, Feb. 9.—The faculty committee of the Sheffield Scientific school of Yale reached a decision this afternoon regarding the status of John Shepard Bingham, captain of the Yale football team and a junior, who failed in four of his subjects at the midyear examinations, but the decision will not be made public until Bingham is notified, Dean Charles H. Warren announced tonight. Such a notification is forwarded through the mails, and will not be received by Captain Bingham before tomorrow.

Bingham appeared before the faculty committee at the meeting today and stated his case. He then left the committee room and his case was discussed at length before a decision was reached.

Meanwhile, Bingham's status as football captain or a member of the Yale team next fall is uncertain. The Yale athletic commission announced today that it would take no action in the matter until the faculty had acted and as the faculty decision will not be known before tomorrow, it is not expected that the athletic authorities will act before then.

Under the existing rules of the Yale Athletic association, if a man is dropped back a class he cannot play in any sport for a year. If this action was taken in Bingham's case, he would be dropped back to the sophomore class and would not be permitted to take part in the football campaign next fall. It is possible that the football captain, by dint or hard study, may make up his deficiencies before the fall term. Should this be the case, he would be eligible to lead the football team.

Officials at the college said that he would not be ordered to leave college. His resignation may be requested, it was made known. In this case, he would be allowed to re-enter Yale next fall as a junior, in which event he would not be eligible for football, or as a senior, providing he should make up his work at some other institution. If he did this, he would be eligible for the football team.

Bingham has made no plans for the future and says he will take no action until he receives word of the decision of the faculty committee.

Football men at Yale today were discussing the possibility of electing a new captain for the 1925 team, and the names most favorably mentioned were Eddie Cottle, halfback, and Dan Allen, fullback.

LEONARD NOT EXCITED OVER LIGHTWEIGHT PROSPECTS

Chicago, Feb. 9.—Bennie Leonard, retired lightweight champion, rates the sixteen boxers the New York athletic commission has designated to battle for the lightweight title as a "lot of fine boys," but says he cannot "get excited" over any of them. Leonard said today he would not attempt to pick the best of the sixteen, because, he said, that was an impossibility.

"One fellow licks another today; and gets licked himself the next time," Leonard said. "Smith beats Jones, and Jones beats Brown, whereupon someone turns around and beats Smith. How are you going to figure them?"

The former titleholder said he was pleased with Sammy Mandell's victory over Sid Terris. In response to a question whether Mandell might develop a finish punch, Leonard said:

"He's young. Maybe he will acquire the hitting power. You know what he needs—what all of those fellows need more than anything else. It's experience."

FELCH RECOVERS $1,116.67 OF BACK SALARY FROM CHICAGO

Milwaukee, Wis., Feb. 9.—Oscar (Happy) Felsch, former member of the Chicago club of the American league, and banished from organized baseball for alleged participation in the 1919 world's series scandal, today accepted a judgment from the club for $1,116.67 in his suit to recover back salary under breach of contract.

Felsch brought suit against the Chicago club, charging breach of contract when he was discharged two weeks and two days before the expiration of his 1920 contract. He also sought to recover $1,500 which he alleged was due him under a bonus offer by the club for winning the 1967 pennant.

In accepting the offer in judgment, the plaintiff dropped the suit to recover under the alleged bonus offer.

MADDEN SIGNS TO MEET GIBBONS NEXT MAY

New York, Feb. 9.—Bartley Madden, Irish heavyweight, who stayed the limit with Harry Wills last year, signed today to meet Tom Gibbons of St. Paul in a 15-round match featuring the the opening outdoor show of the Queensboro A. C., early in May.

Madden signed for the match through his manager, Charley Rose, according to announcement by Lew Raymond, Queensboro matchmaker, who said he had wirde terms to Eddie Kane, Gibbons' manager, at Chicago.

CREAM OF COLLEGE TRACKS AT NEW YORK MEET SATURDAY

New York, Feb. 9.—Indoor track and field squads of Pennsylvania and the "Big Three"—Harvard, Yale and Princeton—will take part in the New York Athletic club meet next Saturday night at Madison Square Garden, thus bringing together the most notable array of college talent in any meet prior to the intercollegiate championships on March 7.

Yale's squad comprises most of the men who helped the Blue capture the outdoor I. C. A. A. A. title last spring, while Pennsylvania has held the indoor crown for the past two years.

JOHNSON WILL BEGIN TRAINING NEXT MONDAY

Washington, Feb. 9.—Walter Johnson, who announced today at Reno that he would pitch again for the Senators, is under orders to report Sunday to Manager Harris at Hot Springs, Ark., to begin training Monday with other veterans of the team.

TAYLOR LEADS IN SCORING FOR BULKELEY QUINTET

New London, Feb. 9.—Climbing steadily in the standing since the first day he joined the team, Huck Taylor has scored enough points to warrant him to be placed in the first position among the scorers of the Bulkeley quintet. Although Taylor has taken part in but six games, while the majority of the other players who trail him in the individual scoring have taken part in the entire eleven, he has shown unusual ability in caging the ball and leads his nearest competitors for high honors by 4 points.

Taylor has to his credit a total of 23 baskets and 5 fouls for a total of 51 points. Parisi with 18 from the field of battle and 11 from the 15-foot mark is tied with Vogt with each having compiled the total of 47 points. Vogt is the only member on the team to match Taylor's field goal total with 23. His efforts from the foul line are but few, Vogt caging but one, while Taylor beat him out in this respect with 5. Joe Watterson at guard has amassed a total of 25 points, and is the last player on the team to have a total which reaches two figures. The substitutes, of which there are four, follow closely after Watterson.

The fine individual effort on Taylor's part on Saturday in the game with Branford, in which he indicated the basket with 7 goals from the field, gave him the lead from which it is doubtful if he will be dislodged. Vogt, the leading scoring possibility of the Orange and Black, had an advantage of over 30 points before Taylor joined the ranks of the team. Taylor's work has been more or less sensatoinal in the games in which he has appeared, and his fine playing would have helped Bulkeley's chances earlier in the season. Taylor's work will be especially watched in the games in which Bulkeley will engage with high schools in this section of the state. His performance at the tourney held at Storrs will enable the college coaches to get an idea as to how fast a player can be in high school.

This week Bulkeley will engage three teams, the first of the trio calling for Bulkeley to travel to Deep River to meet the undefeated high school five in that town. On Friday the team will again take to the road, and the objective will be Stonington High. The week will come to an end with the five opposing Bacon Academy of Colchester at the latter's home court. These games, it is hoped, will give the team some fine experience which will stand them to good stead when the stronger teams on the schedule are tackled near the end of this month and next.

NO MORE WILCO GAMES AFTER THIS YEAR

New York, Feb. 9.—The Wilco Athletic association announced today that it would abandon hereafter the annual track meet which has been a feature of the indoor season for the past five years. Hugh H. Hirschon, director of the association, explained that personal business reasons obliged him to forsake the event.

The fifth Wilco indoor games, held last Saturday night in Brooklyn, were the most successful yet staged.

Probably the most exciting volleyball of the season took place on the "Y" floor yesterday afternoon when the second round of the Business Men's league was played. All of the games were won by narrow margins, and after considerable competition the Spikers emerged with three wins to their credit, thus tying them for first place with the Servers. BOSTON COLLEGE SHUTS OUT BOSTON A. A. AT HOCKEY

Boston, Feb. Feb. 9.—Boston College scored a 2 to 0 victory over the Boston Athletic Association hockey team here tonight in a benefit game for Leo Hughes, former forward for B. A. A., who lost his left eye as a result of injuries received in a game with the Fort Pitt team at Pittsburgh recently. Hughes who was captain of the Boston College hockey team of 1923, had been forced to abandon all sport competition as a result of his injury. The game tonight in which no rink rental was charged and in which referees furnished their services free, netted $3100. The game in which Hughes was hurt necessitating a subsequent operation, was a United States Amateur Hockey Association, Eastern Wheel contest.

BERLENBACH STOPS MAGUIRE IN THE FIFTH ROUND

Philadelphia, Feb. 9.—Paul Berlenbach, New York light heavyweight, added another victory to his list tonight by stopping Frankie Maguire, Williamsport, Pa., in the fifth round of a scheduled ten round bout. Maguire fought a game battle but was outclassed. At the end of the fourth round Maguire sank to the floor from exhaustion and shortly after the opening of the fifth round Berlenbach landed a hard bow to the body and Maguire went down. The referee then stopped the fight to save him from further punishment.

Zivic Kayos Tracy.

NURMI FAILS TO SMASH ANY RECORDS BUT WINS EASILY AT PORTLAND MEET

Portland, Me., Feb. 9.—Paavo Nurmi, Finnish distance champion, disappointed a large crowd of Maine track fans when he failed to approach by several seconds the world's record mark of 3,000 yards in winning the special invitation event at the second annual track games of Harold T. Andrews' post, American Legion tonight.

Nurmi's time was eight minutes, 14 2-5 seconds as compared with the world mark of seven minutes, 58 1-5 seconds for the distance, made by W. G. George, of England many years ago. Nurmi twice lapped the three Maine runners chosen as pace makers.

Joie Ray, of the Illinois A. C., met surprising defeat in the invitation three-quarter mile run. After running second to Leo Larrivee, of Holy Cross, for most of the distance, Ray was beaten for the second place by James Connolly of Washington in the driving rush to the tape. Larrivee led throughout. The time was 3 minutes, 16 seconds.

The world's record of six seconds for the 45 yard high hurdles was equalled by Carl Ring of the University of Maine, a dark horse, in winning the final heat.

Thomas Clausen of Boston A. A. scratch man in the 880 yard handicap, slipped through the large field to win in two minutes and eight seconds. McBay of Colby and Cullen of Boston University, with forty yard handicaps, were second and third.

The University of Maine ran away wrom New Hampshire university winning by a quarter of a lap in three minutes, 21 seconds, in their one mile relay. Brown nosed out Colby, with Boston university far behind in a thrilling three-team relay. Brown's time was 3 minutes 20 seconds, for the mile.

In the 600 yard invitation run, Geo. Marsters, Georgetown track captain, led from the start and defeated Ray Robinson of B. A. A. by 10 yards. Clarence Archibald of Bates was third. The winner's time was 1 minute 21 seconds.

Holy Cross one mile relay team defeated an All-Maine college team. The time was 3 minutes 16 2-5 seconds.

Wm. F. FOREMAN, HELD IN DETROIT, FIGURED IN NEW LONDON CASE IN 1921

(Special to The Bulletin)

New London, Feb. 9.—It is believed that William F. Foreman, a vaudeville actor, who appeared at the Capitol theatre in this city in November, 1921, is under arrest at Detroit, Mich., charged with burglary. Today the local police received a communication from Edwar H. Fox, chief of detectives of the Detroit police department, requesting the record of William Foreman, singer and dancer.

Nov. 20, 1921, Foreman and a woman, who claimed to be his wife, Rosalie, were arrested at Westerly at the request of the New London police, the woman, it being alleged, having stole $600 from George Lee, a Chinese restaurant employe, formerly of Norwich, while the couple occupied a room at a local hotel. After the money was stolen from beneath a pillow, Foreman and the woman disappeared, leaving New London about midnight. They went to Norwich by automobile and were traced to that city, from where they left a short time later for Westerly. The police of the latter city were requested to be on the lookout for the couple and when the public service machine arrived there with the man and woman they were taken into custody and brought back to New London by local officers. The crime of which the woman was charged could not be proven against the accused and she was allowed to leave the city, Foreman accompanying her.

Michael Badelli, proprietor of the series of bus lines in New London, is suffering from the fracture of several bones of the toes of the left foot, the injury being sustained Sunday when the bumper of one of the buses weighing 150 pounds fell on his foot.

No developments occurred today that might tend to solve the identity of the young woman found dead in her room at the Hotel Imperial, New York, Saturday afternoon after she had been abandoned by her companion, although the opinion is gaining credence that the woman belongs in this city.

The young man, who is suspected of having left the city with the supposed victim, and who was to have returned to his employment this morning, failed to put in an appearance and at the home of the girl it was stated that she left last Tuesday for the purpose of being married and that since then no tidings have been received from her.

The description of the dead girl tallies in some respects closely with that of the local girl, but the age of the missing girl and that of the hotel victim, do not correspond by a number of years, at least 10. However the girl and her supposed sweetheart are missing and the description of the dead girl closely checks up with that of the New London miss, excepting as regards the age, even to the undergarments as described by the mother and the New York police.

The only other person missing from New London or vicinity is John Stoddard, Groton, agent in the employ of the Prudential Life Insurance company and who mysteriously disappeared last Thursday. The name of a woman has not been linked with Stoddard's disappearance. He is married, having a wife and three children.

Edward Bergo, of Poquonoc Bridge, was arrested this morning charged with operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of liquor and with reckless driving. Judge Cornelius G. Cassello imposed a fine of $100 and sentenced Bergo to 60 days in jail. The imposition of the fine and jail sentence resulted from the arrest of Bergo last Thursday night when he operated his automobile through passengers who were alighting from and boarding a Groton & Stonington Traction company's trolley car on Thames street, seriously injuring Mrs. George Cassell and little son, of Mystic; Mrs. Archie Fletcher of Mystic, and F. C. Lyons Harris court, this city.

Grace Phelps, whose case of conducting a house of assignation in the borough, has been before the court several weeks, was held for trial before the next criminal term of the superior court.

Albert Foley, charged with breach of the peace, was fined $5 and costs, the complainant not appearing against the accused.

Gordon Crawford and Albert Musante, charged with violation of the automobile laws, each drew a fine of $10 and costs.

Edward Foley was in the police court this morning on a charge of theft that will prove to be a most serious offense if he is convicted—and the police say there is no doubt whatever as to that result of his trial. Foley resided on Brewer street in the house where Mrs. Richard Foucher was also a resident. The husband of the latter had arranged to send money to his wife to take her to Providence and she was looking for mail that would contain the funds she was to receive. She did not get the cash so she inquired at the house whether a letter for her had been received, but no one would admit that such a missive had come. Mrs. Foucher was not satisfied and made complaint to the police that her letter had been left at the house even though she did not receive it. That started an investigation and the running down of Foley as a suspect. Sergeant Hick questioned Foley, but the latter stoutly denied that he had any information as to the letter and said that money he had in his possession he won at a game of chance. Sergeant Hick was called to other work and Sergeant John J. Cavanaugh was told to look further into the case. He got information that led him to suspect Foley and he went so far as to intimate that he had the information to convict him. Then, it is understood, Foley went to Mrs. Foucher and gave her $5, saying "it was all right." That doesn't seem to be the situation, however. Prosecutor Cronin would not go to trial with the case today, but asked that it be continued for a week, that the post office department might act in the premises. Foley was held in $500 for trial next Monday. He obtained a bond.

The police officers told Prosecuter Cronin that it was "in the air," Sunday and Saturday, meaning that there were more cases of intoxication to be tried today than for a considerable time. Ernest E. Wright, colored, was found on Richards street, peering under a window curtain that was partially raised and in a room where a man and his wife were engaged in taking a bath in a wash tub, at 2 o'clock Sunday morning. That was a bad mess for Wright, for though he might never have been in such a compromising situation before, the police had been advised that there was a Peeping Tom in the vicinity where Wright was located and that he was annoying residents there. Policeman Braxton Hill discovered Wright and nabbed him after the latter had got set for his view of the room in which the bathers were busy. Wright explained in court today that he had been drinking all Saturday evening and that midnight found him "broke." He said he then sought to find Sam Taylor, an acquaintance, that he might get some cash from him. It was in search of Taylor, Wright declared, that he went to the yard where he was arrested. But Taylor resides eight houses away from the one where Wright was found. The explanation was such as the court would not accept so a fine of $25 was imposed upon Wright. He settled and went away with good resolutions recorded. Wright attributed his troubles to indulgence in whiskey.

Peter Gardella, of Fourth street, said he was not intoxicated Saturday night when he was taken into custody. Then he went right on to convict himself by saying that he did not remember anything about what occurred. He guessed his arrest was made about 4 o'clock and in that he guessed right for he was taken into the clutches of the police at 4.10.

Edward Spinnard was fined $10 for intoxication. He was celebrating on Sunday when Policeman Clarence Martin ran afoul of him.

Rock Zekos added one more offense to the long list against him when he was arrested for intoxication. He said he came home from work and with a friend indulged in some liquid refreshment that made him crazy. He finished up by kicking Mrs. Zekos. She works at the hotel and earns her living, so she didn't propose to stand that sort of conduct on the part of her husband. She complained to the police and Rock was arrested. He was fined $10. Saturday he drew $16 from his employer and had $4 of that this morning when he smilingly told the court all about his experience on Saturday.

John Kopack encountered a friend at Main and Hallam street, he said, and the friend gave him a drink from a bottle. The beverage tasted so good that John bought a half pint from the friend and paid him a dollar for it. That was the undoing of John, for he became so intoxicated that he went down on the walk and was there found by the police. He was taxed $5 to settle for his spree and was able to pay the necessary amount through the assistance of an acquaintance.

George Hall was fined $4 for parking an automobile so far away from the curbing on State street that a trolley car could not go by.

A city automobile truck in charge of Stanley E. Preston, of Waterford, and one of the New London-East Lyme busses were in collision on Water street, near State street, this morning. The damage was slight.

News has been received in New London of the death at his home, in Yonkers, N. Y., Saturday, of Robert Waller, son of the late Thomas M. Waller and brother of Judge Charles B. Waller of the court of common pleas and Attorney Tracy Waller, of this city. Mr. Waller died from pneumonia after an illness of only three days. Mr. Waller is also survived by two other brothers, John M. Waller, actor, and Martin Waller, a resident of the west.

The funeral of Daniel Sullivan was held this morning at 9 o'clock at St. Mary's Star of the Sea church and was attended by a large gathering of mourners. A mass of requiem was celebrated by Rev. Alexander Wollschaeger. The bearers were Timothy C. Sullivan, Jeremiah Twomey, Timothy Ahearn, Patrick Sullivan, Timothy Corcoran and Philip Sullivan, the last named of New Haven. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

Funeral services for Miss Abbie Jane Daniels were held this afternoon at 2 o'clock at 48 Shapley street. Rev. Chester H. Howe, pastor of the First Baptist church, officiated. Burial was in Cedar Grove cemetery.

Funeral services for Sergeant Frank S. Beckwith, U. S. A., whose death occurred at Walter Reed hospital, Washington, D. C. last week from paralysis, were held this afternoon at 2 o'clock at the residence of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Beckwith, 27 Willetts avenue, and was attended by many mourners, among them members of New London lodge of Elks and Niagara Engine company, of which organizations Mr. Beckwith was a member. The services were conducted by Rev. J. Romeyn Danforth, pastor of the First Church of Christ. Members of Niagara Engine company acted as bearers. At the grave in Jordan cemetery, a squad fired a volley and taps were sounded as the body was lowered to its final resting place.

The funeral of James Bond, well known Niantic resident, was held on Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock at St. John's church, Niantic. The services were conducted by Rev. Mr. Link, the rector of Niantic Episcopal church. Burial was in Union cemetery, Niantic, with the committal being conducted by Bay View lodge of Masons.

Andrew Smarst, of Uncasville; Joseph Lapare, East Lyme; Mrs. Thomas Quinn, Lewis street; Mrs. Lawrence Watson, Beiden street; Clarence Bennett, Williams street; William Giesing, Potter street, and Miss Lucy Savage, Williams street, patients at Lawrence-Memorial Associated hospital, were dismissed Sunday and today.

Don't disappoint the little folks tonight. Tuck a few rolls of Life Savers into your pocket when you're picking up your newspapers.

They are without question the purest and most wholesome candy you can take home for children.

Best for little tummies so easily upset by richer sweets. Best for tiny teeth that decay all too soon anyhow.

You can consistently be generous in giving Life Savers to children. It's much better to let children have the right kind of candy regularly than to give it to them only occasionally. They are less likely to over-eat and have ill effects.

RUM-RUNNING SLOOP'S CREW AND CAPTAIN ARE RELEASED

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, Feb. 9.—The crew of the sloop Josephine Maria, of Newport, R. I., of which Capt. Jeremiah Flynn is master, were given a hearing before United States Commissioner Earl Mathewson of Norwich, at the customs house here, this afternoon, charged with rum-running. Flynn and the four other members of the crew were released. The sloop and her cargo of 3600 gallons of alcohol are being held under guard at the state pier.

The Josephine Maria was captured Sunday afternoon about 19 miles off Montauk Point. When sighted, the craft was apparently headed for New Bedford, but two shots from the deck of the United States Coast Guard destroyer Jouett caused Flynn to bring his boat to a stop. The sloop was taken in tow by the destroyer and arrived in New London late Sunday night.

Captain Flynn and his crew were recently apprehended by coast guard craft when a boat which they manned was captured with a cargo of liquor. The crew were released at that time, but Captain Flynn drew a fine.

AILMENTS OF YOUNG GIRLS

Relieved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound School Teacher's Experience

Evanston, Wyoming.—"A few years ago I had troubles every month such as girls often have, and would suffer awfully every time. I was teaching school and it made it hard for me as I had to go to bed for two or three days. One day my mother suggested that I take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which I did, and it did wonders for me. In the course of a year I married and after my first baby was born I got up too soon and it caused a displacement. This troubled me so that I could hardly walk or do my housework. I knew what the Vegetable Compound did for me before so I took it again. It strengthened me and now I have five little kiddies. The eldest is six, the baby is five months old and I have twin boys three years old and a boy of five years. I do all my own housework, washing and ironing, and I never felt better in my life. I owe my health to your wonderful medicine." — Mrs. VERBENA CARPENTER, 127 2nd Avenue, Evanston, Wyoming.

"During 60 years of Married Life"...

Three Generations Kept Healthy and Happy

"Beecham's Pills were always considered indispensable by my parents during sixty years of married life and I am never without them in my home, as they are used when required by myself (aged sixty-one), and wife and children. This covers a period of over eighty years.

My wife and sons also believe there is no remedy for constipation and biliousness equal to Beecham's Pills.

So many so-called "cures" for biliousness and kindred troubles leave after effects that are certainly injurious, but Beecham's Pills give prompt relief and leave one in a healthy and happy condition." N. J. M. Ramsey, N. J.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

MARKET WAS IRREGULAR

New York, Feb. 9.—Violent fluctuations in the high priced specialties featured today's irregular stock market, standard industrials and rails indulging in a backing and filling movement.

U. S. Cast Iron Pipe made a sensational advance of 19 points to 214, a new figure, and closed at the top. The Commercial Solvents issues soared about 11 points and then forfeited more than half of their gain. American Can was run up 7 points to 173 1-4, the highest price in its history, and closed within a small fraction of the maximum quotation, most of the advance taking place in the last few minutes of trading. U. S. Realty common also was run up 7 points to 131. Most of these fluctuations were attributed to the activity of powerful speculative pools.

Other outstanding strong spots in the specialty list included American Sumatra preferred, Burroughs Adding Machine, Loose Wiles Biscuit, Bosch Magneto, Mathieson Alkali, National Lead and Radio Corporation, all of which closed from 3 to 6 1-2 points higher.

Approximately two dozen issues sold at their highest prices in a year more. American Smelting crossed 106 for the first time since 1917, but the other coppers were irregular despite the apparent establishment of the Red Metal market on a 15 cents a pound basis. General Motors was in brisk demand in anticipation of the increased dividend announced after the market closed, showing a net gain of 1 1-4 at the record top of 78 7-8. Du Point, which owns a majority of General Motors stock, advanced more than 3 points in sympathy, also attaining a new maximum at 149 1-2. New peak prices also were recorded by Hudson and Gardner Motors.

Nash Motors broke 8 1-2 points to 261 1-2, or near 30 points below its recent high. S. S. Kresge dropped 4 1-4 points to 494 3-4. Other weak spots included Manhattan guaranteed certificates, McGrory Stores and Chicago Pneumatic Tool

Outside of American Can pivotal industrials showed little change on the day. U. S. Steel common fluctuated within a range of 1 1-4 points, closing 1-4 higher at 127 1-2. Studebaker showed a slight fractional loss at 45 3-8. Baldwin closed unchanged at 134 1-2 after selling between 133 1-8 and 135 3-4.

Local tractions improved on publication on a report absolving the state transit commission of the charges of Mayor Hylan, alleging delay in subway construction.

Oils displayed a reactionary tone as a result of further profit taking and bear selling. Due to the threatened investigation of gasoline prices. Most of the rails also were backward, although Wabash preferred A, Texas and Pacific and Missouri Pacific preferred show independent strength and sold at new high prices.

Call money opened at 3 1-2 per cent, and then advanced to 4 and 4 1-2 as a result of the increased demand for funds and the calling of loans to make up the deficit in reserve reported in the clearing house statement last Saturday. There was little activity in the time money and commercial paper markets and the rates held steady.

Foreign exchange displayed a firm tone. Demand sterling was quoted around 4.78 and French francs were moderately active around 5 37 1-2 cents.

PLAN FOR CONSOLIDATION OF EASTERN TRUNK LINES

Washington, Feb. 9—A relatively unimportant application for authority to construct a new railroad line in Ohio served today as a vehicle by which the Van Sweringen plan for consolidation of more than 9,000 miles of eastern trunk lines was for the first time formally brought to the attention of the Interstate commerce commission.

The huge exchanges and purchases of securities incident to the tentative grouping of the railroads concerned have long agitated the railroad and financial world, and O. P. and M. J. Van Sweringen and their associates have from time to time made public parts of the scheme for combining the Nickel Plate, Chesepeake & Ohio, Pere Marquette, Erie and Hocking Valley Railroads, with subsidiaries but no formal approach to federal authorities with reference to the plan had previously been made.

It has been understood that permission of the Interstate commerce commission might be necessary to completion of the immense project, but no such permission has been sought, and it was not clear today that the proceedings so obscurely advanced with relation to the Ohio line proposal contained such a request.

The merged lines would represent an investment of $1,061,593,223, which was $126,337,874 in excess of the amount of capital stock and bonds which would be issued against it. The consolidated company would have current assets in excess of $107,630,000, and its income earning status was set forth in a statement that the constituent companies in 1923 had an income of $59,083,256, while for the first six months of 1924, their earnings had been $30,490,060.

LETTER TELLS OF THE MURDER OF ISADORE WISE

New York, Feb. 9.—Police today came into possession of a letter which they thought might confirm suspicions that Isadore Wise, head of a straw hat works at Beacon, N. Y., and resident of New York city, who disappeared last Saturday with a $1,200 payroll, was murdered.

Wise, as was his weekly custom, boarded a train in New York on Saturday morning, carrying the payroll for his plant at Beacon.

Today his relatives here received a letter purporting to be from his assailants. Written upon telegram blanks and addressed "General Post Office," it said:

"We had been waiting for the pay roll for the past three weeks. The dawn fool put up a fight and we had to throw him in the river."

The envelope contained, besides the letter, a bundle of business papers which Wise customarily carried in a memorandum book.

He was described as 43 years old, 6 feet and 1 inch tall and weighing 190 pounds—a man of good physique and excellent health who, his relatives said, would not have submitted to assailants without a struggle.

TO CONTEST PROPOSED SUNDAY CLOSING LAWS

Washington, Feb. 9.—A fight against proposed Sunday closing laws, both federal and state, has been started here by the Seventh Day Adventists' general conference, which asserted today that if the "plans of the Lord's Day Alliance do not miscarry," every avenue through the United States will be closed on Sunday except "those which lead to the church door."

"Beginning a drive against individual freedom that will be felt in 44 states this year," a statement said, the Lord's Day Alliance, "under the leadership of Dr. Harry L. Bowlby, its national secretary, has thus far introduced drastic sunday bills in the legislatures of New York, Indiana, Nevada and California, and into congress for the District of Columbia."

The statement gave a long list of drastic prohibitions on sports, amusements, and business, which it said was sought, adding that such a program would "turn back the wheels of true progress and civilization toward the thumb-screws, the racks, the gibbets, and the fires of the dark ages."

NO MISHAP TO STEAMER PRESIDENT HARRISON

Naples, Feb. 9 (By the A. P.)—The steamer President Harrison, of the Robert Dollar steamship line, left Naples last night for Genoa, agents of the company here stated today. They added that nothing had occurred to justify any alarm over the safety of the liner.

Marseilles, France, Feb. 9.—Reports through London that the liner President Harrison was in distress was taken here to be incorrect. None of the nearby wireless stations picked up any signals from her. She is due in Genoa this evening and a telegram from her agent there said her arrival as scheduled was expected.

CONFERENCE OF AGENTS OF THE COTTON INDUSTRY

Washington, Feb. 9.—A conference of representatives of all branches of the cotton trade, February 24, to devise means of preventing avoidable losses to the industry was called today by the department of agriculture.

The announcement said it was expected the conference would formulate a program looking to prevention of losses due to weather damage, to baled cotton, variances in baling, ginning, compressing, warehousing and handling methods generally. Considerable investigation has been done by the department along these lines, especially regarding standardization and warehousing.

JOHN M'CORMICK CANCELS ALL CONCERT ENGAGEMENTS

New Orleans, Feb. 9.—On advice of his physicians, John McCormack has postponed all concert engagements until March and will leave here for Miami, Fla., tomorrow, where he will spend about two weeks resting, it was announced here this afternoon.

Mr. McCormack arrived here Saturday and en route contracted a slight cold which was aggravated Saturday afternoon when he attended the races. He was to have appeared in concert tonight.

He announced he had originally planned to take a short vacation in March and that he would go now, filling his February concert dates in March.

Danger of an epidemic of diphtheria and small pox was foreseen in Vale, Ore., by city officials and others as a result of the flooding of Vale and surrounding territory through the bursting of the irrigation dam on Bully Creek.

POETRY

ENIGMANIA.

'Tis the voice of my father, I hear him exclaim:
"A word of five letters or more,
To begin with a 'Q' and suggest by its name
A kind of Mongolian door.

"For thirty-two over and fifty-eight down
Must join in a conjugal 'Z,'
And six is a river than ran by a town
On the Jimbo beginning with 'G.'"

Yet if one is assiduous, think is a cow,
And odum is a vender of cheese;
And east in the west, or a wig is a plow;
Do you think there is reason in these?

"Could I fathom this puzzle, I'd fill up the white
With letters correct as a scholar;
Here, Johnny," ('tis he), "if you figure this right,
Come around, and I'll give you a dollar".

FOUR LITTLE FOXES.

Speak gently, Spring, and make no sudden sound;
For in my windy valley yesterday I found
Newborn foxes squirming on the ground—
Speak gently.

Walk softly, March, forbear the brave blow,
Her feet within a trap, her blood upon the snow.
The four little foxes saw their mother go—
Walk softly.

Go lightly, Spring, oh, give them no alarm;
As I covered them with hemlock boughs to shelter them from harm,
The thin blue foxes suckled—
Go lightly.

Step softly, March, with [illegible] hurricane;
Nuzzling one another, [illegible] with pain.
The new little foxes are shivering in the rain,—
Step softly.

SALEMITES WILL OPPOSE PARTITION OF TOWN

The stiffest sort of a fight is to be made before the committee on cities and boroughs of the state legislature when the bill providing for annexation of a part of the town of Salem to the town of Montville comes up for public hearing before that body. In fact, Salem folks are quite excited over the bill which was presented by Representative Engler of the city of Norwich upon the request of a group of Norwich residents owning property at Gardner's Lake.

Alleged over-assessments of property values and claimed discrimination against out-of-town taxpayers by the Salem board of assessors is said to be back of the movement which Salem residents regard as extremely unusual and which they unalterably oppose.

The bill was scheduled for hearing a week ago and Representative Charles Malona and former Representative Jim Lane, of Salem hustled to the capitol prepared to give it a death blow in committee, but for some reason the hearing had been deferred.

Both Representative Malona and Mr. Lane were active about the capitol corridors and succeeded in corralling a number of legislators who were ready to lend assistance. Now that action has been deferred they are watching the legislative bulletin for notice of the hearing and the prospective verbal scrimmage.

The Salem men point out that instead of the Norwich men taking their alleged grievances to the board of relief for adjustment, that the quartet owning property at the lake quietly prepared a bill which if adopted, would give that section of Salem to the town of Montville. They state that Montville does not want any part of the Salem territory and that authorities of that town look with disfavor on the bill. Under the circumstances they see no reason why it should pass and the proponents of the measure are due for a period of hard sledding to make headway with it.

ICE CREAM IN SCHOOLS BRINGS SMILES AND TEARS

Children in local schools, numbering 1,567, were treated to ice cream Monday, with a view to bringing them up to the proper weight. This practice of serving ice cream to children in school, under weight, has been carried out for some time past in New London, Montville and Putnam, the ice cream being furnished by the two largest manufacturers in the state. The cream is cut five pieces to the quart and is served at recess in the morning. The children who are up to weight are allowed to go out and play while those underweight are kept inside the school and enjoy their ice cream.

Immediately after the practice was started Monday morning there was considerable opposition and a special meeting of the advisory board was called to take action on the matter. Some members of the advisory board believe that the best means of caring for the children under weight, would be to serve milk during school hours. This belief is also held by some members of the school board. Another reason advanced against the use of ice cream is that it works hardship on the children as some of them do not like to go without ice cream while other children can enjoy it. The distribution therefore has been held up pending action by the advisory committee.

The meeting of the advisory board will probably be called in the near future when final action on the matter will be taken. The serving of ice cream as means of promoting health among the children is not compulsory and does not take the place of milk which has been served at local schools during recess periods.

It is said that when the ice cream was distributed Monday there were several cases where tears played an important part. Speaking of the treatment a number of people have expressed the opinion that it seems like poor psychology to give ice cream to some of the children and not to all, that milk would be far better even though money were needed to keep up this practice.

AUTOMOBILE DAMAGED IN BREWSTER'S NECK COLLISION

While driving his Hupmobile machine from Poquetanuck to Norwich early Monday evening, John Gromko, of No. 31 St. Regis avenue was run into by a machine owned by L. P. Smith of Lebanon, registration number, 35-767. The accident happened near the Jewish cemetery at Brewster's Neck. Mr. Gromko's machine received two broken springs, bent axle, damaged steering gear and damaged left front mud guard. Mr. Gromko made a report of the accident at police headquarters.

LESSONS FROM WINTER FOR HUMAN LIFE

The noon meeting subject given at the Richmond Radiator Co., Monday, was Winter in Nature and in Human Life. Rev. Charles H. Ricketts spoke under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A.

The following is an outline of the thought presented:

The 147th Psalm is an expression of the abiding love of God. It is manifested toward his church, is seen in his mercy, is shown through his power. The lower animals come within the scope of his tender mercies. Special reference is made to his goodness through the outworking of his natural laws. Winter with its severities is designed for the betterment of his children. The following words characterize winter: "He giveth snow like wool, he scattereth hoar frost like ashes. He casteth forth his ice like morsels, who can stand before his cold."

1. Winter in nature and human life is neither accidental nor freakish. We often use the words "accident" and "freak" to cover up our ignorance, but it simply shows the limitation of our knowledge. God works through channels of law not yet understood by man. Back of natural law is a lawgiver who is infinitely good.

2. Winter is a period of cold which is needed both by nature and man. Perpetual July or even October would slowly assassinate both nature and man. Pests and poisons are killed in zero temperature. We need the cold to spur us on to the necessary activities.

3. Winter in nature and man is changeable, not unstable—not fickle, but changeable. A drop of 40 degrees in 24 hours is not unusual. Man has a right to change his mind when the facts warrant it. It indicates growth and progress. With more light we change our views of theology. A wise man changes his mind, but a fool never."

4. Winter in both nature and man is contradictory. Nature is both cruel and kind. Frost dislodges a boulder in a cave and pins a poor man down in agony. There is no mercy in the law of gravitation. Nature is kind. If one breaks his leg on the ice, the doctor may set it, but nature knits the bones together. Man is the cruelest of all animals (read history) he is kind. He helps Japan when the earthquake comes, India and China in seasons of famine; Armenia and Turkey when their children are starving.

5. Winter is beneficient. She gives to New England cold and longevity. White oak trees grow in her pastures and white oak men and women in her civil and religious life.

CITY SETTLES CLAIM FOR DAMAGE AT THERMOS CO.

A suit against the city of Norwich by the American Thermos Bottle Co., which was down for trial in the superior court in New London today (Tuesday) has been settled before coming to trial, the city paying for damages to an elevator and electric lights at the Thermos factory on Laurel Hill on Aug. 23, 1924.

The Thermos company made the claim that the elevator, motor, wiring and electric lights in one department of the factory were damaged when the city electric power was turned on in reverse phase by an employe of the gas and electric department, named Carrigan, after it had been turned off to cut off a pole line in the Laurel Hill neighborhood. Notice was given to Mr. Hastedt of Thermos Co., by Superintendent Pierce of the city electric department that the power was to be turned off and it was claimed that the arrangement was made that Hastedt was to be notified before it was turned on again. But without giving notice to Hastedt the power was turned on by the man named Carrigan and as the power was in reverse phase it caused motors to run in the opposite from the usual direction. It is alleged that Hastedt was waiting to take the necessary steps to protect the electric wiring and fixtures in the mill, but that Carrigan secured one Green an employe of the Thermos Co., to start the elevator to see what phase the current was in. Instead of going up the elevator went down, struck the bottom of the elevator shaft, destroying the base of the elevator, damaging the motors, etc., to the extent of $850 and depriving the Thermos company of the use of the elevator from Aug. 23 to Nov. 12, 1924. Further damage of $35 was caused by the burning out of the lights of one department of the Thermos factory.

Attorney E. W. Perkins was counsel for the Thermos company and Corporation Counsel W. H. Shields, Jr., acted for the city in making the settlement.

KNIGHTS TEMPLAR MAKING LOANS FOR EDUCATION

Following is a partial report by H. Wales Lines, grand treasurer of the Knights Templar of the United States and also treasurer of the Knights Templar educational loan and educational endowment fund, to date:

The grand encampment of Knights Templar, U. S. A., at its triennial session in New Orleans, Louisiana, April 1922, in compliance with and pursuant to a recommendation of Grand Master Joseph Kyle Orr of Atlanta, Georgia, established a revolving educational loan fund, which is to be available to assist worthy and needy students to secure a loan to aid them in completing the last two years of their course in the normal schools, colleges and universities of their state.

The grand master-elect Leonidas P. Newby, was authorized to appoint a committee, with full power to carry the plan into effect and did so.

The grand encampment also established an educational endowment fund, the income of which only can be used, by levying an assessment of one dollar per annum on each Knight Templar under the jurisdiction of the grand encampment, payable July 1 of each year; one-half of which was to form a part of the endowment fund, which was supplemented by a transfer of $100,000 from the fund of the trustees of the grand encampment. The total amount of this fund, Feb. 1, 1925 is $319,371.65. When the balance of the assessment due July 1, 1924 is received, this fund will amount to approximately $320,000. The total amount of the income from investments received to February 1, 1925 is $14,066.67.

There has been paid by the grand treasurer of the grand encampment before Feb. 1 to the treasurers of the several grand commanderies, to be loaned in their states and subordinate commanderies, under immediate jurisdiction of the grand encampment, to be returned loaned in their territory, $219,121.65. The total amount thus to be returned will amount to approximately $220,000.

These loans, in each jurisdiction, will be made by a committee of their own sir knights, appointed as their grand commander may direct. The loans are made, not exceeding $200 in one year, to suitable students upon their personal notes, given without security, with interest at five per cent. commencing upon the date of their graduation and the entire amount to be repaid, by annual payments, within four years from that date.

For Connecticut, five beneficiaries have been awarded loans of $200 each, making a total of $1,000.

RECKLESS AUTO DRIVER WILL BE IN HIGH COURT

The case of Edward Bourgo of Poquonoc Bridge, who was placed under arrest last Thursday evening by State Policeman Henry Albright of the Groton barracks on two charges, of reckless driving and driving while under the influence of liquor, was heard on Monday in the Groton court. His arrest followed an accident at the Ship and Engine waiting station, at the intersection of Poquonoc and Eastern Point roads, when Bourgo drove past two standing trolley cars and struck eight passengers, who were being transferred from one trolley car to another. Bourgo was bound over to the May term of the superior court by Judge C. C. Costello in town court Monday morning, after the accused was found guilty on both counts and fined $100 and costs on the first and sentenced to 60 days in jail on the second.

Attorney George Curtis Morgan, counsel for the defense, demurred to the sentence of the court, but the demurrer was overruled.

Attorney Morgan then took an appeal from the decision of the court and the accused was released on bond of $1,000 for his appearance before the superior court.

Prosecuting Attorney Warren B. Burrows stated that this case of reckless driving while under the influence of liquor was the most serious that had ever come before the Groton town court and declared that the court would not be doing its duty unless a jail sentence accompanied the fine. Attorney Morgan stated in defense of Bourgo that the past record of the accused was very good and that he had driven for ten years without a mark against his record.

REVENUE TAX RETURNS SLOW IN COMING IN

The internal revenue collector's office for the district of Connecticut reports that filing of federal income tax returns is behind schedule this year. It is estimated that the total number of returns filed is 1,500 below the number at this time one year ago.

Individuals and corporations receiving income tax blanks are reminded that early filling out of return sheets does not mean the tax must be paid now. Time, patience and haste can be saved by presentation of the return at the internal revenue collector's office at an early date. Aid will be given so that the entire return is carefully made out, it was announced. The filled out return can be held until March 15 and then mailed with an enclosed payment.

OSGOOD LODGE EULOGIZED THE LATE JOSEPH WOOLEY, JR.

The regular meeting of H. H. Osgood Lodge, No. 6920, I. O. O. F., M. U. was held in Steiner hall last week with George Lake, noble grand, pro tem in the chair. Routine business was transacted and one candidate initiated. A part of the evening was set aside for eulogizing of the life of the late Joseph Wooley, Jr., a past provincial grand master of the district of Connecticut. Several of the officers and members spoke of the exemplary life of Mr. Wooley and as a mark of respect all the members stood in silence for one minute.

Birds Noted at Norwich Town

It is noted at one feeding place Up Town that birds come for food in larger numbers and more often just before a hard snowstorm, and so at such time boxes have to be refilled. The chickadees with their cheery note are winter favorites. Watching one the other day coming along the vines as it hopped into the feeding box the note of chick-a-dee-dee came clear. The nuthatch, downy woodpecker and especially the chickadees come regularly to the feeding place after the larger birds that often peck at them have gotten their store. If pieces of suet are cut very fine such are left by larger birds.

Migratory birds are according to the terms of the 1918 treaty with Canada under federal jurisdiction, and how the passage of the Migratory Refuge Bill securing breeding, resting and feeding places during migration essential to the passage of birds along lines of their migration,—is being urged. This bill is made necessary because now settlements and villages along migration lines have sprung up taking up the waste places where formerly on long flights large flocks of birds could alight for rest.

Mrs. Grouse.

Thunderer the Grouse and Mrs. Grouse had a very comfortable winter so far. Old Mother Nature gave them their snow shoes early, and so they had had no difficulty in getting about on the soft snow. To be sure they had had to live largely on buds, and they had grown very tired of this food. But it kept them alive and in good condition, and they never went really hungry. So, seeing how hungry some of their neighbors were at times, they felt that they had no reason to complain.

No, Thunderer and Mrs. Grouse like to sleep under the snow. It is always warm there, and whenever the snow is deep enough they spend their nights buried under it. One danger only they fear. That is that while they are asleep under the snow it may rain and then form an icy crust, and so make them prisoners. But so far this winter there had been no icy crust, and so they had had no reason to worry.

The Black Shadows had come creeping into the Green Forest extra early one afternoon. This was because dark clouds hid the blue, blue sky. Just about the time Thunderer and Mrs. Grouse were ready to go to bed it began to snow. They sat together in a spruce tree making ready to plunge down into a bank of snow just below them. But Mrs. Grouse was uneasy.

"Do you think we'd better sleep down there tonight?" said she. "I don't know why I have it, but I have a feeling that something is going to happen."

"Pooh!" cried Thunderer. "Why should anything happen tonight any more than any other night?"

"I don't know," replied Mrs. Grouse. "But I don't like this snow. It is too wet."

"Pooh!" exclaimed Thunderer again. "You ought to be tickled to death to have it snowing. It will cover up the holes you make when we plunge into that bank down there. Then if Reddy Fox or Old Man Coyote happen along they'll never even suspect that we are underneath. For my part I am glad it is snowing. Come on my dear, let's go to bed."

But Mrs. Grouse was still uneasy and anxious. "Let's roost up here in this spruce tree," said she.

"You can if you want to," retorted Thunderer. "I'm not going to. When I can have a comfortable, warm bed

To be sure they had had to live very largely on buds

under the snow you won't catch me roosting in a tree all night. Don't be silly, my dear. It is getting dark, and I'm not going to sit up here any longer."

He stretched out his neck, and with those bright eyes of his looked carefully in every direction to make sure that no one was watching him. Then without another word he plunged down into that snowbank. He went down so swiftly that he disappeared instantly. Mrs. Grouse saw the snow fall back behind him. She knew that he would work his way along for some distance under the snow. Twice Mrs. Grouse started to follow him, and twice she drew back. But she didn't want to spend the night alone in that tree. So at last she, too, plunged into the snow and worked her way along until she was some little distance from where she had entered the snow bank."

"I guess I was foolish to be anxious," thought she, as she settled herself for the night. "There really isn't anything to worry about. In the morning I probably will wonder what was the matter with me." Five minutes she was sound asleep.

HOME CHAPTER MEETING WAS A VALENTINE PARTY

At this meeting which was in the form of a Valentine party, all passages of Scripture read, hymns sung, etc., during the introductory exercises, were those wherein the word heart is used, and the word heart was also brought into the prayers offered.

During the business session, reports were submitted and approved and one member was initiated.

The chapter decided to meet for work at some member's home the third Tuesday of each month for an indefinite period. Each member is to bring her own lunch and the hostess each month is to serve tea and coffee. The first gathering of this kind is to take place Tuesday, February 17th, at the home of the leader, Mrs. William E. Manning, when the members will assemble for an all-day sewing bee, commencing at 10 o'clock.

During the meeting little red candy hearts tied with a string and having a verse attached, which were attractively arranged on a glass cake plate were passed around, each member reading the verse attached to the heart received by her. The dainty hearts were the artistic work of Mrs. Manning and her sister, who prepared enough so that every member of the Johnson Home family was presented one. The meeting closed with prayer, after which during the social hour, under direction of Mrs. Charles Marsh, chairman of the entertainment committee, tea and wafers were served.

The waitresses had valentine aprons and caps. At the next meeting of the chapter in March, the twenty-eighth anniversary is to be celebrated with some special observance.

PROPOSE JITNEY ROUTE TO LEBANON CENTER

Henry F. Billings, secretary of the public utilities commission has issued notification to town and city officials that a hearing by the commission will be held at the common council chamber in the town building in Willimantic on Friday, Feb. 13, at 9.35 a. m. on the application of Charles P. Cahill of Hartford and Frank Lynch of Willimantic for a certificate to operate a jitney line over the following route: Railroad street to and over Main street, over Brick Top hill to Windham Center, back to South Windham and then to Hyde's Corner in the town of Franklin and to Lebanon Center, all by way of state road. It is not known whether there will be any opposition to the line applied for by Cahill and Lynch whose application calls for a terminal of the line at Lebanon Center. Former applications for a jitney route to Norwich from Willimantic taking in the section of the country noted above were opposed by both the Central Vermont and the Connecticut company and the applications denied. The petitioners set forth that the route applied out does not conflict with the transportation companies. It is expected that residents of The Windhams" who would be benefitted by the proposed jitney route will be present at the hearing in its behalf. At the hearing Cahill and Lynch will present a schedule of proposed trips over the route, fares to assigned points and running time.

NEW YORK ALDERMEN SHELVE AN ANTI-HYLAN RESOLUTION

Mayor's Political Opponents Carried Transit Fight to the Aldermen in Resolution to Commend the Report Made by Judge McAvoy—Mayor Hylan, at Palm Beach, Continues by Wire to Denounce the Report of the Supreme Court Justice—The Report Holds Mayor Hylan Responsible for New York's Transit Snarl.

New York, Feb. 10—While Mayor Hylan, on a Palm Beach holiday, continued his telegraphic denunciations of Supreme Court Justice McAvoy's report holding the city administration responsible for New York's transit snarl, the mayor's political opponents today carried their fight into the board of aldermen.

Here a resolution was introduced calling upon the aldermen to commend the "un-biased, non-political" McAvoy report, and recommending to Governor Smith, that "if the mayor of this city further tries to block transit relief he be summarily removed from office."

The resolution was introduced by a republican, Alderman Quinn of Manhattan, and was admitted without a chance for adoption because the board has only eight republicans against the democratic membership of fifty-seven. It created considerable commotion before it was relegated to the rules committee through motion of a Hylan adherent. Soon after, the democrats forced an adjournment of the meeting, and hurriedly left the hall.

Mayor Hylan, continuing his long-distance attack on the McAvoy report, characterized it as a "whitewashing" of the three members of the state transit commission, whom he accused of political manoeuvers aimed at shelving him as a third-term mayoralty candidate in order that the "traction interests" might be enabled to "clean up over a billion dollars."

The democrats were obviously nervous as the meeting of the board of aldermen opened and attempted to have it adjourned, but were overruled by Samuel J. Burden, democrat, who was presiding. Then Quinn took the floor and offered the resolution. There was turmoil throughout the chamber as a clerk read it. Amid shouts, cries and schaping of feet, the clerk finished the reading. Then quickly followed reference to the rules committee, adjournment and the door-ward rush of the democrats, with Quinn, still on his feet shouting at them:

"You are afraid of that, eh?"

He was jeered and there were shouts of "you stay there and tell 'em."

The mayor charged that the "traction interests" planned their "billion-dollar clean up' by fare increases, sale through the machinations of the state transit commision price, and the acquisition of bus franchise control by "the interests."

In Brooklyn, a bus operator who opened two new lines last Saturday under permission of city authorities, discontinued them today because, he said, Justice McAvoy's report had held such lines to be illegal. He denied that his action was taken at the request of members of the Hylapd administration.

FURTHER TESTIMONY IN ATLANTA PRISON HEARING

Atlanta, Ga., Feb. 10—(By the A. P.) Further testimony relating to the alleged sale of special privileges at the Atlanta Federal penitentiary and a dental by one of the witnesses, a prisoner, that he had been threatened with prosecution if he did not testify against the defendants, today marked the trial of A. E. Sartain and L. J. Fletcher, deposed warden and deputy, respectively, of the prison and Laurence Riehl, Columbus, Ohio.

Sartain, Fletcher and Riehl are charged with conspiracy and bribery, the indictments against them having been handed down by a federal grand jury during a government investigation of the penitentiary.

Willie Haar, convicted in the Savannah "Rum Ring" exposure and sentenced to the Atlanta prison, was on the stand most of the day, following Samuel Rothberg, Atlanta business man, who testified relative to a $15,000 bribe offer he made Fletcher.

Haar testified he paid Riehl $10,500 for "soft jobs," at the prison for himself, two brothers, Fred Haar, Jr., and Earl Haar; his father and Fred Haar, Sr., Sam Goldberg, Richard Bailey, C. C. Tuten and Graham Braught, all of whom were convicted in Savannah for violation of the prohibition laws.

Rothberg told the jury he had informed Fletcher early in 1924, that if the latter would "take care," of Fred Haar, Sr., Willie Haar would "see to it," that the deputy warden was given $15,000. In March, 1924, Rothberg said Fletcher told him not to "take any money, that the deal was all off."

Willie Haar testified that he had made this agreement with Rothberg, but that later Riehl and Father Thomas P. Hayden, then a chaplain at the prison, had come to Savannah for the money. Then it was, he said, that Riehl was paid the $10,500.

Under cross examination Haar admitted he had never paid Sartain any money directly.

Defense Attorney Howard asked Haar if he had not been threatened with prosecution if he did not testify against the defendants. The attorney asked if the threat had not been made when Assistant Attorney General Donovan, Washington, D. C., District Attorney Hager and F. L. Dodge of the Department of Justice, were at the warden's home one night during the investigation. Haar replied in the negative. No confession was made by him until Father Hayden told him that he (Hayden) had confessed his part in the alleged conspiracy, Haar continued.

All the Savannah "Rum Ring" prisoners received special privileges as the result of the payment of $10,500 and additional amounts, Haar testified.

FOG CAUSED GROUNDING OF SHIPS IN BOSTON HARBOR

Boston, Feb. 10—Several craft were aground tonight in Boston harbor as the result of trying to find their way through the dense fog which almost without intermission has shrouded the shipping channels today. The British steamer City of Boston, carrying a cargo from the Orient and bound for New York grounded on the mud of lower middle. It was believed that she would be reflected on the high tide tonight.

The police boat Guardian, was stranded on Ram Head Bar. A tug was sent to aid the boat tonight. The fishing schooner Mayflower, was stuck on the same bar.

Throughout the morning a fleet of more than a dozen ships which had come from distant ports of the world were anchored below, waiting for the fog to unbar the entrance to Boston. A slight lifting of the vapor banks late in the afternoon enabled them to slip in as far as quarantine. Narrow escapes were reported frequently as huge black shapes with screeching whistles loomed up through the mists. No collisions were reported however.

MISS ETHEL LEGINSKA IS TO RESUME CONCERT TOUR

Boston, Feb. 10—Miss Ethel Leginska, English pianist, who disappeared on the eve of a concert she was to have given in New York, stated that she would resume her concert tour on February 23 when she will play in Joplin, Mo. She will give a recital here in March and a few nights later will lead the Peoples' Symphony Orchestra.

LEGISLATIVE COMMITTEE HEARINGS YESTERDAY

Hartford, Feb. 10—Legislative committee work began with animation today and many of the rooms in the state capitol held audiences throughout the afternoon sesion.

Before the committee on military affairs a plea was made for an appropriation for a new armory at New Haven, a project which has been advocated every session for a dozen years before this committee, only to fail when the bill went to the committee on appropriations.

Today the arguments were made by Brigadier General J. J. Haggerty, Colonel L. L. Field, of the 102nd regiment, Colonel George E. Hall, Adjutant General Cole, Representative Ford, Judge Gilson and others. Most of the speakers were agreed on a description that the present armory is a "ruin" neither picturesque nor historical, that it was a disgrace to the city and state, and its continuance for military purposes was an injustice to the young men who are giving their time in National Guard service.

The bill for a new armory at Bristol, was also advocated by a delegation from that city.

Before the cities and boroughs committee a large delegation from East Haven appeared to protest against the bill which would annex the town to New Haven. There was no one to support the bill and an unfavorable report may be expected.

Before the same committee there was support for three Norwalk bills, one to give the mayor power to appoint patrolmen, another to make veteran policeman and firemen eligible to pensions and the third relating to the appropriations for libraries in that city. Mayor Robbins and Corporation Counsel Cuneo spoke in opposition to the bills explaining that they did so because of a vote of the city council which was against the measure. Both spoke officially in opposition while personally they liked the bills.

The judiciary committee had before it many bills concerning amendments to court charters in many cities and towns.

ICE JAM FEARED IN ST. LAWRENCE RIVER VALLEY

Ogdensburg, N. Y., Feb. 10.—Experienced rivermen here anticipate one of the worst ice jams in the history of the St. Lawrence river valley as the result of continued warm weather after the heavy snowfall of two weeks ago. Only another cold spell, the temperature moderating slowly, they declare, can avert losses to property owners along the St. Lawrence and tributaries.

This year, long before the usual time, brooks and rivers are pouring unprecedented amounts of water into the St. Lawrence, and while the ice bridge between the United States and Canada still is intact, water several feet deep has accumulated on it and is fast wearing away the ice. When this huge mass breaks and crashes down through the narrow channels below Ogdensburg, hundreds of boathouses, summer camps and even small hamlets will be in its path.

Two years ago, with spring breaking earlier than usual, Morrisburg, an Ontario village, six miles below Ogdensburg, fought for two weeks to avert destruction. The huge ice floes piled in front of the village and formed a dam, sending water into the streets and sweeping away buildings along the river bank.

SIMPLE FUNERAL SERVICES FOR THOMAS W. LAWSON

Scituate, Mass., Feb. 10.—Simple funeral services for Thomas W. Lawson, noted financier, were held this afternoon from "The Nest," the home of his son, Arnold Lawson on the Dreamwood estate here. Services were conducted by the Rev. John W. Sutter of Boston. The body was laid to rest beside that of his late wife, in the family vault a short distance from his son's home.

Willis Austin was elected to the directorate of the Lumber Dealers' association of Connecticut at a meeting in Hartford last night.

NOTHING NEW IN SAND CAVE MYSTERY; SHAFT DOWN 40 FEET

Cave City, Ky., Feb. 10.—(By the A. P.)—Miners working in the Sand cave shaft, through which they hope to reach Floyd Collins, already imprisoned more than 11 days, struck comparatively easy going below the 40-foot level late today.

The shaft now is somewhat more than forty feet deep, H. T. Carmichael, director of the work, said, but no measurement has been taken. Some dirt was mixed in with the rock uncovered this evening and workers expected to make faster progress for the next few feet before the strata again changes.

Chief interest swung today to Cave City where a military court of inquiry held at the call of Governor William J. Fields, heard several witnesses relate what they had done and what has been done to their knowledge, to aid Collins.

The investigation was made because of charges by certain persons that others had not acted properly in the rescue work and on account of reports and stories circulated in regard to the situation at the cave, including a rumor that the entrapment of Collins might be a hoax of some sort. The governor's circulation of such reports was unfortunate, as they tended to impede the rescue work.

Stories reciting some of these rumors were sent out by various correspondents. In a statement issued in connection with the inquiry, the governor mentioned the Associated Press despatch on the subject.

The despatch, in part, said that some persons had expressed doubt that Collins was trapped in the cave, but that those "who actually reached Collins are firmly convinced his leg is caught so he cannot release himself."

Skepticism and speculations among the spectators as to Collins' fate were common knowledge to newspapermen and the fact was so recorded along with statements that any hint of a hoax was discredited by men in a position to speak authoritatively.

Testimony given today by William B. Miller, reporter for the Louisville Courier Journal, Lieutenant Robert Burdon of the Louisville fire department and B. G. Fishback indicated there was no doubt in the minds that Collins was firmly trapped in the place where he had been visited by rescue workers. Miller, Burdon and Fishback all testified they had talked to Collins in the cavern.

Miller related how he had endeavored to free Collins by removing rock from around his waist. Burdon told of finding food strewn along the passageway in the cave, presumably, he said, by those who had failed to reach the prisoner with it. Burdon also described to the court his efforts to free Collins by pulling him bodily from the hole with a rope harness. Fishback advanced a hitherto unrecorded theory that the victim's foot was not pushed down into a crevice by a boulder but that rock had fallen underneath the foot and pinned it to the roof of the tunnel.

The shaft tonight at 8 o'clock was something over 40 feet, according to unofficial estimated. The banana oil was sprayed down the original sand cave tunnel Sunday night, and the geologists and mining experts searched caves in the vicinity for scent-laden air but without avail. There has been a noticeable downdraft in the tunnel despite the rockslide which prevented rescuers from further attempts of rescue in that manner since early Thursday.

Further tests with the amplification device attached to the electric light wire leading down to Collins, late today, gave what the physicians here asserted was absolute proof that Collins still is alive.

A series of raspy noises, interrupted the regularly timid, faint rattle in the head phones, indicating, the physicians declared, that Collins was caughing or moving about.

The breathing sounds in the receivers, at the rate of 20 times a minute, after the "coughing" sound had ceased, dropped to 11 or 12 times a minute, indicating, physicians said, that Collins had fallen asleep.

Samuel H. Matlack, a Louisville contractor, surprised the court late this afternoon with the assertion that "a man's life was being sacrificed for the hope of hero worship" and added that the man he meant was William B. Miller, the little Courier-Journal reporter, who went further into the cave over Collins' body than anyone else.

"I went into the cave approximately 34 feet, although Gerald objected to allowing inexperienced men going down, because of the danger of further cave-ins," Matlack said.

"Gerald objected to the plan to use my acetylene torch, because the heat of it might cause further cave-ins and the possible lack of ventilation because of the fumes. Miller insisted I couldn't get down because I was too big and not experienced, but he offered to take my torch down and try it while I operated it from the tank.

"That man wanted to be a hero," Matlack said.

"Who?" Captain Chaney asked.

"William B. Miller." Matlack answered.

"This stuff about the cave-in of big rocks is not true. It was rubble, small rocks and dirt and could have been removed without any trouble. I would be willing to go down there now."

Requests Hearing on Wheeler "Dry" Bills

State's Attorney Alcorn Asks Assignment for a Week From Friday Afternon.

Hartford, Feb. 10—State's Attorney Hugh M. Alcorn appeared before the judiciary committee at the capitol this afternoon and asked that the bills drafted by Chief Justice Wheeler and a committee of state's attorney's, making more strict the state prohibition enforcement act, assigned for hearing a week from Friday afternoon. Mr. Alcorn said that the advocates of the bills would conduct the hearing without bringing any "super radicals" before the committee and probably would take an hour and a half, but not over two hours for the presentation of their case. He said that bills would be advocated by the three state's attorney's who assisted in their preparation.

WOLF DEN IN POMFRET TO BECOME STATE PROPERTY

Hartford, Feb. 10.—The Wolf den in Pomfret, made famous by the exploit of Gen. Israel Putnam, is to become a part of the holdings of the state park and forest commission. At a meeting tomorrow at the capitol the commission will act on the acceptance of a deed to forty acres of land, on which the Wolf den is located, from Elizabeth Porter Putnam chapter Daughters of the American Revolution, of Putnam. The purchase of the land was authorized at the January meeting of the commission.

The state will secure the property at the price the chapter paid for it 25 years ago. Although the organization has spent considerable amounts in preserving the den as a historical resort, these will not be added, as the conveyance is made "for the purpose of perpetually preserving the Wolf den as nearly as possible in its present condition, that it may be freely visited by the public, and in order of have the forest cared for in accordance with the general aims of the state park and forest commission."

NO ALL-CONN. EXPOSITION IN GRAND CENTRAL PALACE

Hartford, Feb. 10.—The project for a huge All-Connecticut exposition in the Grand Central Palace, New York, received its death blow this afternoon when at a meeting in the Phoenix Mutual Insurance Company hall, representatives of various state organizations interested in agricultural, industrial, and commercial welfare of the state voted decisively to abandon any attempt to push the project.

The meeting was called by the Connecticut Chamber of Commerce. Only four of the assembled representatives voted in favor of the project, fifteen voted against it and twenty-one declined to vote. The fact that the consensus of opinion showed the leading manufacturers of the state, as disinterested in the proposed exposition is believed to have caused the adverse vote.

SIX PERSONS KILLED IN FOG BY A LOCOMOTIVE

Chester, Pa., Feb. 10—Looming out of a heavy fog onto a crowded grade crossing at Marcus Hook, near here, a freight locomotive today crushed out the lives of four men and two women, injured two other persons, and demolished a motorcar and motortruck.

The dead:

John F. Newlin, Linwood, a carpenter.

Joseph Colona, Marcus Hook, helper to Whitman.

Those injured were Mrs. Gertrude H. Mowry, Chester, and Francis McGowan, Linwood. A number of other persons were slightly hurt by flying glass and debris.

Sabatine Bostillo, gate-tender at the crossing, was later reported to have told Lieutenant N. H. Keech, of the railroad police, that he had raised the gates, permitting traffic to flow across the tracks, unaware of the approaching engine, which was obscured by the fog.

The bodies of Whitman and Colona were carried on the front of the locomotive for some distance beyond the crossing.

Francis McGowan, who was injured, said that a slip on a piece of ice probably saved his life. Newlin, his father-in-law with whom he was walking at the time, being killed.

"I fell backward," McGowan said. "As I did so, the locomotive came rushing down and caught my father-in-law, then plunged into the automobile and motortruck. If I had fallen forward, I would have been killed, too."

County authorities and railroad officials are investigating the accident.

Coolidge Firm For an Economic Inaugural

Washington Inaugural Committee Releases Pledges of $100,000.

Washington, Feb. 10.—Calvin Coolidge's ideas on economy were made applicable today to the ceremonies of his inaugural as president of the United States.

Having found Mr. Coolidge unrelenting in his desire for a simple and inexpensive inauguration, the Washington inaugural committee, composed of business men of the capital, at a meeting today rescinded virtually all of the appropriations made for the unofficial part of the ceremonies and voted to release from payment subscription pledges amounting to $100,000.

Contrasted with inaugurals of a decade or more ago, when the unofficial part of the ceremonies represented expenditures running into several hundreds of thousands of dollars, the Coolidge induction into office promises to involve a local cost of probably less than $500. Erection of stands at the capitol where official ceremonies will be held, will cost about $35,000, but that will be provided for by congress.

Plans abandoned today included preparations for construction of a court of honor along Pennsylvania avenue in front of the White House, along the same avenue, and an even the erection of stands elsewhere ing display of fireworks on the Mall.

Mr. Coolidge's insistence that the inaugural parade be limited to units of the army and navy in the vicinity of Washington and to such governors of states as desire to come with their staffs—not to exceed 100 in number—led to the local plans.

Business men of Washington have been accustomed to subscribe large sums for the unofficial ceremonies and count on receipts from the sale of tickets to reviewing stands along Pennsylvania avenue for reimbursement and sometimes for a dividend.

This year, with Mr. Coolidge determined on a parade requiring not more than 45 minutes at the most to pass a given point, there appeared to be little sale for the tickets to stands and consequently slight chance of reimbursement for subscribers.

Mr. Coolidge has started work on his inaugural address and his present plan is to make it brief. He has chosen as his model in that respect the first inaugural address of President Cleveland, which required about 15 minutes for delivery. Survey of the field to be covered, however, may lead to the inclusion of so many subjects as to make it much longer than he desires it to be.

ANTISEPTIC TO CLEAR UP INFECTIONS OF KIDNEYS

Baltimore, Md., Feb. 10.—The discovery of a new antiseptic, used recently in Johns Hopkins hospital here to clear up long-standing infections of the kndneys and the urinary tract, was elaborated upon at the Johns Hopkins School of Hygiene and Public Health today, following a preliminary announcement of the discovery by a medical journal. The new antistptic, named hexyresorcinol, is said to be fifty times as strong as carbolic acid in its power to kill disease germs, and yet so harmless that it can be swallowed without injury.

Dr. Veader Leonard, chairman of the clinical committee on internal antiseptics of the national research council, who developed the germicide in the Hopkins laboratories, said that he and his associates had spent ten years in research to perfect it.

He first fed the antiseptic to rabbits. Dr. Leonard said when the animals showed no ill effects, he swallowed some of it himself and was not harmed. Assumed of its harmlessness, he and six men who were working with him began to take daily doses of increasing size to study its effects in the body.

It was then that the antiseptic was applied for the first time by Dr. Leonard to the actual treatment of disease. In some cases, infections of the kidneys which has been of long standing, were cleared up in 48 hours, according to the records. The cures appeared to be permanent, it was said. And the patients showed no signs of having been harmed in any way.

Dr. Leonard said that a committee of 15 has been appointed by the National Research Council to work with him in further researches to determine how broad may be the application of hexyiresorcinol to disease in general. The substance is also being sent to a number of medical schools and hospitals throughout the country for additional tests.

RADIO SET FOR MYSTIC ORAL SCHOOL FOR DEAF

Hartford, Feb. 10.—A radio set is soon to be installed in the Mystic Oral School for the Deaf. There is a certain something about the vibrations imparted to the deaf through individual earphones which make it possible for them to enjoy the rhythm of the musical programmes that are broadcast, said Superintendent W. J. Hucker today. At present, the institution has a piano, upon which the pupils lay their hands to experience the rymthemical sensations transmitted by the vibrations. Mr. Tucker appeared before the legislative appropriations committee and requested, among other items, a linotype machine to teach advanced pupils to be operators.

HOUSE PASSES POSTAL PAY AND RATE INCREASE BILL

Measure Was Passed Without Record Vote, After Less Than Two Hours of Debate—Bill Has Been Sent to the Senate, Where a Somewhat Similar Resolution Had Been Adopted—It is Temporary Legislation, Pending a Study of the Question With a View to Permanent Revision.

Washington, Feb. 10—Without a record vote the house passed today the Kelly Postal pay and rate increase and sent it to the senate, which already has passed a somewhat similar measure only to have it turned back by the house as infringing on its exclusive prerogative to originate revenue-producing legislation.

Brought up under a special rule which limited debate to less than two hours, barred amendments from the floor and required two-third majority for passage, the measure was approved in about two hours without a record vote. It would raise $61,000,000 in revenue—about twice as much as the senate bill—and fall short by only $7,000,000 of the sum estimated to be required to meet postal employes' salary raises, which it would make available from January 1, 1925.

Only a few scattering "no's" opposed its passage, although 97 members had voted against the method of bringing it up, while 245 favored it. As in the bill passed by the senate the rate section is intended to remain in force only long enough for congress to act on recommendations to be made by a joint congressional committee which is authorized to study the whole postal rate structure with a view to permanent revision.

Representative Moore, republican Ohio, who reported the bill, emphasized that the right of free distribution for newspapers and publications in the countries in which they are printed and published is not disturbed by this bill.

Elisha Hanson, Washington representative of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, in a statement tonight, reiterated the cotention that there was "no sound reason for the present paying users of the mails to be called upon to pay for the increased postage provided in the bill which passed the house today unless it be the intention of the administration to make the postoffice department pay a profit on its services to the public.

"Reports of the department on the business handled during the seven months of the current fiscal year, which have elapsed since July 1, last," he argued, "indicate that there will be for this year a net increase in revenues of more than $35,000,000 over the previous years business. As the department had a deficit of less than $15,000,000 last year these reports indicate a profit of this years' operations of more than $20,000,000.

TREATY WITH GERMANY CONDITIONALLY RATIFIED

Washington, Feb. 10—The German commercial treaty was ratified today by the senate with reservations understood to be not wholly acceptable to the state department.

The principal reservation would give congress the sole authority to put into force preferential tariff duties in favor of American shipping at any time within one year after exchanges of ratifications.

Another would reserve to both nations the right to control immigration and was made necessary because of the enactment of the immigration restriction law after the treaty was negotiated in December, 1923.

Ratification was without a record vote and was preceded by only brief discussion, the reservations having removed objections.

The reservation relating to preferential tariffs was a substitute for the one suggested by Secretary Hughes and approved by the foreign relations committee. Under its provisions, the president alone could have abrogated those sections of the treaty preventing discrimination by either nation in favor if its shipping through tariff duties.

This reservation met with so much opposition on both sides of the chamber that the substitute was agreed upon to expedite action on the treaty. Under its terms provisions in the treaty prohibiting discrimination would be abrogated automatically in 60 days after congress passed a discriminatory law, provided such action was not taken within ten months after exchange of ratifications.

The treaty, as negotiated, was intended by the state department to become a model for similar conventions with the other principal maritime powers.

CAUSE OF RECENT EXCESSIVE PREVALENCE OF TYPHOID

Washington, Feb. 10.—Investigation of the recent "excessive prevalence" of typhoid fever in New York, Chicago, Washington and several other cities has led the public health service to conclude that the disease was caused by shell oysters distributed by a company operating within the vicinity of West Sayville, N. Y.

"The preponderance of evidence is that the general supply of no large distributor of oysters was uniformly infected," said a public health statement issued today, "but that oysters infected in one or more beds or parts or parts ofone or more beds, at or one or more floats, and constituting but a small proportion of the total were introduced and distributed with a large supply of oysters of good sanitary quality."

The period of excess prevalence of typhoid was said to have been between October 25 and December 26, 1924.

LAFOLLETTE INSURGENTS TO RESENT EXPULSION

Washington, Feb. 10.—The question of reading the LaFollette insurgents out of the republican ranks promised to come squarely before the caucus of house republicans called for February 27.

This was clearly indicated today when Representative Sinclair of North Dakota, one of the dozen insurgents not invited to the caucus, announced that he proposed to attend the session and remain until "voted out."

The Sinclair statement gave rise to speculation as to the possibility of a break in the ranks of the house insurgents and was accompanied by rumors that Representative Lambert of Wisconsin, and other might follow his example.

Mr. Lampert declined to comment on the reports, but Mr. Sinclair declared he had been elected as a republican, and intended to continue to consider himself a member of that party until otherwise notified.

Office Hours: 9:00 to 12 m.; 1:30 to 5 p. m.

At the annual meeting of the Willimantic Welfare Bureau a nominating committee of three was appointed to bring in a list of names for the directorate of the organization at a special meeting to be held Feb. 23. The names will then be voted on at the March meeting. The committee as named by Mrs. Robert H. Fenton, vice president, acting president during the absence of M. Eugene Lincoln, consists of ex-Alderman John P. Carlsen, Miss Annie Smith and James P. Bath. These three will interview members who can give promise of acting if elected directors. The report of President Lincoln, which was read at the annual meeting, was in the nature of a greeting from Florida, where he is spending the winter. The reports of the officers were read by the secretary, Miss Elizabeth Anderson. In the report of Treasurer Pierre J. Laramee it was shown that the balance on hand on Jan. 31, 1925, was $385.33, as compared with $431.91 in 1924. A detailed report of the activities of the bureau during the year was given by the secretary, Miss Anderson. Another matter to be taken up at the special meeting will be a report of the nominating committee relative to certain changes in the by-laws.

Arthur Greene, 25, was given a fine of $25 and costs, amounting to $32.15, and a 30-day suspended jail sentence, when found guilty of a charge of theft in the police court Tuesday morning. Following a slight let-up after the holiday season, another drive for funds will be opened here this (Wednesday) evening by the Visiting Nurse association. The organization finds that its resources are sadly depleted and some fifty loyal citizens, men and women, have agreed to attend a supper at the Chamber of Commerce this evening and participate in the drive. Each worker will solicit ten people to subscribe to the fund and these names will be turned in at another supper next Monday night. The Visiting Nurse association needs no formal commendation. Its work to relieve suffering has placed it high in the estimate of the local public. Free baby conferences are conducted weekly under the supervision of Dr. Laura B. Hills, who advises mothers as to the care of children as regards clothing, nourishment and proper health conditions. Bi-monthly free chest clinics are held by Dr. Hugh B. Campbell of Norwich—and cases of tuberculosis are detected while in the incipient stage and cured, through prompt and proper care and nourishment.

The heating case of Abraham and Molly Krug, instigated by Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Peck on a charge that during the past winter months the Krugs have failed to keep a tenement owned by them, and occupied by the Pecks, at a proper temperature, was again continued in the police court Tuesday morning. The case has held the attention of the court and the public for several weeks and Prosecuting Attorney Harvey made a solemn promise that some form of disposition would be arrived at next Saturday morning. When the case was called Tuesday morning both defendants were absent. Their attorney, William A. King, asked for a short recess and when court resumed Mrs. Krug was on the spot but she stated that her husband was sick and could not leave the house. Physicians attending Krug were communicated with and they backed Mrs. Krug's statement that her husband was in bed. There appeared to be no alternative but to order another continuance and it was granted by Judge Foss.

Older residents in the city are authority for the statement that in no instance during the memory of some of the oldest has a fog of such density and such long duration settled over Willimantic. Some of the boys who visited England during the World war called it a real London fog. The fog curtain for 48 hours led many to talk about past weather experiences, including the fitful weather of the winter of 1920. At that time a series of snow, rain and hail storms, followed by freezing temperature, halted traffic. Three trolley cars were anchored in ice packs between this city and Baltic. South Coventry trolley car service was abandoned until St. Patrick's dya, March 17.

Gradually lifting during the forenoon, the fog had practically disappeared at 1 o'clock Tuesday afternoon and the sun peeked out for the first time in two days.

John Leary, 26, died at St. Joseph's hospital at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon. He had been ill about a week. He was employed as a moulder at the Smith-Winchester Manufacturing Co. plant in South Windham. Mr. Leary was the son of Patrick and Catherine Donovan Leary. Surviving him is his mother, Mrs. Catherine Leary of Ireland, three sisters, Mrs. John Murphy of this city, Miss Catherine Leary of New York city and Miss Nellie Leary of Ireland, and five brothers, Patrick of Ansonia, Cornelius of Norwich and Daniel, Humphrey and Timothy of Ireland.

One harbinger of spring is the annual return of the popular sport of marble playing. Even at this early date rugged urchins can be seen seated on the ground with the coveted aggie between their knees.

Leon T. Wilson of Putnam, United States deputy internal revenue collector, has been assigned to duty in this city and will be here from March 2 to March 16 to receive reports from men and women regarding their income taxes for the year 1924. Mr. Wilson has been assigned to this city for the past four years.

To gain an idea of the number of unemployed men in the city one need only take a glance at the police court gallery on mornings when court cases are scheduled.

Leonard Meunier, 17, who was brought into the police court for disturbing the peace of the Residence hall of the local State Normal school when detected peeking through the bedroom windows, is being sought by the police. Meunier was ordered to return to the court the day after the trial but he failed to do so and as near as can be learned he left town.

The Catholic Daughters held a whist party of 18 tables at the home of Mrs. T. E. Sullivan Monday evening. Mrs. Sullivan and Mrs. L. P. Allain were hostesses. Prizes were won by Mrs Alice F. Thompson, first; Miss Bertha Moriarty, second; Mrs. Walter J. Costello, third, and Miss Phyllis Moran was given the consolation award.

Noting the eighth birthday of her daughter, M. Elizabeth Moran, Mrs. Edward F. Moran entertained at a birthday party of twenty little friends in the afternoon. Pretty valentine decorations were arranged about the room and the table.

One flapper stated Tuesday that there was one good thing about this foggy weather, it was the best thing for naturally curly hair, but her companion insisted that such hair was as scarce as the proverbial hen's teeth.

Mrs. F. A. Cook entertained members of the Old Penny Sunshine circle on a recent evening, the event taking the form of a valentine party. At a brief business meeting Miss Thelma Clark was chosen treasurer and Miss Thelma Slack secretary.

WINDHAM PLAYERS TALK OF GIVING A PAGEANT

(Special to the Bulletin)

Willimantic, Feb. 10—At a meeting of the Windham players held Tuesday evening at the Windham Center school a constitution as drawn up by Professor Seckerson was presented by the president, Mrs. Frank Barber and was adopted by the club. There was a very good attendance. "Two Crooks and a Lady," a play in one act, was excellently presented under the direction of Mrs. Albert Sonnischen. The cast follows: The Crook, Eden Cook; Lucile, the maid, Miss Miss Elsie Ericson; the lady, Miss Marie Rizzo; the nurse, Miss Marguerite Cook; the officer, Clarence Beckwith; the plain clothes man, Carl Josephson. The play was very well cast and very smoothly presented. Miss Rizzo's interpretation of the lady was excellent. Mr. Cook did exceedingly good work as the crook.

Additional members elected to the executive committee, were, Rev. James F. Graham and Mrs. E. K. Leffingwell. It was suggested that in preparation for the 226th anniversary of the Windham Congregational church to be held on the tenth of December of this year, a pageant be prepared and be given by the players. Examples of interesting facts in the annals of the town which might be suitable material for a play were suggested by Mr. Graham. The history from which he read is one of the oldest in the library dated 1801. Another proposal that is to be tried in this club is the reading of current and standard plays by the members not actively engaged in work on the circuit.

EXCHANGE CLUB ENTERTAINS ROTARY CLUB AND GUESTS

(Special to the Bulletin)

Willimantic, Feb. 10—When the Exchange Club entertained the Rotary Club and several guests at the Congregational church house, Tuesday evening the return meeting proved one of the most interesting and entertaining in the history of the local service club. Diversified with good jokes, fine talks both spirited and humorous and excellent singing, the session was snappy from start to finish. President George E. Wilcox presided, a klaxson automobile horn served him as a gavel. At his right sat President Harry W. Standish of Rotary and at his left was Acting Mayor George W. Hickey, also of Rotary. Another guest at the head of the table was Rev. Arthur H. Wheelock of the Congregational church. About 75 were gathered about the board. The delicious chicken supper was prepared and served by the Congregational church Thimble club, Mrs. W. C. Norris, leader. The proceeds were for the church redecorating fund.

Among the guests were Professors E. W. Sinnott, Ralph Walker, George Lamson, and H. L. Garrigus of Storrs, R. H. Kelpner of the Hockenbury Hotel system, Capt. S. N. Bobo, vice president of the American Hotel Corporation of New York, Bert C. Hallock, George F. Taylor, Ernest Bottomley, Arthur Clark, Clifford J. Alpaugh and Channing H. Morrill of this city. Knives and forks had barely gotten busy when President Wilcox aroused enthusiasm by his welcome to the visitors. Song Leaders Charles H. Caswell and John Ahern immediately led in a series of popular song hits. Later President Standish accepted the welcome on behalf of Rotary. Then Harold Lincoln and Tom Donnelly appeared on the floor in the role of Mr. Gallagher and Mr. Shean. Their original parodies proved a knockout.

Acting Mayor Hickey was called upon and he gave a fine talk on the achievements of the community within recent years in civil and social lines. James P. Bath as president of the chamber of commerce gave a talk of an informal nature. Rev. T. Hawthorne Jones, introduced as the original spring-bok from South Africa, painted a vivid picture of South African life and customs and related incidents leading to the discovery of gold and diamonds in that country. There was more singing and Professor E. H. Sinnott, Ph. D., of Storrs, led his audience into the study of the science of life which was of highly educational value. At this point President Wilcox turned the burden of announcing over to Principal Pop Case and with a mysterious introductory talk Pop presented Coach Donnelly as the little Eva of exchange. Towering six feet from his O'Sullivan's heels to his vacant scalp, Don burst forth in a volume of oratory, not attempting to loosen a few rafters but merely relating his life's history. As a reward for his oratory Don's right hand was solicited for many hearty shakes, upon adjournment of the meeting at 10 o'clock.

Women have named it "white magic"

because it saves their strength

A million magic bubbles for a new-fashioned washday

ITS real name is Chipso.

Last washday it saved for thousands of women a precious hour which was once consumed in chipping, shaving, or melting old-fashioned cake-soap, in prolonged hard rubbing, and in tiresome repeated rinsings.

And these women didn't spend a cent more for their Chipso washing than they formerly spent when they used ordinary laundry soap. Yet Chipso not only saved their time—it saved energy and saved clothes; it brought beautiful white results; it assured safety to colors and fabrics.

Another washday is coming soon

You must have Chipso then.

We have called Chipso "Quick Suds" because it expands into a veritable mountain of bubbly whiteness, almost the instant it touches the water.

Its users call Chipso "white magic" because it washes so quickly and easily and beautifully, by any method. Boil with it, soak with it, use it in the washing machine—Chipso and water are all you need.

If you have been using powders and chipped soaps that make you sneeze, Chipso's clean, powderless whiteness will give you a new conception of convenience without discomfort.

Don't go through another moiling, dreary, old-fashioned washday. Chipso is at your grocer's now. Big blue-and-orange packages fairly bursting with value and helpfulness.

At the Connecticut state capitol, Hartford, a judiciary committee hearing was scheduled Tuesday afternoon when an act was to be considered for amendment concerning the salaries of the judge and prosecutor of the town court of Stonington. It is understood that the amendment contemplated the raising of the judge's salary from $500 to $750 annually. When the salary section of this act was originally drawn the vast increase in court business caused by liquor and automobile cases was not thought of or figured at the time of placing the officials' salary. Just how great this increase has been can be seen in automobile cases when during the summer time of increased automobile traffic, state police officers from Groton barracks have notified the clerk of the Stonington town court to be in readiness to hold court every Monday morning. If a liquor case comes to trial, so many witnesses are summoned that the auditorium of Borough hall has to be requisitioned in place of the town court room and there have been held trials which occupied more than half a day.

The Stonington town court was established in May, 1893. For the first five years of its existence there was an average of 89 cases a year. In the period Sept. 1, 1923, to Sept. 1, 1924, there were 198 criminal cases, two juvenile and 6 civil cases or a total of 206. The revenue derived to Sept. 1, was $892; costs collected $949.89; fines received, $635, or a total of $2,480.39. Out of this amount was paid $500 to the judge, $500 to the prosecuting attorney and the witnesses' fees. The clerk received no salary for his services, so that it appears that the town court is more than self-supporting.

Present at the hearing were Representatives Charles Champlin, and Mason Manning, from the town of Stonington and Stonington Town Court Clerk Albert G. Martin of Pawcatuck, who presented the court figures. No opposition appeared in this judiciary committee hearing, or in the other cases which were brought before it.

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

State highway department engineers are engaged in a survey of the highway leading northward from Morin avenue, at the northerly line of the borough and the end of the concrete trunk line highway toward Dayville Four Corners. This is taken as forecasting that another stretch of concrete highway is to be built on this route this year in the progressive plan of constructing an all concrete highway between Putnam and New Haven, via Danielson, Jewett City, Norwich and New London, as outlined sometime since by State Highway Commissioner John Macdonald in an address at Norwich. From Putnam south several miles of the new concrete highway have been constructed and are in use. About four miles more must be built to connect up Danielson and Putnam on this splendid road. Construction of another long stretch of this highway was undertaken in the town of Plainfield last year and will be completed in 1925.

Here in Killingly the stretch that remains to be built is between Morin avenue and a point about a mile north of Attawaugan. This is an all macadam route at the present time. Between the borough line and Elmville this old macadam highway, built about 30 years ago, is battered and patched. It was not built to withstand such tremendously heavy traffic as it has been subjected to in the past decade and has had a tendency to break down under the test. Especially in the spring season has the section from Morin avenue to Elmville given trouble, breaking through at times and letting trucks and other motor vehicles down through the surfacing into the crushed rock beneath. This has been a late winter and spring experience for several years. Everything possible has been done to make the road last and to keep it in reasonably good repair, but it appears to have gone past its period of usefulness and is to be replaced by a modern concrete road that should endure indefinitely.

Water mains were put in along the edge of this highway as far north as Elmville from Judd avenue last fall, that no extensive excavating might be necessary along the route after the new roadway is put in. The water company is to proceed in the rear future to change its connections with its old main along that section to the new mains, from which residences in that territory are to be served.

It is understood that the borough of Danielson has a tentative offer for the old borough hall building on Water street. This structure has been abandoned for all borough purposes for many years and for a long time has been rented for a soda manufacturing business. There is a possibility, it is said, that the property will bring several thousand dollars if sold. Certain considerations are for the time being holding up further progress of negotiations.

Long ago the old borough hall building, a two story brick structure with basement, housed the fire apparatus kept in the central section of the borough, provided quarters for the firemen, while in the hall on the second floor the borough meetings were held. Ages ago, it now seems to those who recall the fact, the borough police station was in the basement of the building.

With the construction of the new central fire station in Academy street and the need, as the population increased, for a larger hall for the business meeting of the borough, the building was abandoned for borough purposes, a new police station have been constructed in the basement at the rear of the town hall building.

It would appear that it would be good business judgment for the borough to sell the property if it can obtain full value for it. It is of no further use to the borough and though it produces some rental, this is considerably offset in upkeep and such repairs as have to be made on all structures from time to time.

This spring, as soon as the season permits, the Crystal Water company will undertake another large extension and replacement operation in its system of mains. Beginning on the Elmville highway at Judd avenue, the water company will put a line of new 10-inch mains through Judd avenue to Connecticut Milla avenue. A further extension of 10-inch mains will be made through Mechanic street, from a point near Westfield avenue to Academy street. The line through Judd avenue will be a new one. Through the section of Mechanic street mentioned the new 10-inch mains will replace the 6-inch mains now in use. With the operation herein outlined completed there will be two lines of 10-inch mains feeding water into the borough and it is not likely that pressure will be reduced thereafter if fire hydrants are in use.

Incidentally, the company's reserve supply of water has been materially increased since the weather became warmer last Saturday and the thaw that prevailed from that time through Tuesday began. Higher water also noted in the rivers Tuesday as the snow and ice disappeared. This fact is appreciated by manufacturing concerns that depend in some degree on water for power. In numbers of cases that have been unable to depend in any material degree on their water supply for power since the first of the year.

The body of Fred C. Leavens, 58, was brought from Hartford, in charge of Undertaker L. E. Kennedy, Tuesday morning, to the home of Mr. Stevens in Wauregan. Mr. Leavens died at a Hartford hospital Monday night, after a surgical operation similar to one which he underwent several years ago. He had been a patient at Hartford only a few days and the announcement of his death came as a surprise to the many friends of the family all through this territory.

Mr. Leavens was born in Foster, R. I., a son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Leavens. For many years he had been a resident of this territory. He was at one time superintendent of the town farm for Killingly and over another period of years was in charge of the farm and outside work for the mill company at what is now Goodyear. For a number of years Mr. Leavens has been in charge of the Wauregan company farm at Wauregan, this farm maintaining a large herd of fine cattle.

Mr. Leavens leaves his wife, who before their marriage was Miss Mabel Griggs, of Brooklyn and three daughters, Mrs. Mattie Grant of Hartford and Barbara and Priscilla, who are at home.

At Wauregan Tuesday morning the death of Mrs. Louisa Daigneault, 89, long resident there, occurred. Mrs. Daigneault, a widow, died at the home of her step-son, Wilfred Daigneault. She was a native of Canada, but had lived in the United States for years.

Tuesday was another day of dense fog all through this section of eastern Connecticut. The general sense of opinion appeared to be that fogs are getting boresome. Those who have been obliged to travel the past two days have found it not only dangerous, but extremely trying. More of the ice and snow disappeared under the influence of the fog during Tuesday and that is a compensation. Showers in the morning and the late afternoon were features of Tuesday's weather.

Attorney E. L. Darbie, speaker of the house at Hartford, injured his shoulder and was shaken up, when he slipped on the ice and fell on a concrete step, while leaving his home on North Main street. But he was able to be in Hartford for Tuesday's session of the legislature.

Members of the Bohemian club and many who responded to their invitation to be present enjoyed a whist party at the rooms of the club Tuesday evening. Refreshments were served.

Members of Danielson Building and Loan association have received reports of the condition of their organization from the officials. The resources are, as of the first of the year, $132,077.50. The original issue of shares of the association formed in 1916, now have a value of $135.80.

Rather than proceed through the fog, some heavy trucks engaged on long distance hauls, remained here over Tuesday night and will resume their trips this (Wednesday) morning.

There were no developments of special interest Tuesday, relative to the burglary at the Goldwater store.

Netleton. Derby, state vice regent, and Mrs. John Y. Buell, Litchfield, vice president-general for Connecticut, were guests of the chapter and were numbered among the speakers of the afternoon. There were present large delegations from Elizabeth Porter Putnam Chapter, of Putnam, and Deborah Avery Putnam chapter, of Plainfield. All told, about 75 were out for the meeting which was held in the parlors of the Baptist church. Miss Bernice Coggswell of Dayville regent of the local chapter, presided and presented the speakers. Miss Nettleton, as treasurer of the Ellsworth Home Association, devoted much of her talk to that institution. Mrs. Buell talked on the same topic as Mrs. Bissell and in addition, remarked on the socialistic tendencies of the time.

A special feature of the meeting was a paper giving the history of the local chapter from its foundation and enumerating the many good works the chapter has accomplished. PUTNAM

Notwithstanding the conditions of the roads, Henry B. Buell of Eastford expects not less than fifty and possibly double that number at the institute in fruit growing to be held at the Congregational church on Woodstock Hill today (Wednesday). It is to be conducted by the Windham County Farmers' association cooperating with the Quinebaug Valley Fruit Growers' association of which Mr. Buell is president, and the Connecticut Agricultural College Extension Service. The State Pomological Society will also be represented by one of its officials.

Last year the institute attracted a great deal of attention, the value of the papers and the discussions and addresses being widely heralded. The program this year promises to be even more interesting than that of last year.

H. B. Buell, president of the Quinebaug Valley Fruit Growers' association will call the meeting to order at 10.15 a. m. W. H. Darrow, fruit specialist from Storrs, will talk on New Ideas in Fruit Growing Methods, to be followed by a discussion on Farm Storage of Apples, by H. B. Buell of Eastford, L. H. Lindeman of East Woodstock, Ernest Buell of Plainfield and William C. Child of Woodstock. After the lunch hour the first speaker will be Frederick E. Cole, formerly extension fruit specialist of the Massachusetts Agricultural College and at present manager of the Nashoba Apple Packing association, with headquarters at Littleton, Mass. Mr. Cole's talk on Why Carefully Packed Apples Win on the Market, together with how his organization handles fruit to the best advantages, will be exceedingly practical and many valuable points in connection with marketing will be suggested by those present. At 2.15 the question box will be opened and any matters considered that the officers of the Q. V. F. G. Association desire to present for the consideration of those present. Partly as a result of the Quinebaug Valley Fruit Growers' association real progressive accomplishments in fruit growing have been brought about in Windham county.

Home owners, newlyweds and everyone having home needs will find it to their advantage to get in touch with George F. Davignon of 172 Main St., Danielson, special representative of the Plaut-Cadden Company, eastern Connecticut's largest distributors of home furnishings, pianos and victrolas with stores in Norwich and New London. He has a message of economy of interest to everyone.—adv.

The fog lifted Monday night, but 10 o'clock Tuesday morning it was so dense again that objects a short block away were hardly discernible. The heavy pall lasted during the day and at 4 o'clock one could hardly see more than 100 feet away. Automobile drivers who couldn left their machines in their garages but those who had to drive say that they never had to contend with more difficult conditions. There have been reports of numerous near-accidents.

Woodstock avenue residents as usual are first to observe the harbingers of spring. Two robins were seen last Friday on the avenue and Sunday there were several.

FINED IN WATERFORD FOR CRUELTY TO ANIMALS

Walter Dean of Waterford was fined $1 and costs Monday when he was found guilty in Waterford court of cruelty to animals, having abandoned a horse in Gallows Lane, Waterford on Jan. 19. The accused was arraigned before Justice of the Peace J. James Floyd and pleaded guilty to the charge.

It was brought out in the testimony that Dean owned two horses and had sold one of them. He left one horse tied to a tree in Gallows Lane and took the other one to the stable. When he went after the horse that had been tied to the tree he found that it had broken the tether and had wandered away. Later he received a message from Frank Scott of Waterford to whom he had sold one of the horses. Dean thought Scott meant the horse that had broken loose and therefore did nothing more about it. In reality, Scott had referred to the horse that was in the barn.

A few days ago the stray horse was found and a report was submitted to County Humane Agent Frederic H. Wyant, who investigated the matter and placed Dean under arrest. The horse was in a sorry plight when found, having wandered several days without proper food and shelter.

BOY SCOUT WEEK.

Having reached its 15th anniversary, there is good reason why the members of the Boy Scouts should be enthusiastic over its observance this week. This is the organization of which President Coolidge says: "I believe that the Boy Scouts of America have a great future before them, and constitute a real force for good citizenship."

Since its institution the Boy Scouts have had a direct influence upon 2,000,000 boys. It is an influence that has made an excellent impression and the results not only bring widespread commendation but call for the continuation and extension of the work.

Whatever is based upon bringing about better citizenship, bringing boys into closer touch with those things in which they are bound to be interested and in which they must have direct contact in later years, teaching them to be useful and self reliant cannot get too much support and encouragement.

Scouting, in teaching boys to get at an early date the right rules of the game of life, in teaching them to go modestly about their tasks doing good deeds and inspiring them to do something worthwhile is rendering a service that is most praiseworthy, for what helps the boy of today helps the citizen of tomorrow, and it is to be remembered that the influence of Scouting is bound to extend far beyond the limits of the organization. There is the good example that is set which has a salutary effect upon others, and there is a crying need in these days of prying the boys away from the idea of looking forward to a career of idleness and giving them to understand that there is a responsibility resting upon them as boys and as future citizens.

There is gratification to be found in the addition of 100,000 new members during the past year. It shows the hold that this organization has upon the boys, their parents and their friends for the reason that it has been tried and found to be the very means of reaching many problems which needed solution.

ALIEN PROPERTY FUNDS.

While Senator Borah has come forward with his appeal for the immediate return of the property under the control of the alien property custodian to the German owners, it is to be realized that the Idaho senator has urged many things which have not met with the approval of congress. We have no reason to believe that this plan will be adopted.

When this property was seized, belonging as it did to Germans who had invested it in this country, it was only what Germany had done regarding American property in Germany, and it is now being held for the purpose of safeguarding the claims which Americans have against Germany for one thing and another.

There are claims against Germany by individuals amounting to a third of a billion, and there is a bill of a quarter of a billion which Germany owes this government for the expense involved in the maintenance of the troops on the Rhine. The expectations are that these claims will be paid. There is the Paris agreement and there is the Dawes plan. Reliance is placed in the successful outcome of these. Consideration has been shown Germany and the other countries have decided how the reparations are to be distributed.

Senator Johnson has indicated his distrust of the Paris agreement, but now Senator Borah would have us hand back to Germany the security which insures the meeting of the American claims. He would have us stand in the position of the person who made a loan and then tore up the mortgage which he held upon property as a security for the payment of the borrowed money.

If there is uncertainty about the working of the Dawes plan and the Paris agreement there is certainly good reason why his suggestion should be promptly turned down. If the plan and the agreement work out under trial as it is expected, there may be some arrangement made for the return of the Germany property before the debts are all discharged, but the best assurance of getting respect for the agreement and the plan lies in the retention of the security until it is possible to get something approaching a definite idea of what Germany is going to do. We don't want to do anything which will make it necessary for Uncle Sam to pay for the damage which Germany did with its submarines.

FOG.

It only requires the covering of the land with a dense blanket of fog to create a better impression of the danger that is involved in the navigation of coastal waters or the high seas under similar or worse conditions.

When it is impossible for those vehicles which run on tracks, or those which have a certain fixed course to keep from colliding with each other, it can be appreciated what the position of the navigator is who must depend upon compass and the signals from others going in the same or other directions.

Fog is one of the great menaces to water transportation. Considering the large amount of such traffic there are remarkably few serious accidents, but there is imposed the task of taking care of others as well as self. It means the exercise of every precaution to insure protection. Radio, submarine bells, whistles and other devices are employed with good results. They serve to remove some of the handicaps of the fog, but they have not eliminated it.

Fog is vapor condensed to fine particles of water in the lower part of the atmosphere which interfere with its transparency. Efforts to dispel it, efforts to penetrate it and efforts to stop it have been fruitless. Perhaps someone will be able to devise a means in the future for doing what no one has been able to do in the past. It is one of the goals that is open to scientists and others. The importance of such a discovery can be readily appreciated. It would be the cause of the greatest satisfaction to those who guide ships and would eliminate not only collisions and the piling up on shoals and reefs, but it would also overcome the halting of much water transportation which is unwilling to take chances.

When it will arrive no one knows, but the coming of the day when the fog dangers are removed will be a most happy one for those who navigate ships.

JUDGE GARDINER GREENE.

Not in Norwich alone, but throughout the state there will be deep appreciation of the loss that has been sustained in the death of Judge Gardiner Greene, whose life and influence spread over three score and fourteen years have been most conspicuous as a citizen, as a lawyer, as a judge and as a churchman.

For a decade Judge Greene served with credit to the state and himself on the bench of the superior court, his training and ability, as demonstrated in practice, having admirably fitted him for such service. He was one of the leaders of the bar of Norwich and New London county, deeply concerned in the welfare of the community, a citizen of high standing, a man of high ideals and sound judgment. His judicial temperament made him an excellent choice for the judgeship and had not the age limit prevented he would unquestionably have been a member of the state supreme court of errors.

A man of fine personality, pleasing address, keen intellect and dignified bearing, Judge Greene was a gentleman and a lawyer of the old school whose death removes a conspicuous figure from the community and one long and favorably identified with community activities.

BRITISH-FRENCH DEBT.

While there has been so much talk about debt payments between nations, there cannot fail to be interest in the negotiations which are being undertaken between the British and the French.

Great Britain has made a proposition to France, which may or may not be accepted. France reacted favorably at first. After some deliberation it is inclined to think that there is need of elucidation on certain points. Thus it may be necessary to get together for a quiet discussion of certain provisions, but there appears to have been put forth what promises to be the basis for a settlement.

France owes more to Great Britain than the British are asking for. It is recognized that they were partners in the war, fighting for a common cause and getting common benefits. Thus while Great Britain furnished a larger sum to France than it seeks in return, it does take the position that there should be a guarantee on the part of France that it will pay such a proportion of what it owes Great Britain as will permit the latter to settle its debt with this country.

The British proposition is to the effect that it will cancel all of the French debt except that part which it is necessary to apportion to it among the European nations in order that the British may have enough to pay the United States. The British will include the reparations that are to come to it from Germany, but it is unwilling that France should claim immunity in case it should develop that German reparations failed.

It is a case where Great Britain seems disposed to cut the French debt, but it is not willing to wipe it all out because it must settle with this country. The situation is one on which there should be no great difficulty in coming to an agreement, and while it is a different position than is taken by this country concerning the war debts it would appear to make it easier for France to meet its obligations in this direction.

WHY HE WEPT

"Take shoes—men always notice feet. Herbert is tearing down the street intent on beating the old man back to the office when directly in his line of view he glimpses a pair of twinkling feet, nifty pumps and with the seam of the hosiery straight in the back, just as it should be. They are feet, which are peppy and brisk and Herbert likes them instantly. With a connoisseur's pleasure he raises his eyes to have a look at this attractive girl and finds she is 53 years old with spectacles and four chins. A psychologist could delineate the shock to Herbert's sensibilities better than I can. You see his boyish faith is totally wrecked and it reacts on his dealings with his fellow men.

"Wherever a man goes he is eternally seeing straight, trim backs ahead of him, backs that look as though trimmed down flat on the tennis court or the links or a horseback. There is absolutely nothing so youthful as a flat back. Middle-aged backs hump in odd spots and are convex, looked at from any direction. They are what they seem or at least they have been. Why, one could really date them—unconsciously he recognized at first glimpse the 40-year-old back, the 50 and the 60. He could do it instantly and have the rest of his time to settle the affairs of the nation. It is quite different just now. I don't know why bookmakers don't set up on corners and give odds on backs for the sake of the intrigued populace. 'Thirty to one that the blue Poiret twill is not more than 20!' he would shout. 'Three to one that the sleek black satin is 18!' Why, folks would be so sure that they would bet their heads off and of course, sometimes they would win. But, rarely!

"The Herberts I have mentioned return to the office almost sobbing because having admired one of these youthful backs for three blocks and finally having caught up with it and hastened past in order to bestow an interested though totally reserved and respectful stare upon the little beauty, they have discovered that viewed from the front she is somebody's dear grandmamma and had totally abandoned the use of the rouge pot, powder puff and eyebrow brush about 1901.

"After a man has been dashed in this fashion you invariably will see him glance hastily around the horizon to find out whether any one he knows has seen him get fooled.

"As I mentioned, their brains don't match their expressions. I don't see how they could. Why, everybody has brains of a sort and I'll eat may hat if seven girls out of every ten you see don't look as though they stood to be washed away in a real hard flood. Apparently they do not know enough to seek shelter from the well-known rain. This is a regular competition among them to see who can produce the most vacuous contenance from a given set of materials.

"If they have naturally a broad, humorous mouth their agile lipstick sketches on a cupid's bow such as the Godey's magazine ladies of the 40's wore. If their eyes are small and keen they mark on half an inch more of eyelash on the upper lid and stick a blue shadow beneath to make 'em look mysterious and oriental. Every lash is dyed jet black, no matter if the girl is an ash blond; every cheek is solid rosy pink, every nose and chin a whited sepulcher. Why, even their stares are alike—copied from the china dolls that flourished among infants a half century ago.

"What goes on back of these identical masks is a question. The girls simply can't exist sixteen hours a day without a wheel of any sort turning inside their skulls, but they certainly do their artistic best to broadcast that impression. Far be it from me to demand that every young creature should be able to tell who won last year's Nobel prize, how many miles it is to Mars and who killed Cock Robin; still it is a comfort occasionally to be able to use words of at least two syllables when you take Flossy out to dine. It's awful! I dunno what to do about it, I declare!"

"H'mph! Marry one of 'em and may be you won't have so much time to do plain and fancy observation work," sniffed the grouchy man who had been interrupted in the middle of the stock reports.—Exchange.

London Battled Against Great Adversities.

In a weather-beaten shack among the Irish of San Francisco, Jack London was born, and in the negro section he was nursed by "Mammy Jinny."

At 5, he helped with the housework, had no toys, and his parents thought him a "strange child." At 6 he entered school, at 9 started to work in a truck garden, at 11 sold newspapers in Oakland, then was an oyster pirate and later owned an oyster bed.

Next a "road kid," begging his way, he shipped at 16 under a harsh captain on a sealer bound for the Behring Sea. Working in a jute mill in Oakland at $1 for a ten-hour day, he wrote an article "A Typhoon Off the Coast of Japan" that won first prize in a newspaper contest.

After shovelling coal for a street car company at $1 for a 12-hour day, and working in a hotel laundry, he, at 17, joined Kelley's "Industrial Army" bound for Washington. Arrested for vagrancy at Niagara Falls, he served 30 days in jail.

Back in Oakland, he determined to acquire an education, gave up drinking, became a janitor, returned to school and haunted the public library. Forced to leave the University of California for lack of funds, he wrote many stories that editors rejected.

Returning penniless from participation in the rush to Alaska, he finally sold a story to a magazine for $40. Then he married. His third book, "The Call to the Wild," won instant success. Later, books based on his observations and experiences added to his fame.

While he was acting as correspondent in the Russo-Japanese war his wife divorced him. Marrying again at 29, he started on a cruise of the Pacific in his tiny "Snark." Never physically strong, he was taken ill, and had to return home by steamer.

Although loathing authorship, he continued to write to earn funds for a home and bought an extensive ranch in the Valley of the Moon in California. The house, uninsured, was burned when half completed.

Tomorrow—Herr Had to Wait Before He Could Try For College.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Alexander M. Dockery, who celebrates his 80th birthday anniversary today, is a former governor of Missouri and one of that state's most distinguished sons. At the age of four-score Mr. Dockery can look back on a varied and useful career. A native of Davies county, Missouri, he was a physician, banker, mayor of his town, and a representative in congress before he became governor in 1901. His public career was closed with several years of service as the Third Assistant Postmaster General of the United States. Mr. Dockery's special political genius was for organization and detail. As a representative in congress, in which position he made his greatest reputation, he was a strong opponent of the trusts and was largely instrumental in bringing about a reformation of the system of governmental accounts. Mr. Dockery is a fluent speaker and for many years he figured prominently in the State and national campaigns of the Democratic party.

YOUR INCOME TAX

Tax On Dividends.

The tax on dividends is an important item in the returns of many taxpayers. A dividend, as defined by the regulations under the revenue act of 1924, comprises any distribution in the ordinary course of business even though extraordinary in amount, made by a corporation to its shareholders out of its earnings or profits accumulated since February 28, 1913. While dividends are generally paid in cash, they may be paid in securities or other property. For example, a corporation may distribute among its stockholders securities in which it has invested its earnings. Such securities, no matter what their nature, are to be reported as dividends by the stockholders at the fair market value of the date of the receipt.

A taxable distribution made by a corporation is income to the stockholders as of the date when the cash or property was unqualifiedly made subject to their demands, regardless of when the earnings or profits out of which they were paid were accumulated. Cash dividends, in the hands of the individual, while exempt from all normal tax, are subject to the surtax rates for the year in which received. A stockholder pays no normal tax on dividends for the reason that the corporation which declares them is subject to the normal tax on the earnings out of which they are paid. The tax on corporations is 12¾ per cent. of the net income subject to tax.

The supreme court has held that the issuance of its own stock by a corporation as a dividend to its shareholders does not constitute taxable income. The revenue act of 1924 specifically provides that a stock dividend shall not be subject to the tax, but if before or after the distribution of any such dividend the corporation proceeds to cancel or redeem its stock at such time an in such manner as to make the distribution and cancellation or redemption essentially equivalent to the distribution of a taxable dividend, the amount so distributed in redemption or cancellation of the stock shall be treated as a taxable dividend.

Why They Laughed.

He is a traveling salesman for a hat firm. When he comes to town to sell his wares he frequently puts on the hats. A few days ago he unpacked a trunkful at the hotel and exhibited a number of straw hats to a prospective customer. He tried on several and sold a large order to the man.

Some ten or twelve minutes later the salesman hastened to the lobby to make an inquiry regarding another customer he expected. He was in fact ready to go out to his place of business. The first man he met snickered. The next one grinned. The next one tittered. Another one smiled. The drummer began to be suspicious. Most anyone would under the circumstances. The next man laughed outright.

The salesman rushed up to the clerk. "Say, what's so funny around here, anyway?" he exclaimed. "I don't see it."

After an illness of some time with pneumonia, the death of John J. Leary of Jordan road, Willimantic, occurred Tuesday morning at St. Joseph's hospital, Willimantic.

Mr. Leary was the son of Patrick and Catherine Donovan Leary and was born in County Cork, Ireland, 27 years ago, but the greater part of his life had been spent in this country. He formerly resided in Norwich for several years.

He is survived by his mother, three sisters, Mrs. John Murphy of Willimantic, Miss Catherine Leary, a registered nurse, of New York, and Mrs. John Callaghan of Cardiff, Wales; five brothers, Patrick of Ansonia, Daniel and Humphrey of Ireland, Timothy of Cardiff, Wales, and Cornelius Leary of Norwich. There are also several nieces and nephews.

Mrs. Patrick Falvey.

Following a short illness the death of Julia Shea, beloved wife of Patrick Falvey, occurred Tuesday morning about 2.10 o'clock at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Mary E. Stevens of Yantic.

Mrs. Falvey had been a resident of the town of Bozrah for over half a century but had made her home with her daughter for the past several years. A woman of loving disposition, a kind and gentle mother, Mrs. Falvey's chief interest in life centered in her home and church. Her many friends will learn of her death with sorrow. She was a member of Sacred Heart church, Norwich Town.

Surviving are her husband, Patrick Falvey; two daughters, Mrs. Mary E. Stevens of Yantic and Mrs. John Ward; one son, Michael Falvey of Camden, N. J.; two sisters, Mrs. Johanna Foley of Willimantic and Miss Mary Shea of Willimantic, and one granddaughter, Miss Julia Caroline Stevens of Yantic.

Mrs. John Coughlin.

Word was received in this city Tuesday of the death of Mrs. Anna Gallivan, widow of John Coughlin, formerly of Norwich. Mrs. Coughlin was born in Munson, Mass., about 55 years ago and the greater part of her life was spent in that place. In 1900 she was united in marriage with John Coughlin, formerly of Norwich, and later with the J. F. Gallivan Construction company of Greenville, in South Carolina. Mr. Coughlin died about two years ago.

Mrs. Coughlin is survived by a son, John Coughlin, and a daughter, Catherine Coughlin of Greenville, S. C., a brother, John F. Gallivan, also of Greenville S. C.; two sisters, Miss Mary Galivan of New York and Mrs. Twist of New York, formerly of New London.

E. Irving Eldredge, Jr.

E. Irving Eldredge, Jr., 37, of Glen Cove, L. I., died at Hot Springs, Ariz., Saturday night of pneumonia after a short illness. He left New York recently with his family for California, where he expected to spend the winter.

Mr. Eldredge was born in Brooklyn, N. Y., his ancestors being of the prominent Eldredge family, of Mystic. He was a member of the New York Stock Exchange firm of Bull & Eldredge, and a vice president of Frederick, Loeser & Co. During the war he served as an ensign in the navy.

He was a regular summer visitor with Mystic relatives.

J. Milton Clark.
(Contributed.)

Following a lingering illness, J. Milton Clark died at his home in Home place, Bruce park, Greenwich, Saturday morning, Jan. 30, aged 57 years.

Mr. Clark was a native of Salem, Conn., and was for some time engaged in the steamfitting business in Hartford. Later he went to Greenwich and for the past fifteen years had been in the real estate and investment business, purchasing numerous large farms in Connecticut. At the time of his death he owned a big estate near New London.

He was a man of sterling qualities, held in the highest esteem by a large circle of friends in Greenwich.

Besides his wife, Mrs. Mabel Hubbard Clark, a descendant of an old and prominent family living for many years in Stanwich, he is survived by three sisters and four brothers.

The funeral was held at his late home on Tuesday afternoon Feb. 2, at 2.30 o'clock, Rev. A. J. Martin, pastor of the First M. E. church, officiating. Mrs. Frederic C. Studwell played several hymns at the piano, including "Safe in the Arms of Jesus." The interment was in the family plot at Greenwood cemetery, Rye.

In the passing of Mr. Clark is felt with deep regret. Perhaps he showed himself one of the most loyal to the town of his birth, by coming back and in a great measure rebuilding it by the sales of his holdings, new people being added to its meager inhabitants. After the new improvements, new state roads were then built, the revenue from taxes on improved property taking the place of that of abandoned property. Yet the town has lost none of its natural beauty, only having been made more picturesque.

The rebuilding of the little town of Salem, the land of his birth, will remain a monument to his memory for ever in the recollection of those who knew him.

Escaped from State Hospital.

The New London police late Tuesday afternoon were requested by the Norwich authorities to maintain a lookout for Rollin Thoms, who escaped from the Norwich state hospital about 2.30 o'clock. Thoms, whose home is in Stamford, is described as being about 5 feet 7 1-2 inches in height and weighing about 130 pounds. When he escaped Thoms wore a long dark overcoat and gray hat.

BAPTIST PASTOR SPOKE TO EMPLOYED BOYS' BROTHERHOOD

The Employed Boys' Brotherhood held a very interesting meeting at the Y. M. C. A. Tuesday evening. Supper was served at 6.15 with 38 members present. Popular songs were sung during the meal and following the supper two fine violin solos were rendered by Marry McGlone and Daniel Grieco, assisted by Mr. Smith at the piano. Plans are now under way for forming an orchestra to play at these meetings.

Rev. E. C. Dunbar of the First Baptist church was introduced as the speaker of the evening. Mr. Dunbar took as his subject the question "What is your name?" He said when you mention the names of Lincoln, or Aaron Burr, you immediately think of certain associations and characteristics that go with them. The important question is, what do folks think about you when your name is mentioned? In order for anyone to succeed in life there are certain things that he must have in his makeup. One of the first is, do not be a quitter. There is no place in life for a quitter. One usually quits for one of two reasons: Either he feels that he is imposed upon, or else he cannot control his temper. Everybody has and needs temper, but we must learn how to control it. Second, is the need of development. One must learn how to develop in order to gain advancement. We advance only by a gradual process and by continual determination. One must also acquire stability. Certainly if we expect to advance we must be willing to accept responsibility. Can we be trusted to do the little things that are given us to do? Therefore, if one wishes to succeed, he must not be a quitter, he must be willing to accept responsibility, he must determine to grow and develop.

What do people think about you when they hear your name mentioned? Can they depend on you? Are you reliable? Are you trustworthy? Are you determined to grow? Will you accept responsibility?

AUDIENCE OF OVER 1,000 GREETS BIMBO PLAYERS AT THE PALACE

GERTRUDE DOERR
(Princess Lillikoza)

An audience of over 1,000 people enthusiastically greeted the local talent cast that presented "Bimbo" a pretty musical romance of the South Sea Isles, at the Palace theatre Tuesday evening under the auspices of Robert O. Fletcher Post, No. 4, American Legion. As a whole the play was exceptionally well given comparing very favorably with other like performances staged under the auspices of Fletcher Post. The players are to be complimented on their excellent showing and credit is due not only to the cast but to S. E. Weimer of the John B. Rogers Co., who so ably directed the show. Those in the cast entered into the spirit of the play in professional style. Beautiful and original costumes with attractive stage scenery and pretty electrical effects added to the success of the opening performance.

The play takes its name from "Bimbo," one of the South Sea Islands, where the natives of opposite sides of the island, at war, anticipate the arrival of a new governor from the United States. A moving picture operator (Billy Mitchell) who visits the island is mistaken for the expected dignitary and his moving picture apparatus for a machine gun which Uncle Sam is sending along with the new governor. His adventures with the natives and with numerous feminine admirers who followed him to the island provide much of the plot of the play. The struggles of a young and very enterprising civil engineer (J. Warren Kane) who is building a railroad across the island and who is using the civil war between the natives to further his project as a means of winning $100,000 and a bride (Eunice Taft) have an important part in the romantic story.

(Agnes McNally)

Many Musical Features.

Nearly a score of musical numbers featured the performance. The opening chorus by the Tourist ensemble and Romance Land by Miss Broadhurst and ensemble delighted the audience and received well merited applause. Mr. Mitchell and the Toddle Girls in their Toddle Town number made a hit with the audience and they were forced to respond to insistant encores.

The drill of the "army victorious" by General Cadenza and the Bimbo army, brought down the house. The army (all veterans of the World war) put on a comedy drill under the leadership of the "general" that brought bursts of laughter and spirited applause and gained them an honor position in the list of awkward squads, and incidently should serve as an excuse for the appearance of another medal on the general's already overcrowded uniform.

Chorus Dances.

The chorus dances were pleasing numbers on the programme. The models, twelve pretty young ladies, made a very favorable impression. They appeared in beautiful gowns and cloaks and their number won them well merited applause.

Other groups worthy of special mention were the Bimbo maids, the savages, waltz lassies, the toddle dancers and the bandits. The savages staged a unique dance while the dwarfs put on an excellent flashlight drill that earned them a merited encore. The South Sea Island Belles, native costume, gave a very pretty number.

SUPPER AND ENTERTAINMENT AT ARCANUM CLUB NIGHT

Another of those delightful club nights with supper and entertainment which have become one of the monthly features of the Arcanum club was held Tuesday evening at 6.30 o'clock with a large percentage of the membership gathered in the dining hall of the club. A delicious meat pie supper was served by Steward Blanchard assisted by Cal Swan. The menu for the supper was:

Meat Pie
Mashed Potatoes — June Peas
Buttered Parker House Rolls
Celery Mixed Pickles Stuffed Olives
Apple Pie — American Cheese
Coffee — Cocoa
Cigars

During the supper hour a delightful program of dinner music was rendered by the Riverview Serenaders, a local musical organization of Dixie boys who are fast becoming real entertainers. Following the dinner program the serenaders entertained with southern melodies and plantation songs, solos being given by the old time minstrel man, Al Perrin, and by Felix DeBarros and others.

A bit of Scotch was injected into the entertainment program by Fred "Scotty" Power who told several anecdotes at the expense of his countrymen. He also brought to the gathering a bit of the music of "bonny Scotland" and in his dancing numbers demonstrated that there was a wee bit of kick in the Scotch.

Another feature of the evening was the buck and wing dancing by Jack Malcolm, another local boy who was in his day a clever performer with the hard shoes. Jack showed that he has lost little if any of his nimbleness.

After the entertainment bowling, billiards and cards rounded out a most enjoyable evening.

The entertainment committee that planned the evening's fun was A. C. Brown, chairman, Edmund S. Smith, John Crowe and Tyler D. Guy.

TAFTVILLE ARMY-NAVY FIVE EVENS UP MATTERS WITH BRISTOL TEAM

The Taftville Army-Navy Five evened accounts with the West Ends of Bristol Tuesday evening at Parish hall when they completely outplayed and outclassed the visitors, sending them home on the short end of a 34 to 14 score. At no time during the contest was the local five in danger of being beaten. They took the lead at the start of the game and held it throughout, the score at half-time being 17 to 7. The same score was made in the second half which left the final score 34 to 14.

The addition of Normandin to the local lineup has put strength into the team as was shown last night. Normandin takes the place of Joe Belair at left forward and his playing was the feature of the game. Normandin scored five field baskets many of them being long trick shots. Mills and Murphy also played a good game.

For Bristol Carpenter was the star, playing a fast guarding game, but having little opportunity to score himself. Carrington, the mainstay of the West Ends was unable to get to Norwich and the team was considerably weakened by his absence.

In the preliminary game the A.-N Seconds defeated the Rovers in a one-sided contest 38 to 12. The summary:

WINDHAM HIGH WINS CLOSE GAME FROM CHAPMAN

(Special to the Bulletin)

New London, Feb. 10—Chapman Tech went down fighting before the smoothness of a better basketball quintet, falling before the attack of Windham High at school auditorium by the score of 31 to 28 here this afternoon. Both teams went at it hammer and tongs for forty minutes of good hard play, giving a fine exhibition of basketball at times which was marred at other times by looser play.

A nip and tuck affair from the start Chapman Tech led and lost the leadership and regained it again only to be nosed out again with the termination of the first half, when final spurts by Windham with Meikle doing some fine dribbling and finding the basket twice in succession when the Red and Black led by the score of 11 to 9. It was a fighting Windham team which won back the lead from which it was never headed after a hard fight in the first half.

Windham did not have it easy, and was compelled to play cautious basketball throughout. The passes, and shooting from short distance, but the handicap of the small court doubtlessly had something to do with the team play. But regardless of these handicaps to overcome her play, Windham played flawless basketball, but even her best was matched by as good style from the Chapman Tech five.

Tech rearranged her lineup and had Martin in center instead of L. Hewitt, and had the latter player in left forward. This combination for the short time they worked together played well. The tall Martin being the center of the tall Martin being the center of was good, but he found equal players from the Windham bench matching his play. Martin's play stood out with an occasional flash of form by L. Hewitt. The team on the whole played with whole heartedness to win, but was evidently struggling against the inevitable—defeat.

Captain Storrs at left guard for the visitors displayed fine defense work, and broke up pass after pass by his interceptance of the ball. He was helped along in his fine play by the fine dribbling playing of Meikle who was stationed at guard and then shifted to forward. His passes were sharp and accurate. Windham outclassing Chapman in this respect.

PLAINFIELD WINS EASILY OVER OXFORD HIGH TEAM

With "Jackie" Mercier leading in the scoring in a one-sided contest, Plainfield High easily overcame the Oxford High five by the score of 34 to 15 at Plainfield Tuesday evening. Although the loss of Capt. Allard was felt, the team worked well under Acting Capt. Tyler.

The Plainfield five led from the start and at half time had established a lead which the Bay State school found impossible to over come. Mercier was the outstanding star of the contest, his passing and shooting keeping the spectators on edge at all times. Although the undergraduate body of Plainfield High is discouraged over the suspension of Capt. Allard by the school authorities, it is hoped that he will soon be reinstated. Allard has been a leader in the three major sports at the school and his loss will leave a place had to fill.

The girls' basketball squad furnished the preliminary contest. On Friday the girls will meet their fair opponents from Williams Memorial Institute of New London at Plainfield at Plainfield. The summary:

AGGIE FROSH TACKLES SPRINGFIELD YEARLINGS TODAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

Storrs, Conn., Feb. 10.—Coach Alexander's undefeated Connecticut Aggie freshman team will tackle a worthy opponent tomorrow, when the Springfield college yearlings are met at Storrs. It will be the sixth game of the season for the Storrs outfit, which to date has defeated all of its opponents.

The yearlings went through a light practice today in their final preparations for the game with the Physical Directors, after which Coach Alexander announced his team ready and in condition for tomorrow's battle. The Aggie lineup that will start against Springfield is Captain Hadley and Eddy, forwards; Williams of Danielson, center; Heller and Donahue. This is the combination that has been carrying the freshman colors so successfully to date, and Connecticut followers are looking to these five men for another victory tomorrow.

But little is known of the strength of the Y. M. C. A. outfit, but it is expected that they will exhibit the usual facet brand of basketball that always characterizes the Springfield teams. Last year the Aggie yearlings turned back the Springfield frosh by a narrow margin and it is certain that the team of this year will come to Storrs determined to wipe off the sting of that defeat.

AMERICAN LEAGUE MEETING ADOPTS SCHEDULE AND DOES OTHER BUSINESS

St. Louis, Feb. 10.—(By the A. P.)—However, that he will be able to leave Club owners of the American League, meeting with President Ban Johnson for the first time since the joint major league session when they publicly reprimanded him for his criticism of Commissioner Landis' administration, voted today to withdraw their offer to build a $100,000 monument to baseball in Washington, D. C., and adopted a resolution prohibiting future spring exhibition games between winners of previous world's series.

The club owners, after ratifying the 1925 schedule, also adopted a plan for a definite schedule for world's series games, and ratified the proposal of the baseball advisory council that the club finishing fourth in the pennant race should be permitted to participate in the world's series pool.

The proposal to increase the pay of umpires in the world's series from $2,000 to $2,500 and in city series from $500 to $750 also was approved.

The meeting with President Johnson sitting in as the directing head, was harmonious in every respect.

Action to prohibit exhibition games between world's series contestants was taken after the Giants and Senators, participants in the 1924 series, had arranged an extensive schedule of games during their spring training. The action of the club owners today will not necessitate the cancellation of the Giants-Senators games this season.

President Johnson in his recommendations, said the games were arranged by the Washington and New York clubs without seeking to learn what the wishes of the other clubs in the two leagues might be and that the games had been announced as a "continuance of the 1924 world's series."

President Johnson's report added that the criticism had been made that this would tend to cheapen the world's series.

The offer to build the monument in East Potomac park, Washington, was withdrawn in view of the fact that the proposal had met with opposition each time it came up in congress. President Johnson said no alternative plan was proposed.

The new world's series schedule plan was proposed by Charles Ebbetts, owner of the Brooklyn club, and approved by the National league. It provides for games 1, 2, 6 and 7 in the 1925 series to be played in the city which wins the National League pennant, with games 3, 4 and 5 in the American league city. The following year the series will open in the American league, rotating annually. The only change made in the Ebbetts plan was a provision that the advisory council shall have power to change the schedule if it should happen that a city in which Sunday baseball is not permitted should win the pennant.

Action, taken at the joint meeting in Chicago, last December, providing that first year purchase players might be sent out on option for two years without asking for waivers was approved.

Every club in the league, with the exception of Chicago, was represented at today's meeting. Colonel Jacob Ruppert of New York, Clark Griffith of Washington, and Robert Quinn of Boston, were presidents who were absent.

The meeting adopted a resolution expressing regret over the illness of Phil Ball, president of the St. Louis club, who has been in a hospital since last November. It is expected,

DRAWINGS MADE FOR LIGHTWEIGHT TITLE BOUTS

New York, Feb. 10.—Fifty boxers, club managers and fight promoters attended a meeting of the state boxing commission held today. It was decided that the lightweight tournament be held on February 23. There will be eight bouts, four of which are to be held in Madison Square Garden, the remainder taking place in smaller clubs, which are to be selected at a meeting next Friday afternoon. Fourteen boxers are paired for the match. Pairs were chosen from a hat containing individual slips of paper upon which the names of the boxers were written.

The pairs chosen were: Benny Valger and Alex Hart; Jack Bernstein and Basel Galliano; Solly Seeman and Archie Walker; Charlie O'Connell and Joe Dundee; George Chaney and Tommy O'Brien; Jimmy Goodrich and Eddy Wagner; Clyde Jeakle and Rocky Kansas.

The drawing was followed by a discussion as to location, rounds, shares, receipts and other details. It was decided that decisions on these questions be put over until next Friday.

It was definitely decided, however, that win or lose, the fighters in the tournament are to share alike in the matter of proceeds.

Members of the boxing commission announced after the meeting that charges of "stalling" against Archie Walker, growing out of his fight with Christiano in Albany, had been definitely dropped for lack of evidence.

Paddy Mullins, manager of Harry Wills, appeared before the commission to present Wills' challenge to Jack Dempsey.

TOBIN LACKED ONE HIT FOR A RECORD

Chicago, Feb. 10.—Failure of Johnny Tobin of the St. Louis Browns to make just one more hit, ruined what would have been a remarkable record; that of a trio of regular outfielders crowning the pill for six consecutive years with individual averages of .300 or better, according to statistics at American league headquarters here. Other members of the trio are Kenneth Williams and "Babydoll" Jacobson, each of whom have remained at the .300 mark or above for six consecutive years, starting back in 1919. Last season Tobin failed to make the grade and finished with a batting mark of .299.

The six year mark of the three players:

Player	1919	1920	1921	1922	1923	1924
Williams	.300	.307	.307	.332	.357	.324
Jacobson	.323	.355	.352	.317	.309	.318
Tobin	.327	.340	.352	.331	.317	.299

Williams joined the Browns in 1919 and in his first year with them just touched the .300 mark in batting. Tobin returned to the team in 1918 after a one-year stay in the minors. Jacobson started with the Browns in 1917 and has been with them ever since.

Just contrast its coolness and rich mildness with anything you ever smoked

Back about 1870, James N. Wellman developed a secret tobacco process which won instant and widespread favor. It yielded a fuller-bodied richness, mildness and fragrance which just seemed to "go" with a pipe. No one else ever knew his secret until we acquired "Wellman's Method" and by its means made "Granger Rough Cut"

FIRPO RENTS VILLA FOR TRAINING CAMP

Nice, France, Feb. 10.—Luis Firpo has rented a small villa in the outskirts of Nice and is said to have already begun training for contemplated bouts. He has signed a contract for exhibitions at Monte Carlo, but says his only possible serious engagement is a prospective bout with Tom Gibbons in London in April.

It is said that Firpo is meditating increasing his prestige as an attraction on the Rivera by assuming the title of world's heavyweight champion, taking the ground that he is entitled to it because Jack Dempsey was helped back into the ring after Firpo knocked him out of it in New York during their fight at the Polo Grounds.

INTERNATIONAL LEAGUE ADOPTS 168 GAME SCHEDULE

New York, Feb. 10.—International league club owners today adopted a playing schedule of 168 games for 1925 in one of the most peaceful sessions they have held in recent years.

Prior to the meeting, reports were current that shifts might take place in the circuit, possibly involving the franchises at Syracuse or Newark, but it was announced nothing of this sort was considered.

The 168 game schedule was adopted in favor of a slate of 154 games because of the existence of too many open dates in the latter list. The opening games on April 15, will find Toronto at Baltimore, Buffalo at Jersey City, Rochester at Reading and Syracuse at Newark.

The action of the faculty of the Sheffield Scientific school was announced this morning following a session of the faculty committee yesterday at which Bingham attended and stated his case.

Bingham said today that he had resigned as captain of the football team and that he will apply for reentry into the university next fall. It will be necessary for him to enter as a junior, however, one year behind his present classmates, and this will bar him from participation in any sports for a year.

The national roque tourney of the American Roque League starts next week at St. Petersburg, where more than twenty courts under municipal patronage are kept in perfect trim for roque enthusiasts. World's Champion Eddie Clark this week won the first balk-line roque game ever officially played. A small group of champions and ex-champions had developed their skill to such a degree that they were practically unbeatable, and balk-line play was the obvious method for retaining interest in the game by lesser competitors. Roque players from all parts of the country have arrived to enter the national tournament.

NORWICH CITY OFFICIALS ATTEND HEARINGS ON NORWICH COURT BILLS

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Hartford, Feb. 10.—This, the sixth week of the session, opened up with a London fog surrounding Capitol hill. When the house was called to order not more than one-fourth of the membership were present. Two items only were on the calendar, one being the proposed constitutional amendment which is made order of the day Wednesday at 12 m. The other concerns the closing of Bolton lake tn nshing which was not starred as ready for action.

Committee Hearings.

Hearings were held by a number of the committees.

The committee on cities and boroughs heard H. B. 168, creating a zoning system in the village of Pawcatuck.

Committee on claims had before it the claim of Sebastino Guardino for damage done to his truck, caused by the breaking in of a bridge in Baltic. It was a case which had never been brought to the attention of the highway department and they knew nothing about it until this bill was presented to the assembly.

The appropriations committee heard the matter of appropriations for the maintenance and construction at the Mystic Oral school.

Norwich Court Salaries.

Mayor Milo R. Waters, with Corporation Counsel William H. Shields Jr., were heard by the judiciary committee on H. B. 268, amending an act concerning the salaries of the city court officers. The amendment proposes a salary of $1300 for the judge, $750 for the deputy judge, $2500 for the city attorney, $800 for the assistant, and $1700 for the clerk, salaries to be paid monthly. The same committee also heard the bill providing for increases in the salaries of the officers of the town court of Stonington, providing that the judge and prosecutor should each receive $750. H. B. 359, providing that the judge of the city court of Willimantic should receive $1,000 as judge and $200 as clerk. The deputy judge $150, the prosecuting attorney $1,000 and his assistant $150.

A bill before the committee provides that the judge of the borough court of Groton shall receive a salary of $1,000. The deputy judge $5 a day when serving. The prosecuting attorney $1,000 and the assistant $5 per day when serving. Killingly town court officials are also affected by H. B. 266, which makes the salary of the judge $700 and $300 for his service as clerk. The deputy judge to receive a salary of $100, the prosecuting attorney $700 and the assistant $100. It was said that this was truly a "salary day."

Representative Cassidy said that the bill was generally approved by the citizens of Norwich. Judge Thomas Kelley appeared with Mayor Waters and Councilor Shields spoke in support of the Norwich bills which related to adjournments and bail in the city court.

Fish and Game Committee

The committee on Fish and Game held an extended hearing on H. B. 876 that provides that a joint commission be formed, composed of the state board of fisheries and game and the state park and forest commission for the purchase of lands at a cost of not to exceed $10 per acre. The forest commission is to attend to the matter of reforestation and the board of fisheries and game to provide sanctuaries for game and stock the streams to which the public may have access under suitable regulations. The bill was supported by State Forester Hawes Commissioner Robinson of the state board of state parks, Supt. J. W. Titcomb of the board of fisheries and game and Commissioner Buttericks of the forestry commission. This plan has been outlined by Commissioner Walcott of the state board of fisheries and game. This bill if enacted will improve conditions for the sportsmen of the state and in a great measure will offset the hiring of coves and streams by private parties that shuts out the general public. The bill is receiving general recommendation from the sportsmen of the state. In another bill an appropriation is asked for of $200,000 to cover a period of two years.

The House

The house was called to order at 11.32 by Speaker Darbie and prayer was offered by Rev. Arthur T. Lewis, house chaplain. H. JEWETT CITY

A record audience were delighted Monday evening at the Finn opera house, when, in the interest of the Quinebaug Camps Association, Inc., the three-act comedy, Am I Intruding, was presented by a local cast. Not within the history of the local playhouse has a purely home effort been as well staged, as cleverly acted, or has given more general satisfaction. No visiting stock company ever won applause for finer interpretations of the characters of a play, was the opinion of the audience of close to 700.

Not only were the results of careful coaching and rehearsing to be seen, but evidences of real talent were exhibited by those to whom the parts had been allotted. The production was under the direction of Norman B. Parkhurst, which fact is highly contributory to the success achieved. The costuming was accurate and handsome, while the stage settings furnished by Schwarts Brps. of Norwich added much to the general success of the presentation. The entire action of the play occurred in the living room of the Vare home on Long Island, at some distance from New York city.

Miss Helena Griffin, impersonating Mrs. Hastings, and Herbert Thompson as Blair Hoover, were working together in a scheme to get into possession of certain stock owned by Horace Vare (Walter Hebert). These three were outstanding in one phase of the story, and in dialogue and impersonation, they offered no chance for criticism. Miss Irene Stewart, as Jane, Vare's niece, and William Marshall, as Ernest Rathbun, Jane's secretary, made the most of the parts which they interpreted. The part of Marjory Vare, the elder daughter, won steady admiration, as it was carried out by Miss Margaret Gory. Tyler Gilbert was at his best as Dickie Waldron, and John LeClaire, as Peter, devoted to Vi, made a most favorable impression. Miss Valeda Boule, as Mona, the chic little French maid, was dainty and winning, and got the house with her every smile. Miss Verna Raill, as Violet Vare and Miss Estelle Jodoin as Dora, gave pleasing evidence that they were in full sympathy with their roles. Hector Le Claire did nothing short of "star" in the part of Gerald Mays (Jerry, from Sage Creek). The audience has not yet determined whether he was cut for the part or the character was made for him. Anyhow he made an instantaneous hit.

During the second act a duet, All Alone, by Jane and her secretary, afforded much pleasure. The intermission selection, played by James Olson, were Lustspiel, overture, Keiabela; Hungarian March, Kowloski; Country Gardens, Grainger, and schonros Marin, by Kreisler.

The committee of arrangements to whom is accordedd merited credit for the success were Herbert Thompson, Eudor LeClaire, Terrence McGovern, Tyler Gilbert.

In Judge John T. Barry's Griswold town court, Monday morning, Joseph Sella got a fine and costs that will keep him on the hill in Norwich 51 days for assault. He had an idea he could beat his wife at his pleasure and get away with it.

John Burns, for drunkenness and breach of the peace, will have 45 days to think it over. The latter case was looked up and the arrest was made by Deputy Sheriff J. T. Dolan. It is understood that some charges of a serious nature were not pressed by the complainant. The sheriff took Burns to jail. Patrolman Viegarde had Sella in his custody.

Mrs. L. D. Howe is visiting her son Earl in Montville, for a few days.

Mrs. Velo Sharkie is at home after two months' visit with Mrs. Joseph La Bonne of Cornwall, Ontario. Returning, Mrs. Sharkie was surprised to find such mild temperature at home. Where she has been the mercury stood at 28 to 35 below zero for weeks. One memorable day it dropped to 46 below.

Harry Levine is going out of business. Stock, groceries, dry goods must be sold. Beginning Feb. 12. Lowest prices guarantee to save customers from 40 to 50 cents on dollar.—adv.

For the second time within three weeks Jewett City has received, through its post office; numbers of letters addressed to residents of the town. The letters asks for small contributions, but does not name the object for which sought. A part of the letter follows:

You may wish to cut out and keep in your prayer book the prayer which will be written on the first page of the Golden Book that is to repose in the tabernacle of Our Lady's Shrine during Holy Year, so close to the Sacred Heart of Jesus.

We cannot repay you; but we can pray for you! We can and shall pray for all of our benefactors, rich and poor, living and dead, for all whose names are entered in the Golden Book.

If you were willing to miss the golden opportunity of two weekly high masses and the daily "memorare" for yourself, do not—I beg of you—do not forego these spiritual benefits for the departed that are dear to your heart. The poor souls are waiting for your help, waiting for salvation, especially during the Holy Year of Salvation.

While the appeal looks to be genuine, it is irregular. All benevolent and charitable activities in the St. Mary's parish have the approval or come through the bishop of the diocese. The pastor is expected to be consulted before subscriptions are made to indiscriminate objects. It was learned Tuesday that doubtless the subscriptions are asked for the Rhine provinces of Germany.

Miss Helena Griffin entertained the members of the Am I Intruding cast and several friends at her home Monday evening, after the presentation of the play.

At the last meeting of Packaug grange in Grange hall, Worthy Master Byron P. Kinnie, presiding, during the business meeting, the worthy master installed Worthy Chaplain Rev. J. P. Richardson, who was unable to be present when the installation exercises took place. Worthy Lecturer Mabel Kinnie presented the following program, Song by the Grange, Battle Hymn of the Republic; Tributes to Lincoln, read by five members; recitation, The Blue and the Gray, Miss Etta Weeks; paper, Sketch of Abraham Lincoln's Life, Miss Clara Hyde; song, grange, Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean; paper, The Meaning of St. Valentine's Day, Miss Edith Tift; quotations from Lincoln, by ten members. Several letters were then delivered to members, who being called on, read the contents, which proved to be useful hints and apt jokes. The program closed with the singing of The Star Spangled Banner. The attendance was 66 with one from Echo grange. The worthy lecturer suggested that each one present invite two grangers who were not present, that the attendance at the meetings may be increased.

POETRY

TWILIGHT.

Spirit of Twilight, through your folded wings
I catch a glimpse of your averted face
And rapturous on a sudden, my soul sings
"Is not this common earth a holy place?"

Spirit of Twilight, you are like a song
That sleeps, and waits a singer—like a hymn
That God finds lovely, and keeps near Him long
Till it is choired by aureoled cherubim.

Spirit of Twilight, in the golden gloom
Of dreamland dim I sought you, and I found
A woman sitting in a silent room
Full of white flowers that moved and made no sound.

These white flowers were the thoughts you bring to all,
And the room's name is Mystery where you sit.
Woman whom we call Twilight, when night's pall
You lift across our Earth to cover it.
—Olive Custance.

TO MOTHER NATURE.

Nature, in thy largess, grant
I may be thy confidant!
Taste who will life's roadside cheer
(Though my heart doth hold it dear—
Song and wine and trees and grass,
All the joys that flash and pass),
I must put within my prayer
Gifts more intimate and rare,
Show me how dry branches throw
Such blue shadows on the snow—
Tell me how the wind can fare
On his unseen feet of air—
Show me how the spider's loom
Weaves the fabric from her womb—
Lead me to those brooks of morn
Where a woman's breath is born—
Let me taste the sap that flows
Through the blushes of a rose.
Yea, and drain the blood which runs
From the heart of dying suns—
Teach me how the butterfly
Guessed at immortality—
Let me follow up the track
Of Love's deathless Zodiac
Where Joy climbs among the spheres
Circled by her moon of tears—
Tell me how, when I forget
All the schools have taught me, yet
I recall each trivial thing
In a golden, far-off Spring—
Give me whispered hints how I
May instruct my heart to fly
Where the baffling Vision gleams
Till I overtake my dreams,
And the impossible be done
When the Wish and Deed grow one!
—Frederick Lawrence Knowles.

NEW LONDON CHINESE RESIDENTS STILL HAVE POLICE PROTECTION

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, Feb. 10.—Although local Chinese residents have not received any advices of late relative to contemplated visits to New London of the members of the Hip Sing Ling society, who have murdered many members of the Hip Sing Tong society, a police watch is maintained at the Chinese tea and coffee house, Golden Street. The police protection is given the local Chinese by regular patrolmen being assigned to watch the congregating place of the Chinese but the officers perform that duty after their regular day's work, and they receive compensation from the Chinese.

Bernard O'Hara, sailor, stationed at the submarine base, and prominent in athletics there, reported to the police late this afternoon that he had been robbed of his watch and charm and $5.15. O'Hare stated that he went to the state armory, Washington and Colt streets, about 2.30 o'clock to practice playing basketball. O'Hare went to one of the locker rooms, where he removed his uniform and donned his playing togs. He played about two hours and, going back to the locker room, noticed that his clothing was disarranged and discovered that the watch, Elgin movement, with gold football charm, and his money was missing. The watch bears the monogram of the owner, "B. O'H." on the back of the case. Later O'Hare visited the police station, where he reported the theft.

W. C. Johnson of the Y. M. C. A. will be in the police court Wednesday morning, charged with violation of the city's parking ordinance. Johnson operated his car to Church street, where he parked it on the north side, which is restricted area. Traffic Officer Clyde Murphy observed the violation and ordered Johnson to appear in court.

Mrs. Catherine Laroca returned to her home, Shaw street, today after having undergone treatment at Home Memorial hospital.

Mrs. Louise Perry is ill with grip at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Elsie W. Bottle, 143 Shaw street.

Walter Dean of Waterford, charged with cruelty to animals, was before Justice of the Peace J. James Floyd in Waterford late yesterday and, pleading guilty to the charge, was fined $1 and costs. Dean owned two horses and sold one of them to Frank Scott of Waterford. Tying one of the horses to a tree while he led the horse purchased by Scott to a stable, Dean discovered upon his return to the pasture that the horse he had left there had broken the tether and had strayed away. Some time afterwards Scott found the straying horse and telephoned the fact to Dean, but the latter did not seek the roaming horse. Neither did Scott keep it and several days later the horse was found in an emaciated condition, suffering from cold, exposure and lack of food. Complaint was made to County Humane Agent Frederic H. Wyant, and that officer arrested Dean after investigating the case.

Harry C. Turner, stage manager at the Capitol theatre, who has been confined to his home, Cross street, several days by grip, is able to resume his duties.

An automobile owned and operated by John Oscar Richmond, Clifton street, Waterford, and a machine owned and driven by Emilie Leandri, 512 Thames street, Groton, were in collision this evening on Main street corner of Federal street. Both automobiles were considerably damaged. Mrs. Eli Fellman, who was a passenger in the Leandri car, was injured, but not seriously. She sustained lacerations of the face and head from the shattered windshield.

Richmond was operating his automobile southerly on Main street and when Federal street was reached he started to guide the car to the latter highway. As he did so the automobile operated by Leandri, which was traveling easterly on Federal street started to turn into Main street. Before either Richmond or Leandri could materially reduce the speed of their respective cars, and before they could guide them from the course of the other, the cars came together with considerable force.

After a lapse of nearly a week, the special committee of the city council, Edward L. Streeter, Jr., John F. Murray and Lucius E. Whiton, conducted its probe in the municipal building this evening in an effort to determine the efficiency of the police department. There were three witnesses tonight, these being citizens. It is understood that two or three additional sessions will be held by the committee, after which City Manager William A. Holt will render his report.

It would be a wise move for the city to turn the fire hose upon the sidewalks along Bank and State streets that the walks would be made safe for pedestrians. As the walks are now they are exceedingly slippery covered with a sort of slime that makes passage over them a hazardous undertaking. The fire hose on these streets would make the walks safe and the work could be accomplished in a day on both streets. The entrance to the municipal building is particularly dangerous because of the uncertain footing for all who use the front entrance.

Upper Bank street will soon have seven more modern stores for occupancy. These will come as soon as the Klinck and Hollandersky buildings are completed, for there are to be four stores in the Klinck building and three in the Hollandersky building. There are several vacant stores on the lower part of the street, but they are not to be considered as competitors to the locations on the north end of the thoroughfare.

Shaw's cove on the inner section is filled with ice, but there is not another pound to be found in the outer cove nor in the harbor. Even skaters have failed to take advantage of the ice this winter and they have kept away from there.

The weather of the past three days has been suspicious for the transportation of liquor either by land or water for the fog was dense enough to cut with a knife. This morning even the automobiles were running with headlights in use and the trolley cars made use of their lights in operating. On the water it was impossible to see more than a few yards away, so that power boats could have had the opportunity to operate without fear of detection. They might even have carried deckloads and then have got away undetected. It is not known that any liquor was transported in this way, but the opportunity was there if taken advantage of.

The annual banquet of New London lodge of Elks is to be held at the clubhouse tomorrow evening, and the members of the order in this city and in the cities and towns adjoining New London are anticipating attendance.

Patrolman Augustus Ray was unable to perform duty tonight, being confined to his home, Fitch avenue, by illness.

Capt. William Durkee, master of the Central Vermont railroad freight steamer New London, took command of the craft tonight, following the expiration of the 15 days' suspension of his license because of two collisions in which the steamer figured, one being in New London harbor when the freighter collided with a barge at anchor.

Mrs. Otis, 12 Tenth street, complained to the police this evening because of a woman residing on Harrison street annoying the former's daughter, a child of nine. Mrs. Otis stated that the little girl had been a patient in a local hospital on three occasions for nervous trouble and was now in a condition where she could attend school, but that if the treatment of the child by the Harrison street woman continued, Mrs. Otis was fearful that the child would suffer a recurrence of the trouble. Patrolman James McKenna ordered the Harrison street woman to refrain from annoying the child.

The mystery surrounding the finding of the lifeless body of a young woman in a room of the Hotel Imperial, New York, last Saturday afternoon and it being the belief that she was a resident of this city, from the fact that her male companion had registered the couple as Mr. and Mrs. John Lorens, New London, Conn., has been solved, at least as far as New London is concerned, for the young woman, who had absented herself from this city since last Tuesday, returned to New London this morning and was accompanied by the young man with whom she departed. The couple were married, they stated in New York on the day that they left New London.

The New London police have abandoned their endeavor to ascertain whether the companion of the dead woman was a resident of New London, or whether the registering of the couple as residents of New London was a blind. The authorities are without the slightest clue to assist them in locating the man who fled from the hotel a short time before the body was found.

A large force of city laborers have been engaged throughout today removing ice from the macadam streets of the city and from those highways where the ice was of great thickness and made traffic dangerous. Some of the highways were entirely relieved of the ice, while others received partial attention from the workers. The work will be resumed tomorrow and an attempt made to entirely remove the ice before a cold snap occurs.

Martin Dray, Hempstead Street; Miss Vivian Darby, Howard street; and Carl Ericssen, of the United States Coast Guard destroyer, Jouett, patients at Lawrence-Memorial hospital, were dismissed today.

The funeral of Michael F. O'Neil was held this morning at 9 o'clock at St. Mary's Star of the Sea church and was attended by many mourners. A solemn mass of requiem was celebrated by Rev. George O'Neill, rector of St. Joseph's church, Niagara Falls, and nephew of Mr. O'Neill, Rev. Alexander Wollschlaeger being deacon and Rev. Raymond O'Callahan sub-deacon. The bearers were Daniel Callahan, Patrick Day, James J. Dwyer and William F. Redden of this city, and William Smith and John McGrory of Willimantic. The committal service was conducted by Rev. Fr. O'Neill.

Chester H. Howe officiating. Burial was in Comstock cemetery, Montville.

D. Lynatte Gates, a well-known resident of Niantic, died at his home there yesterday. Mr. Gates had been in ill health for a long time and was of advanced years. He is survived by his wife and by a brother, Walton Gates.

D. Dow Bentley, Andrew J. Bentley, Mary Bentley Keeney, Ruth Bentley O'Neill and Abby Bentley have sold a house and lot on Georgianna street to Philip O'Breys.

George P. Photos of 390 Williams street, in passing across the Thames river highway bridge shortly after 4 o'clock this morning, discovered a live wire dangling against the side of the structure, the wire being heavily charged and emitting frequent bursts of sparks. Photos communicated with the police and the latter notified the Connecticut Power company of the existing danger. A force of repair men was sent to the bridge and caused the wire to be placed back in position.

Patrolman George Pekins in making his rounds at Ocean Beach early this morning, discovered that the Normandie lodging house 82 Boardwalk had been broken in. An investigation revealed that the thief had smashed the glass of two windows so that he could get the window unlocked. This forenoon the agent of the property was notified of the break and an examination of the place revealed that nothing of value had been taken.

Announcement is made of the marriage in New York recently of Joseph Lorenzo and Miss Ruth Havens. The couple returned from their wedding tour this morning.

Trapped in their automobile 25 feet beneath the icy surface of Rush Lake near St. Paul, three St. Paul men and a twelve year old boy escaped by tearing away the side curtains and fighting their way to the hole in the ice through which the car had plunged.

Again—Do Not Expect Long Trading Allowances on Any Used Car When You Come to Buy a Chrysler

This statement of eight months ago is repeated in justice to Chrysler distributors and dealers, who cannot in fairness be expected to penalize themselves by making long allowances, merely because the Chrysler may have depreciated the value of other cars.

A car may be a very good car indeed and still it will lack the riding, driving, braking, accelerating, power and speed qualities which thrill the owner of a Chrysler Six.

As we said in June of last year, those qualities are so valuable and mean so much in efficiency and economy that you could well afford to discard the used car without compensation for the sake of the amazing activity of performance and the saving the Chrysler will bring you.

Even if another car originally cost you twice as much, the burden you escape when you acquire a Chrysler—the substitution of more agile and satisfying performance and the stoppage of waste—will more than compensate you.

Months ago we said that because of these unusual Chrysler qualities, the Chrysler was invading all markets and especially those of much higher price.

We also said that the enthusiasm of the public over the Chrysler was certain to affect all motor cars and ultimately all motor car design.

The change in (internal) design has not yet come. Until it does, there is no possibility for anyone who wants Chrysler results to make a comparison between the Chrysler and other cars, whether they be used or new.

It is all a question of whether you want the qualities which the Chrysler alone provides.

If you do, then it is perfectly clear that you cannot compare the value of another used car or any other new car with the value of the Chrysler.

Neither higher prices nor lower prices nor long allowances have anything to do with the fact that there is still only one Chrysler and that it delivers results which no other car delivers.

This is no reflection on any good car. It is simply a statement of facts which every Chrysler owner knows.

The Touring Car, $1395; The Phaeton, $1495; The Roadster, $1625; The Sedan, $1825; The Royal Coupe, $1895; The Brougham, $1965; The Imperial, $2065; The Crown-Imperial, $2195. All prices f. o. b. Detroit subject to current government tax.

We are pleased to extend the convenience of time-payments. Ask about Chrysler's attractive plan. Dealers everywhere.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

The Worst Happens to the Grouse.
Disaster comes when least expected,
And danger lurks where not suspected.
—Mrs. Grouse.

While Thunderer the Grouse and Mrs. Grouse slept comfortably and peacefully under the snow in the Green Forest things of which they knew nothing were happening. It kept on snowing for some time after they had plunged into that snowbank. The falling snow very nearly filled the holes they had made when they plunged into that snowbank. That would have pleased Thunderer had he known it.

But after a while the falling snow turned to rain. Of course Thunderer and Mrs. Grouse knew nothing about this. Had they known it they would have been worried. But not knowing it they slept peacefully and quietly. Toward morning the rain stopped. Then Jack Frost came, and he froze that wet snow. He froze it until it had formed a thick, hard crust all through the Green Forest and over the Green Meadows. When jolly, round, bright Mr. Sun began his daily climb up in the blue, blue sky he looked down on a world of glistening white.

"It is all my fault," whispered Thunderer

Mrs. Grouse was the first to waken in the morning. For awhile she was content to stay where she was, for it was very comfortable there. But presently she began to want her breakfast. Now when Thunderer and Mrs. Grouse leave their beds under the snow they burst out suddenly and whirr up into the trees on those stout wings of theirs. They burst out suddenly so that if by any chance Reddy Fox or any other enemy should happen to be close by they will be taken by surprise.

When Mrs. Grouse was ready to go in search of her breakfast she started with that same upward rush as usual. But she didn't burst out of the snow and send it flying in all directions. She came up against something hard that stopped her. Instantly she knew what had happened. Once long, long before she had been caught under the crust. She beat frantically with her wings. It did no good. She struck at that crust with her stout bill but that was equally useless.

Thunderer had heard her start and he had started at once. The same thing was happening to him. By and by they had to give up trying to break through that crust. They had to give up because they had tired themselves out. They crept together under the snow. Both knew now what had given Mrs. Grouse that uneasy feeling the night before.

"It's all my fault," whispered Thunderer. "If I had heeded you and we had remained in that tree this wouldn't have happened. Next time I will heed you, my dear."

"There may not be a next time," sobbed Mrs. Grouse. "There never can be a next time unless we can get out of here very soon. We'll starve to death."

Thunderer couldn't find a word to say. He knew it was true. There was nothing to eat down there, and without food they would soon starve. So as soon as they had rested they again began trying to break through that dreadful crust. But they couldn't even crack it. You see it really was ice. They were absolutely helpless there. It was dreadful. Can you think of anything more dreadful? I cannot. They had no hope at all.

Essex 6-Coach
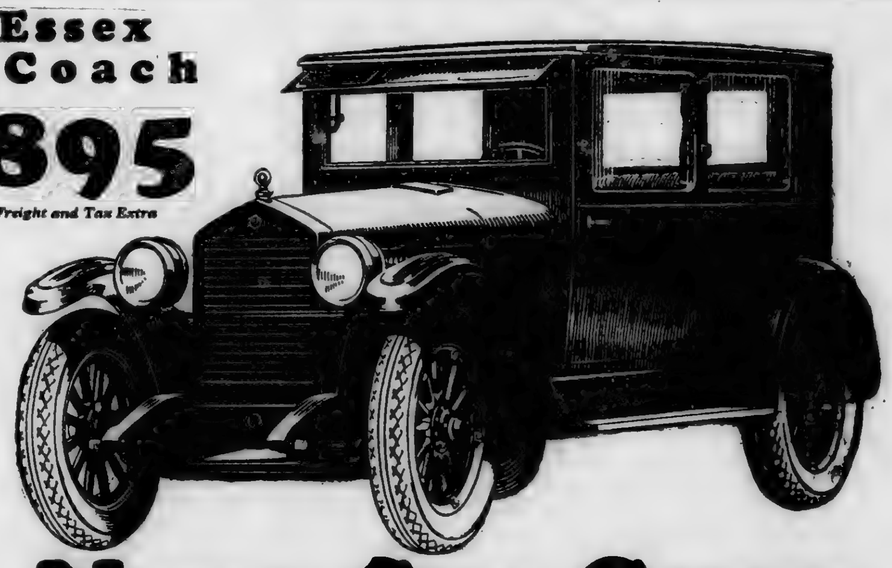
Freight and Tax Extra



None Can Copy Its Chief Value

The Chassis Is Patented

Essex is a totally different type. It gives results no other car ever gave.

Low price, without disappointment in looks or reliability.

Economy without sacrifice of performance.

Stability and highest roadability without unnecessary weight.

The riding ease of large, costly cars. The handling ease of a bicycle. Utter simplicity in design.

The lowest maintenance cost, we believe, of any car in the world.

Two of every three Essex buyers come to it from those who formerly owned cars bought chiefly for their low first price.

Just as the Coach body and Coach name have been extensively copied, even by costliest cars, so must future mechanical design seek to approximate the results Essex gives.

But the patents which make the Super-Six the most enduring, smoothest motor and give it all advantages, also prevent any from copying its qualities.

Surely you cannot be satisfied with less than Essex offers. Its cost is but little more than cars of the lowest price.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

MARKET WAS ERRATIC.

New York, Feb. 10.—Violent fluctuations in high priced industrial specialties, most of which are reported to be under the control of powerful speculative pools, again featured today's erratic stock market. The main body of stocks turned reactionary after an early period of strength, although the price movement was by no means uniform. Trading was on a fairly broad scale, the day's transactions running well over one and a half million shares.

U. S. Cast Iron Pipe continued its sensational gain, scoring an extreme advance of 25 1-2 points at the record top of 239 1-2, following its 19-point advance of yesterday, and closing within four points of the top. The apparent scarcity in the floating supply gave rise to rumors that a "corner" existed, but these lacked confirmation, and apparently were without foundation as bear traders found it possible to borrow stock in order to make delivery on "short" sales.

A sharp rise in Mack Truck, which touched a record top at 148 3-4 and closed at 147 1-4, up 7 5-8, was somewhat of a mystery, coming after the declaration of a regular dividend and a preliminary statement of 1924 earnings showing net profit of $18 a share on the common stock, as against $21.70 a year before. Iron Products was run up 15 points to 107 in the last hour of trading.

Other outstanding strong spots included American Express, American Sumatra Tobacco preferred, Associated Dry Goods, Commercial Solvents A, Universal Pipe and Radiator common and preferred; Mathieson Alkali, Worthington Pump, Savage Arms, Union Bag and Paper and United Railways investment preferred, all of which closed from 3 to nearly 9 points higher.

Most of the so-called pivotal industrials lost ground, American Can showed a net loss of 2 points at 170 after having established another record top at 175. United States Steel common closed nearly a point lower at 126 3-8 despite the publication of the monthly tonnage report showing an increase of 220,647 tons in unfilled orders as of January 31, which was slightly more than expected. Baldwin showed a net loss of [illegible] at 157 1-4 and losses of [illegible] points were recorded by American Smelting and Refining, American Woolen, Cuba Cane Sugar preferred and many others.

Independent strong spots again cropped out in the motors and chemicals. General Motors touched a record top at 20 and then reacted a point on profit taking. Hudson Motors [illegible] higher at 4, 1-4 and Timken Roller Bearing attained new peak prices at 44 3-4. Allied Chemical and American Agricultural Chemical common and preferred also reached their highest prices since 1923 or longer.

Low priced rails were again in brisk demand, Texas and Pacific was run up 5 points to a record top at 53 and Hocking Valley common, Wabash common and preferred A, Atlantic Coast Line and Southern Railway preferred, also moved to new high ground. Revival of activity in New Haven sent that stock up 2 points to 22 3-4 but it slipped back to 22 on realizing. Most of the dividend-paying rails were reactionary, but the net losses were held to a point or less.

Call money opened at 4 per cent and then eased to 3 1-2. Time money and commercial paper rates were unchanged.

Foreign exchanges eased slightly despite encouraging developments regarding international debts, demand sterling ended half a cent lower around $4.77 1-2 and French francs [illegible] 2 points to 5.35 3-4 [illegible]

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Strand Theatre

"A good bad boy" or "a bad good boy,"—which would you rather your boy to be? Such is the interesting question which parents will have a chance to answer when B. F. Zeidman's new picture, "The Good Bad Boy" is shown at the Strand Theatre today and Thursday.
The new picture distributed through the Principal Pictures Corporation, is one which no parent can afford to miss. Not only is it crammed with human interest appeal, clean and wholesome comedy and stirring dramatic thrills but it relates the story of a youngster who is not unlike thousands of others. Because he likes swimming and fishing and other boyish sports to the neglect of more serious things, he is characterized as a "bad boy." Circumstances arise, however, which enable the young hero to show the stuff of which he is made.
Joe Butterworth and Mary Jane Irving play the leading roles. Others in the cast include Forrest Robinson, Richard Wayne, Arthur Hull, Lucy Beaumont and Edwards Davis. Then there is "Brownie," the dog that's almost human. Edward F. Cline, director of "Circus Days," directed the production.
Ben Wilson is a fast moving picture of the western plains "Notch Number One" Cross Word Puzzles and a Mirthquake Comedy will also be given at the Strand today and Thursday.

Before Judge Allyn L. Brown in the superior court at New London, Tuesday, a hearing was held on the petition filed by Attorney Herbert Rathbun in behalf of Sarah and James Lee of Stonington for dissolution of a temporary injunction granted last week to William L. The injunction restrained the Lees from interferring with the operation of Richmond in harvesting ice on a pond in North Stonington, which, it was claimed was located on land owned by both parties.

AVERAGE AUTOMOBILE PAYS $5 IN GASOLINE TAX

Gasoline enough to fill to capacity reservoir No. 1. of the Hartford Municipal water supply located at West Hartford, was consumed by motor vehicles in Connecticut during the past year, it is indicated by records of the state motor vehicle department. The cost of it to automobile drivers was more than enough to pay all the expenses of the state government for the year, being in excess of $21,000,000.

The total consumption of taxable gasoline in Connecticut in the twelve months ending December reached more than 103,000,000 gallons and the average retail price for the year was about 20 cents a gallon. The consumption figures are approximated, as a few scattering returns remain to be made. The same is true of the department's receipts on account of the gasoline tax of 1 cent a gallon, which are expected to amount to at least $1,987,000. The statutes require the department to turn all of these receipts over to the state highway commissioner, for the construction, maintenance, or reconstruction of state highways, without specific appropriation by the General Assembly for such purpose."

It would be possible to build about 35 miles of highways with the income from the gasoline tax of the past year, but, of course, considerable of the receipts are used to keep existing highways in repair. The figures indicate an average of slightly less than $5 was paid in the gasoline tax for each car operated in the state during 1924. More gasoline was used in August than in any other month, but July, October, September, June and May showed large figures also.

DISTINGUISHED NORWICH JURIST PASSES AWAY AFTER SHORT ILLNESS

JUDGE GARDINER GREENE

Judge Gardiner Greene, a judge of the superior court from 1910 until the age limit of 70 brought his retirement in 1921, passed away shortly after 2.30 Tuesday afternoon at his home, 328 Washington street, following an illness of less than a week.

Judge Greene, who was a state referee, has been holding hearings in two cases here recently one of which was partially heard last Thursday. The next day Judge Greene suffered a severe attack, due to arterio sclerosis, but he rallied well from it and had able to discuss business matters since then. Tuesday morning he suffered another severe attack from which he was unable to rally and his family was at his bedside when he passed away.

Judge Greene traced back to an ancestry that was illustrious in the annals of New England. His great grandfather, Gardiner Greene, a resident of Boston, in respect of vast wealth and magnitude of his activities, was a merchant prince. He was the richest man of the time and had the grandest estate in the country. The site of this estate, with its incomparable garden and terraced grounds, is now that of the new court house, Pemberton square, Boston.

His grandfather, William Parkinson Greene, was mayor of Norwich in 1842. His father, Gardiner Greene, 2nd. W. P. Greenes eldest son, was graduated from Yale in 1843 and from Harvard Law school in 1845. With his father Gardiner Greene, 2nd, established the celebrated Shetucket cotton mills at Greeneville, Norwich. Gardiner Greene, 2nd married Miss Mary Ricketts Adams, of Alexandria, Va., on June 26, 1850. Their two sons were Judge Greene and Leonard V. Greene, the latter dying at Cedar Rapids, Iowa, on September 18, 1895.

Judge Greene was born in Norwich on August 31, 1851. He was graduated from Norwich Free Academy in 1868, from Yale in 1873 and from Columbia Law school in 1877. He was admitted to the bar in New York city in 1877 and at New London in 1878. That year he formed a law partnership with John Turner Wait, which continued until Mr. Wait's death in 1899. Judge Greene was a member of the general assembly during the memorable deadlock session of 1891-92. As chairman of the committee on canvass of votes, through which, by order of the house, all business had to be introduced, he was the republican leader of that trying session. He was also representative in the legislature in 1895 and was a member of the commission for revision of the statutes in which results of his splendid work in that capacity are seen in the general statutes of 1902.

Judge Greene married Miss Louise Eustis Reynolds, of Norwich, daughter of the late Henry Lee and Mary Hall Reynolds, on April 4, 1894. Mrs. Greene survives her husband.

Judge Greene was made a judge of the superior court February 5, 1910, upon the nomination of Governor Frank B. Weeks. He retired from the bench August 31, 1921, upon reaching the constitutional age limit of seventy years.

Possessed of a profound knowledge of law, a grace and bearing which instantly attracted and held the respect of all who had business with the court, he was preeminently fitted for this high office. In the disposition of causes before him, his decisions disclosed a thorough knowledge of the law of the case and a mastery of detail seldom equalled.

He delighted in the perfection of achievement.

Following his retirement from the bench, Judge Greene continued in practice, and was engaged in a number of important cases.

At the time of his death he was president of the Dime Savings bank, secretary and treasurer of the Johnson Home, trustee of the Berkeley Divinity school at Middletown, and trustee of the Norwich Free Academy. He was a devoted member of Christ church of which he was elected warden in 1887, holding that office continuously since then. He had often been the church delegate to the diocesan convention and had been a lay delegate to the general convention of the Protestant Episcopal church in 1907, 1910, 1913, 1916, 1919, 1921, 1923, and had been elected for 1925.

In May, 1899, Judge Greene was elected a director of the Dime Savings bank, serving until May, 1909, when he was elected vice president of the bank, and then in May, 1922, president, filling this office with conspicuous ability until the time of his death. He was a member of the American Bar association, Delta Kappa, Epsilon Wolf's Head (Yale) and Graduates' club (New Haven).

In his death Norwich loses an honored and distinguished citizen, and the state one of its ablest and most devoted public servants.

ICE CREAM RATION NOT TO AFFECT MILK

Announcement was made Tuesday that the policy of giving ice cream to children in schools who are underweight would in no way affect the policy of serving milk to children in the schools, this policy having been carried out in some of the local schools for some time past. It is also stated that no children are to be served ice cream without the consent of their parents, pending a special meeting of the advisory board which is to be called in the near future.

Arrangements have been made by an official of the public health department and such arrangements were spoken of at a meeting of the advisory board when no opposition was presented. The two ice cream companies plan to deliver and serve ice cream, free of charge to the schools, for a period of six weeks, children to be weighed before and after the tests as has been done in nearby cities and towns.

Two things have been decided upon. First, that no child will be served ice cream without the consent of parents, and second, that this will in no way interfere with the milk program that has been conducted in some schools of the town for some time past.

Children in schools where milk is served, whose parents do not wish them to have ice cream, will have milk as in the past and those who have ice cream in the morning may have the milk in the afternoon. In other words, the milk program will not be excluded in those local schools where it has been in force.

The ice cream ration is to be given in all the schools, public and parochial, and in all the grades in cases where there are children three or more pounds underweight. It is an educational health experiment that will be tried for six weeks, tests in New London and Putnam having been carried out with what are reported to have been very satisfactory results.

AGED TAFTVILLE WOMAN SUFFERS SERIOUS BURNS

Mrs. Marie Duvall, 73, of No. 35 South B street, Taftville, wife of Thomas Duvall, is a patient at the Backus hospital and is in a very serious condition as the result of burns received Tuesday afternoon at her home when her clothing caught fire.

Mrs. Duvall was preparing supper about 5 o'clock Tuesday afternoon and was using an oil stove. Her clothing became caught in one of the burners, the flame coming into contact with her clothing, and she was soon wrapped in flames.

She ran out of the house where several men working in the mill noticed her and they seized her and wrapped a carpet about her, beating out the flames. Mrs. Duvall was badly burned about the arms, shoulder, breast and limbs, and Dr. Pratte was called, immediately sending her to the Backus hospital, where, early Wednesday morning, her condition was considered serious.

The men after extinguishing the flames on Mrs. Duvall's clothing rushed into the house and extinguished the fire which had gained some headway in the kitchen.

In the observance of Scout anniversary week, arrangements were made Tuesday with the Breed theatre management by School Superintendent Graham for a special matinee at 4 o'clock Thursday afternoon for Boy and Girl Scouts of the town. The picture to be shown is Janice Meredith, and the showing is to be free for the Boy and Girl Scouts.

DAUGHTERS OF VETERANS WILL HAVE GUESTS

Clara Barton Tent, No. 7, Daughters of Veterans, will have Sedgwick post, G. A. R., the Women's Relief Corps and the Sons of Veterans as guests at a Washington social at its next regular meeting, which will be held at 7.30 sharp, in order that the social may be held immediately afterwards. At the recent meeting at the Buckingham Memorial at which the president, Mrs. Alice Brinkman, was in the chair, two candidates were balloted upon favorably and two were initiated. Three officers who were absent at the regular installation, were installed at this meeting, these being Chaplain Mrs. Lillian E. Whiting, Council Member Mrs. Elizabeth Mackey, and Guard Mrs. Cora Botham.

It was voted to give out boxes to members to place their pennies in and to be returned later in the fall. The public suppers have been such a success that it was voted to purchase more dishes and silverware in order to give prompt service.

The court also granted a divorce to Margaret M. McNeely of North Adams from James McNeely of Loudon, N. H., for cruel and abusive treatment and neglect to provide. AUTOMOBILE ON FIRE IN ROOSEVELT AVENUE GARAGE

The fire department was called out at 3.03 o'clock Tuesday morning for a fire on Roosevelt avenue and upon their arrival found the automobile of Edmund Cote of 107 Roosevelt avenue, afire in the garage. The fire had evidently been started by a short circuit caused by a connected electric light cord which had been left in the garage by Mr. Cote, who had been working on the car Monday night. The machine was pushed out of the garage and the fire extinguished, but not before considerable damage had been done to the upholstery and the body of the car. Another car in the garage was not touched by fire.

TURKEY DINNER BY TRINITY CHURCH MEN

Under the auspices of the Men's club of Trinity Episcopal church a turkey dinner was served Tuesday evening from 6 to 8 at the Community house with a patronage of over 150 which made the dinner a social and financial success. The menu comprised every customary accompaniment for the well flavored and well roasted turkey and members of the club acted as waiters, under the direction of the general committee, which included Clarence B. Messenger, chairman; S. H. Reed, Walter E. Gilbert, L. L. Brewer and H. F. Parker. The kitchen was in charge of Gerald Harris and Mrs. Harris and there was music during the supper hour from an Edison machine.

Greatness may doubt its own importance, but egotism never does.

DESCRIBES LOUVRE STATUES IN SLATER MUSEUM

The regular meeting of the Art association was held Monday evening at Slater hall. After a brief business meeting at which Miss Eunice Gulliver told most pleasingly of the docent work, Mrs. Robert W. Perkins gave the third in a series of talks on the great galleries of Europe, illustrated by lantern slides.

Mrs. Perkins said in part:

I have been asked to speak about some of the statues in the Slater museum and of the building which houses the originals of the statues, the Museum of the Louvre in Paris. No other city in the world has undergone so many changes as the capitol of France, and within that capitol not a building has been more changed architecturally nor seen more tragic history than the Louvre. It is natural to think of this building as a museum of art and one little dreams that one of the most romantic royal castles that ever existed once stood upon this ground, for not a stone of the original Louvre is left standing and only historians can measure its site and count its lordly towers. Even before this, in the seventh century, Dagobert, one of the Merovingian kings, had built a hunting lodge, but in the 12th century Philip Augustus erected his fortress. It was small and square and had thick walls, few and narrow windows, an immense dungeon and a moat. In the centre was a great "donjon," the walls of which were seventeen feet thick. Here was a place of refuge in time of danger and therein the king stored his treasure.

When Francis I. came to the throne he determined to rebuild the Louvre, and to prevent a permanent incongruity, every fragment of the old castle was removed. The great tower, so strong was it built, took five months to destroy. This was in 1528. Had it been spared Paris would now preserve it as she does the Hotel de Cluny, or Sainte Chapelle. But Francis I did not care about it. Everything gothic was out of fashion and whatever he built was to be in the new renaissance adopted from Italy. Great architects were summoned to the court and plans were undertaken for what is now the oldest section of the present palace. Henry II. added to this section and finally Louis XIII. completed it. Later Louis XIV. extended this section to form the four sides of the court at the east end. In the meantime Catherine de Medici, widow of Henry II., built the so-called "petite galerie," and half of the south wing along the Seine. This was later completed by Henry IV. She also built for her own use the Palace of the Tuileries at right angles to the Seine. To complete this gigantic quadrangle Napoleon I. and III. built the wings along the Rue Rivoli. All of the buildings taken together embrace a superficial area of about forty-five acres or three times as much as the vatican, including St. Peter's. The Palace of the Tuileries was burned in the Communard insurrection in 1871. While historically this was a lamentable event, artistically the loss was not great, for it opened a view from the Place du Carrousel through what is now the Garden of the Tuileries into the Place de la Concorde from which opens the incomparable Avenue des Champs Elysees, all of which culminates magnificently in that Arc de Triomphe de l' Etoile, the most extraordinary vista in any populated area in the world. The history of the collection in the Louvre dates from the 16th century when Frances I. bought in 1545 from Leonardo da Vinci the picture of Mona Lisa. Louis XIII. increased the number of pictures to two hundred and Louis XIV. made it two thousand.

Mrs. Perkins then described the statues in the Louvre, casts of which are in the Slater Museum. Hera, of coarse white marble, found in 1875 on the Island of Samos, is an archaic statue of the sixth century. B. C. Venus Genetrix was found in the 17th century in a town 22 miles south of Cannes. In its conception there is a degree of refinement and a tendency towards sentimentality which are characteristic of the fourth century, yet the full broad chest and well-rounded face, the hair and the simplicity with which the features are modelled carry it back to the school of Pheidias in the fifth century. In the Silenus and the Infant Dionysos the old satyr, to whom the Bacchic legends attributed the guardianship of Dionysos, leans against a tree holding the infant in his arms. His is a coarse sensual type, but not lacking in good nature, and the affection of the two for each other is expressed in the grim smile in the older face and the merry laugh in the younger. The Borghese Warrior, found during the pontificate of Paul V., a Borghese pope, has long enjoyed a reputation among sculptors as an anatomical model. The Apollo killing a lizard may be easily recognized as the work of Praxiteles, the attitude of the slight boyish figure being one often employed by the master. Diana of the Gabii is Praxitelean in character as is shown by the shape of the head, the modeling of the face, the hair, and the richness and delicacy of the drapery. The Artemis of Versailles or Diana with the stag represents the figure of a huntress, tall and slim, rushing through the woods in pursuit of her quarry. There is a successful striving for the desired effect, which is marred, however, by the stag which is merely a conventional attribute and betrays decadence. Nike of Samothrace, on the landing of the grand staircase, is one of the most priceless treasures of the Louvre. The Victory is headless and armless and much mutilated, but that matters little. She is represented as standing on the prow of a vessel. Her wings are outspread behind her and her drapery is swept by the wind. Her knees are hardly bent, so the figure, in spite of the rush of forward motion, does not seem to advance by its own speed but by that of the ship. Venus of Melos, found on the island from which it derives its name, is of Parian marble. Though of exquisite beauty, there is no suggestion of sensuality. The splendor of her form is displayed with neither shame nor coquetry. Her face is pure as it is beautiful, combining the tenderness of the woman with the majesty of the goddess. The treatment of the drapery resembles that of the Parthenon statues, but the expression of character in the face was foreign to the fifth century and would indicate the period of Praxiteles and Skopas.

SAYS TEACHER'S HEALTH IS NOT WELL PROTECTED

The health of the school teacher is not well protected in the public schools of America. The system is such that school teachers frequently continue to teach after they are unfit through illness, according to Miss Olive Jones, former president of the National Education Association, speaking before a group of nationally known educators in New York.

Miss Jones declares that the facts concerning the teachers' health had never been brought to light. An exhaustive study was authorized by the group to reveal the true situation and propose a plan of relief.

"The physical data on record with the superintendent of schools is absolutely worthless," she said. "It records only cases of extreme illness, for a teacher must be nearly at death's door before she stays home.

"It does not take into consideration the hundreds of teachers who are in their classrooms day by day because they cannot afford to stay home. That is because the conditions imposed upon them for recovery of salary, deducted in case of absence, are so severe and so derogatory to their future career and their future promotion in the school system, that they crawl to school or go in taxicabs."

Dr. Florence Sherbon of Lawrence, Kansas, said a physical examination of 44 girls, about to go into teaching, showed 13 of them were unfit physically. But none of them considered herself sufficiently sick to apply to a physican for medical aid.

Dean John W. Withers, of New York University Law School of Education, said there were studies which revealed the fact that the teachers' health is poorer immediately following a short vacation than during the school term, and that there is always more illness right after the Christmas holidays.

Miss Sally Lucas Jean, former director of the Child Health Organization, said the question of the teachers' staying away from school, when too ill to attend, was a vital importance. "I know of one of the leading schools of the country," said she, "in which the teachers are all permitted to attend school when they are ill, but the pupils are not."

Sunday School Teachers, Meet

Officers and teachers of the Central Baptist Sunday school met for supper Tuesday evening in Bushnell chapel at the church, discussing plans of the work for the year. Superintendent Harold S. Burt addressed the teachers and conducted the discussion.

JANUARY LABOR DEMAND LESS THAN A YEAR AGO

Applicants for positions found the demand for labor falling off slightly during January according to the monthly report of the operation of the five state free employment bureaus made public Tuesday comparing conditions with those of December of last year. The percentage of both males and females supplied with employment for the month dropped in the case of male applicants from 61 per cent to 60.1 per cent. and in the case of females from 80.9 to 77.6 per cent., the report shows. Of all applicants for employment 66.6 per cent. were supplied with situations against 70 per cent. during December. Of the total number applying 92 per cent. were furnished with help during the month against 91.5 per cent. during December.

In the Hartford bureau there were 902 male and 267 female applications for employment, a total of 1169; 597 male and 223 female, a total of 820 applications for help and 576 males and 187 females, a total of 773 furnished employment.

In the New Haven bureau there were 259 male and 247 female, a total of 506 applications for employment; 246 male and 263 female, a total of 509 applications for help and 238 males and 217 females, a total of 455 supplied with employment.

In all bureaus there were 2,387 male, 1,424 female, a total of 3,811 applications for employment; 1,519 male, 1,244 female, a total of 2,763 applications for help and 1,436 males, 1,196 females, a total of 2,542 supplied with employment.

FIVE PETITIONS ARE PRESENTED TO SELECTMEN

Five petitions were approved at a special meeting of the selectmen—William Murray, Charles Bushnell and Patrick Connell—held Monday afternoon, calling for roads, lights, fire hydrants, etc., which will be heard at a special meeting of the town next Wednesday evening, Feb. 18th.

The petition to the board of selectmen asked for a special town meeting to determine whether the town will authorize the completion of the improved highway along the Gallows Hill road from the termination of the present macadam road at the reservoir of Ponemah mills, near Taftville, to Washington street, near the Sheltering Arms at Norwich Town. The petition was signed by F. B. Ricketson, agent of the Ponemah mills, and about 125 others. There is also a petition from Washington Holt and others for a fire hydrant near the Salem turnpike near Maplewood cemetery, also another from Mr. Holt and 25 others asking for an appropriation to install sufficient lights from Backus Corner to the pole line that goes beyond Maplewood cemetery. Other petitions ask for lights on McClellan avenue, Norwich Town, and for lights on the Old Canterbury turnpike.

8-WEEK VACATION PLAN ADOPTED FOR SCHOOLS

The eight-week vacation plan for the public schools of Norwich was adopted for the balance of this school year at the meeting of the town school board Tuesday evening in Superintendent Graham's room at the courthouse, with the president of the board Walter F. Lester, presiding.

This means that the 24 weeks of school after the Christmas vacation which have been divided into two periods of 12 weeks each, with a week's recess between them, will be divided in three periods of eight weeks each, with a vacation of a week between the first and second and between the second and third.

The new division of this part of the school year goes into effect at once and will bring the first eight weeks to an end at the close of school, Friday, Feb. 20. School will reopen again on Monday, March 2, and run for eight weeks, to Friday night, April 24. Then there will be another vacation of a week, after which school will reopen and continue to June 19, the closing day of school.

This plan is one that has been in operation extensively in Massachusetts and in a number of places in Connecticut. It does not shorten the school year, but it is claimed that it has noticeably beneficial effects upon fagged teachers and pupils through breaking up the long terms that bring on nerve strain. The teachers are reported to be strongly in favor of it.

The board voted that Lincoln's birthday will not be a school holiday this year.

An important vote was registered by the board in raising the tuition fees for out of town pupils from $12 to $20 per year. This goes into effect on the next school year. The charge for out of town pupils has been $5 per term, $15 per year, but in most towns of the state the out of town tuition charges are from $50 to $60.

SAND CAVE RESCUE SHAFT WITHIN 15 FEET OF COLLINS

Depth of Shaft is Estimated at 45 Feet—Electric Light Failed as Miners Continued to Dig—Reports From Cave City Become Increasingly Perplexing—Military Court of Inquiry Hears Gossip That Collins is Not in the Cave—An Impostor Has Appeared at Haddan, Kan., Claiming to be Floyd Collins.

Cave City, Ky., Feb. 11 (By the A. P.).—Hopes that the rescue shaft at Sand Cave was within 10 or 15 feet of Floyd Collins' underground prison were expressed tonight by state officials in charge of the digging. After two hours of timbering, the digging was resumed at 8 o'clock. No additional evident of an imminent break through the roof of Collins' cavern had developed.

When the diggers gave way to the timber workers at 6 o'clock the depth of the shaft was estimated at 45 feet.

H. T. Carmichael, in charge of the shaft, said tonight that they had reached where anything might happen. Doubt that Collins would be reached tonight was expressed by M. E. S. Posey, Governor Fields' engineering representative at the rescue camp, who said that unless a tunnel is discovered unexpectedly, there was ten feet or more of dirt and rock yet to be penetrated before the level of Collins is reached.

LIGHT IN SAND CAVE FAILS; MINERS CONTINUE TO DIG

Cave City, Ky., Feb. 11—(By the A. P.)—Man's last means of communication with the place in Sand Cave where Floyd Collins has lain for almost 13 days—an electric light line—failed today while miners continued to dig a new shaft to Sand Cave.

The electric light, placed in Collins' prison before the natural passage to the cave was closed by the earth's forces went out this morning and noises heard in a send amplified, and interpreted by experimenters to have been caused by the breathing of the trapped man, failed today for the first time to come through.

H. G. Lane, in charge of the plant, said that in his opinion, either removal of the light from the socket, or the burning out of its filament, had caused the failure of the amplifiers. Again, it was pointed out, the bulb may have worked loose and fallen out of the socket, the last previous test, made last midnight, indicated that Collins was breathing, the experimenters said.

An official bulletin issued at 2 o'clock this afternoon by those in charge of the opinion at the shaft, announced the depth at that time was 44 feet. Another bulletin will be issued at 10 o'clock tonight. Brigadier General H. H. Denhardt, in personal charge of the situation at the cave, having agreed to permit issuance of three such bulletins daily. The other hour decided upon was 9 o'clock each morning.

Unless some unforeseen good fortune comes to the aid of the miners, it was indicated today that Collins might not be reached before late tonight. Unexpected striking of the shaft was the only hope held out for extracting Collins within the next few hours.

Dr. W. D. Funkhouser, zoologist at the University of Kentucjky and also a geologist, expressed the opinion that rescue was not imminent.

INQUIRY HEARS OF RUMORS OF A "HOAX"

Cave City, Ky., Feb. 11 (By the A. P.).—The state's official military inquiry into the Sand Cave rumors relating to Floyd Collins late today turned again to the consideration of "hoax" rumors.

Dr. H. P. Honaker of Horse Cave described his visit into the cave and his appeal for stonecutters, who, however, found that their skill would be unavailing. Dr. Honaker said that he earl concluded that state troops were necessary to take charge of the situation.

"Have you heard," asked Capt. A. M. Chaney, who conducts the questioning for the board, "in any conversation with any persons at the cave, or at any other place, anything that would lead a reasonably intelligent man to think that the body of Floyd Collins was not in the cave?"

"No, sir," Dr. Honaker replied "but I have heard some men say that they did not believe that he was in there.

"I have heard that, but that did not change my opinion. Too many people had gone in there Sunday (Feb. 1) and had talked with him, and had looked at him. Some of them had talked with him who were not close enough to see him, and I had talked with them."

"What, if you remember," Lieut. Col. H. J. Ettes, another member of the board, then asked, "are the names of any persons who ever questioned that Floyd Collins is in there?"

"No, sir," Dr. Honaker said. "I don't believe I could tell you the name of a single individual that told me that. It was just street talk. It was this way, you know. I have heard people say, 'Well, I doubt his being in there at all.' There have been such rumors going around. You see, this newspaper report comes out that said there are rumors that he is not in there. Just rumors, you know."

"That newspaper report started the rumor, did it not, sir?" asked Brig. Gen. H. H. Denhardt, president of the court and lieutenant governor of Kentucky.

"Well, I heard that probably the night before it came out in the papers the next morning," Dr. Honaker declared.

He went on to explain that he put no faith in the rumor and that he had attempted to discountenance it whenever possible. In reply to a question if he knew whether this rumor came from two newspaper reporters, or if he knew certain reporters, Dr. Honaker answered that he did not know a single newspaperman on the story.

TESTIMONY BEFORE THE MILITARY COURT

Cave City, Ky., Feb. 1—(By the A. P.)—There was something in Sand Cave that "unnerved the best men and all of them were absolutely exhausted when they came out," William Hanson, town marshal, testified before the military court of inquiry at the opening of the afternoon session here today.

He told of the early unorganized efforts of volunteers to rescue Floyd Collins, entombed in the cave since January 30.

"Johnnie Gerald, a young man who is known to have a good nerve and a good reputation, volunteered," he said, "to go into the cave if he would be allowed to pick a crew whom he could trust not to pull out loose rock and make the opening more dangerous. He went into the cave and came out a physical wreck."

Lieutenant Burdon of the Louisville Fire Department, he said, did the same thing. There was something that unnerved the best men and all of them were absolutely exhausted when they came out."

Asked by Captain Alex M. Chaney if there had been any disorder before or after the troops arrived, Hanson replied that there had been some disorder but since the arrival of soldiers everything had been orderly.

He said he considered the shaft the only way the rescue might be effected and that the work was in competent hands.

Samuel H. Matlack of Louisville, was recalled to the stand because a telegram had been received from the Louisville Herald stating that complaint had been made that Matlack had not received proper consideration in his examination by the court Tuesday.

Matlack said he had made complaint to no one. He said his only dissatisfaction was that the final question put by Captain Chaney was one which no man could answer either "yes" or "no" without condemning himself as a coward.

He said that the report of his testimony had been misinterpreted, and he had meant no criticism of Lieutenant Burdon or Gerald, and that his only criticism of William B. Miller, Louisville newspaperman, was that his paper had given him so much publicity it had gone to his head.

During the morning session several witnesses were examined, including Lee Collins, father of the entombed man. Preceding Mr. Collins on the witness stand, the Rev. Columbus Doyle, brother of Bee Doyle, owner of the farm on which the entrance of Sand Cave is located, gave testimony.

"I was out at the cave the Sunday night after Collins was caught," said the minister. "I saw evidences of drinking. The work proceeded in a disorganized manner. There were dickerings and quarreling over the methods used. I left because of the conditions there.

"While I did not see any men drink out of a bottle I saw empty bottles and plenty of evidence of drinking going on."

A MAN IN HADDAM, KAN., CLAIMS TO BE FLOYD COLLINS

Concordia, Kan., Feb. 11.—Although persons directly connected with the rescue efforts at Sand Cave are convinced that Floyd Collins is a prisoner there, a man appeared at Haddam, Kansas, today and asserted he was Floyd Collins.

A rambling story was related by the many. Many of his statements did not jibe with what is actually known of the cave prisoner.

"Tell mother I am all right and on way home," the message said. It was signed "Floyd Collins."

The man said he caught a ride into town this afternoon with two farmers who told him of the imprisonment of Floyd Collins in Sand Cave. He said it was the first he had heard of the story.

The man asserted he believed it was a publicity stunt. He declared he sold his interest ni a cave in 1921 to Johnnie Gerald for $16,000 and squandered the money. He said he had not been in Cave City since 1921, when he left there and went to Canada, where, he stated, he joined the Canadian air forces. He said he recently was discharged and was "bumming" his way home.

Haddam's Floyd Collins is not acquainted with Kentucky geography despite a superficial knowledge he displayed of the Cave City Collins family, such as any newspaper reader might have.

He said his home was in West Moreland county, Kentucky, and Sand Cave in a nearby county. There is no West Moreland county in Kentucky.

He is about 30 years old. The initials F. O. B. are tattooed in his right arm, which, he explained, was a symbol relating to the Canadian expeditionary forces.

TATTOO MARKS ON IMPOSTOR; NONE ON FLOYD COLLINS

Cave City, Ky., Feb. 11 (By the A. P.).—Lee Collins, aged father of Floyd, when informed of the telegram from Haddam, Kansas, that a man held there with a flag tattooed on his arm claimed to be his son, declared tonight his son had no tattoo marks on his body. Johnny Gerald, Floyd's friend, declared Floyd had never been away from the cave country where he could have been tattooed and said: "I know he hsan't a scar on his body."

BEQUESTS IN THE WILL OF JULIUS FLEISCHMANN

Mineola, N. Y., Feb. 11.—A $200,000 trust fund for "such charitable or educational institutions" as the trustees may see fit to give it is established in the will of Julius Fleischmann, yeast magnate, filed here for probate today. The bequest was made "with the mere suggestion that the major portion of it be distributed to charitable or educational institutions" in Mr. Fleischmann's former home city, Cincinnati.

The will states that Mrs. Laura H. Fleischmann, the widow, has already been amply provided for. Twenty thousand shares of Fleischmann company common stock are bequeathed to "certain employes" of that company, to be distributed by Max Fleischmann, a brother.

"He understands my wishes," says the will.

After disposing of a number of small bequests to former employes, the will left the residue of the estate to Mr. Fleischmann's two children, Julius Fleischmann, Jr., and Louis Fleischmann Yeiser, both of Cincinnati. The real value of the estate is not mentioned in the will, which says that the personal property disposed of is "worth over $10,000."

To his mother, Henrietta Fleischmann, his brother, Max C., and his sister, Cettie F. Holmes, Mr. Fleischmann left nothing, explaining they were already amply provided for. The brother and Joseph Wilshire, of Greenwich, Conn., vice president of the Fleischmann company, are named executors. The will left 5,000 shares of common stock of the Fleischmann company to Mr. Wilshire.

Mr. Fleischmann left all his holdings in the Dalliada Realty company to the executors, making them trustees of the property, giving them the right to wind up all affairs of the company and forming a trust, the income of which the executor-trustees are instructed to pay to his two children.

Former employes receiving bequests are: Frank B. Smith, Wickford, R. I., yacht captain, $5,000; John Dauphin, Glendale, L. I., chauffeur, $3,000; John Daly, Port Washington, L. I., stable superintendent, $3,000, and Walter Knutsen, Sands Point, L. I., valet, $1,000. The will was dated Aug. 29, 1924.

The estate is estimated at from $50,000,000 to $60,000,000.

"DAPPER DON" COLLINS RELEASED FROM PRISON

New York, Feb. 11.—"Dapper Don" Collins, smiling and debonair as he walked out of Tombs prison today, was re-arrested and then, under the protection of an agreement with France, was set free again.

An ex-convict with whose names police records fairly bristled, Collins was arrested in Paris last summer, charged with having entered France on forged passports.

American authorities hurried over there, and obtained his extradition to this country, to serve a pending sentence for grand larceny in the theft of $5,000 from an American Express company messenger in 1919.

When emerged from the Tombs today, he was re-arrested on an indictment for felonious assault, it being charged that he was involved in the sensational shooting of John R. Reid, wealthy silk manufacturers, in the apartment of Mrs. Hazel Davis Warner in the "Roaring Forties" in 1921.

Collins, interview with District Attorney Banton was over so soon that reporters, trailing him from the tombs, almost mised him.

He was every inch the "Dapper Don" of old as he strolled in, with a detective at each arm. His clother were new tailored, his face fresh-shaven, his spats spick and span and his stick a jaunty one. He wore a mystifying coat of tan, also.

"Er. Banton," he addressed the prosecutor, "the law says I have a reasonable time in which to get out of America and back to France. Just what would you consider a reasonable time?"

Mr. Banton explained that it would as as much time, and no more, as would be required to obtain passage and set sail of the first ship, without undue day.

"Thank you, Mr. District Attorney," said "Dapper Don," "You will not see me again, sir. I wish you adieu. I am going straight from this time on. I have learned that it pays to awlk the path of good citizenship. My conduct henceforth will be exemplary."

With that he sauntered away. No detectives followed him.

REP. TOWNSHEND RESENTS "GAG" RULE IN THE HOUSE

New Haven, Feb. 11.—Declaring that the "gag" rule has been applied in the house of representatives today and that sht was prevented from delivering a speech on the child labor amendment, Representative Hannah D. Townshend, after the session, criticised the speaker of the house, Elbert Darbie, charging that he denied her recognition.

Mrs. Townshen told of a consultation with Speaker Darbie yesterday when she informed him that she would speak on the amendment and asked to be recognized. She said that the speaker agreed.

It is reported that several prominent officials of the League of Women Voters went to Hartford especially to hear Mrs. Townshend. Mrs. Townshend said that she had addressed the speaker three times during the discussion and that on each occasion she had failed to receive recognition.

FINANCIAL RETURNS FROM HENRY FORD'S RAILROAD

New York, Feb. 11—Earnings of Henry Ford's railroad, the Detroit, Toledo & Ironton, in 1924 according to figures made available today, were approximately half the amount paid for the property in 1920. Control of the road was acquired by Ford at that time for about $5,000,000. Last year's net operating income totaled $2,414,000 an increase of a $500,000 over 1923.

Floods Menaced Central New York

Scores of Families Driven From Their Homes in the Onondaga Valley and Lowlands of Syracuse.

Syracuse, N. Y., Feb. 11—The flood situation in the southern lowlands of Syracuse and Onondaga Valley, adjoining, became serious tonight when the water rose rapidly, caused scores of families to flee from their residences threatened destruction of bridges over Onondaga Creek and spread to areas not heretofore affected.

Early today the flood waters had covered an area of one square mile and, rapidly receding, caused officials to believe the flood peril had passed. Many persons who had returned to their homes tonight again were forced to seek safety and hundreds of others had made praparations to flee. Marooned families were removed in canoes and rowboats.

ATTEMPTING TO BREAK ICE JAMS WITH DYNAMITE

Colebrook, N. H., Feb. 11.—Frequent attempts have been made this afternoon and evening to break up with dynamite ice jams which have formed about two bridges over the Mohawk river here. The jams, near the center of the village, have forced the water over the river banks. Three families have already sought safety on higher ground. Houses on three streets were surrounded by the flood.

The rain of last night with the record breaking warmth of the past few days has converted tons of snow which had been accumulating since the last thaw in November into flood water. Hilltops which a few days ago were buried several feet deep with slow were bare tonight.

The ice from the Mohawk river began to break up this morning upstream from here. It has been piled many feet high against the bridges newly constructed last fall. Fears were held tonight that the spans would weaken under the strain and give way. The selectmen ordered a force of men to work all night to free the jam, using frequent charges of dynamite.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN

Some opulent force of genius, soul, and race,
Some deep life-current from far centuries,
Flowed from his mind, and lighted his sad eyes.
And gave his name, among great names, high place.
But these are miracles we may not trace—
Nor say why from a source and lineage mean
He rose to grandeur never dreamt or seen,
Or told on the long scroll of history's space.

The tragic fate of one broad hemisphere
Fell on stern days to his supreme control,
All that the world and liberty held dear
Pressed like a nightmare on his patient soul.
Martyr beloved, on whom when life was done,
Fame looked, and saw another Washington.

BOSTON "BOUDOIR BANDIT" HAS BEEN IDENTIFIED

Boston, Feb. 11.—The "Lone wolf" a burglar who has terrorized apartment dwellers in the Back Bay district of Boston for weeks, has been identified, the police admitted today. A photograph in the "Rogues' Gallery" at police headquarters was selected as a likeneag of the "Wolf" by Miss Bessie Kelly, an artist's model, who was one of his victims.

For the grst time the police tonight were working with a definite clue to the "boudoir bandit" who has made a specialty of robbing apartments occupied by women living alone. Two policemen from each of the 20 stations in the city were assigned to aid the Back Bay force in running the burglar down.

Three apartments were invaded by the "Lone Wolf" in as many weeks and in each case the woman living in the place was bound while the thief at his leisure ransacked her belongings. He remained for hours in the company of his victims, boasting of his exploits. He proclaimed himself to be the "Lone Wolf" and told one woman his real name was Frank Stevens of Worcester. When a fourth attempt was foiled last week by the screams of the intended victim, a model, the police mobilization was ordered.

Another apartment robbery in the district last night was attributed to the "Wolf." The occupant of the place, a stenographer, was absent at the time.

LARGEST EXPORT PURCHASE OF FLOUR EVER IN ONE LOT

Chicago, Feb. 11.—In the face of announcement of the largest export purchase of flour ever taken in one lot, the grain trade today gave way to semi-panic. For at least the time being all talk of any ultimate scarcity of breadstuffs was forgotten. Wheat prices broke 16 1-4 and rye 8 7-8, compared with the day's top figures. May wheat, quoted recently at $2.05 7-8, went down to $1.77 1-2, a loss of 28 3-8 cents a bushel.

By a peculiar combination of circumstances, the upset in confidence of buyers appeared to have originated in lack of demand for feed grain rather than for wheat and rye, the leading bread materials.

Postal Bill Will Go to Conference

Senate Postoffice Committee Refuses Substitute Measure Passed by the House.

Washington, Feb. 11.—The senate postal pay and rate increase bill, which the house refused to consider, was substituted today by the senate postoffice committee for the measure passed yesterday by the house, and Senator Moses, republican, New Hampshire, announced he would seek early approval of the action by the senate.

Such approval, involving repassage of the bill by the senate, will, if given, force the bill into conference between the senate and house, where differences between the two measures will be worked out. The senate rate increases are less in most instances than those provided in the house bill, and the pay advances in the senate bill would become effective as of July 1, 1924, instead of Jan. 1, 1925, as in the house measure.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN SPEECH NEVER BEFORE MADE PUBLIC

Delivered in Springfield, Ill., Oct. 30, 1858, Shortly After the Debates Between Lincoln and Stephen A. Douglas Had Been Concluded—Great Emancipator Explained Prior to His Nomination for President, that in Resisting the Spread of Slavery He Had Labored For and Not Against the Union—Motive Was to Combat the Tendency to Subvert the First Principle of Free Government.

New York, Feb. 11.—The text of a speech made by Abraham Lincoln in Springfield, Ill., Oct. 3, 1858, will be published tomorrow in the New York Times which newspaper states that the address has never before been made public.

The manscript of the speech is said by the Times to be in the possession of Oliver B. Barrett Chicago attorney, who has given permission to the University of Chicago Press to print it in a book with correlative material.

Students of Lincoln's career, it is state, regard this speech as highly important. It was made shortly after the debates between Lincoln and Stephen A. Douglas had been concluded in their campaign for the senatorship from Illinois. The elections were held Nov. 2, and it was said to be apparent to Lincoln when delivered the address that his defeat was inevitable and his political career probably at an end. In the period of almost 60 years which has elapsed since Lincoln's assassination the manuscript of the speech passed through many hands before it was brought to light by its present owner.

Lincoln himself kept it until after his first election to the presidence. When he was disposing of many possessions which he did not wish to take to Washington, it is said, he left with his wife's cousin, Mrs. Elizabeth Grimsley —"Cousin Lizzie Grimsley," as he called her—a carpetbag with notes for speeches.

He had received several threatening letters predicting that he would never be inaugurated, so, he instructed Mrs. Grimsley to dispose of the manuscripts as she saw fit if he did not return to Springfield.

About five years later, after he was shot by Booth, Mrs. Grimsley distributed some of the speeches to his friends. Many others, it is reported, were burned by a servant who thought them of no value.

Among those which were preserved was the Springfield speech, the text of which follows:

"My friends, today closes the discussions of this canvass. The planting and the culture are over and there remains but the preparation and the harvest.

"I stand here surrounded by friends —some political, all personal friends, I trust. May I be indulged in this closing scene, to say a few words of myself. I have borne a laborious and, in some respects to myself, a painful part in the contest. Through all I have neither assailed nor wrestled with any part of the Constitution. The legal right of the southern people to reclaim their fugitives I have constantly admitted. The legal right of congress to interfere with their institution in the states I constantly denied. In resisting the spread of slavery to new territory and with that what appears to me to be a tendency to subvert the first principle of free government itself, my whole effort consisted. To the best of my judgment I have labored for and not against the Union. As I have not felt so I have not expressed any harsh sentiment toward our southern brethren. I have constantly declared, as I really believed, the only difference between them and us is the difference of circumstances.

"I have meant to assail the motives of no party or individual and if I have in any instance (of which I am not conscious) departed from my purpose I regret it.

"I have said that in some respects the contest has been painful to me. Myself and those with whom I act have been constantly accused of a purpose to destroy the Union and bespattered with every imaginable odious epithet; and some who were friends, as it were but yesterday, have made themselves most active in this. I have cultivated patience and made no attempt at a retort.

"Ambition has been ascribed to me. God knows how sincerely I prayed from the first that this field of ambition might not be opened. I claim no insensibility to political honors; but today could the Missouri restriction be restored and the whole slavery question replaced on the old ground of 'toleration' by necessity where it exists, with unyielding hostility to the spread of it, on principle, I would in consideration, gladly agree that Judge Douglas should never be out, and I never in an office so long as we both or either live."

Mr. Barrett, owner of the manscript, writes in the book in which it is being published that "this long-forgotten speech marks a turning point in Lincoln's career" and that "in its brief paragraphs the last echo of the politician is lost in the resonance of the clearer note of Lincoln the statesman." His defeat for the senatorship, Mr. Barrett writes, "extinguished the last spark of ambition for political preferment, but left him firm in his determination to carry on the contest against slavery."

CONGRESS CERTIFIES ELECTION OF COOLIDGE AND DAWES

Washington, Feb. 11—Congress meeting in joint convention today canvassed the results of the November elections and certified to the American people the election of Coolidge and Dawes.

The ceremony was simple, but was invested with the dignity accruing from more than a century of rigorous observance. The sealed envelopes containing the votes of the state electors were opened in aphabetical order by President Pro Tempore Cummins, of the senate, and handed to the official tellers—Senators Spencer, republican, Missouri, and Kio, democrat, Utah and Representative White, republican, of Kansas, and Jeffers, democrat, Alabama, who determined and announced their contents.

The votes already had been entered upon printed forms, to which the tellers affixed their signatures. Senator Cummins then dissolved the "convention" with the statement that formal notice of the vote on the journals of the two houses would complete the requirements of the constitution and the laws for the election of the administrative beginning March 4.

Special preparations had been made to handle crowds in the galleries, but they were only comfortably filled. Despite the warning the chair, the amusement of the audience was manifest when the tellers, on more than one occasion, made mistakes in identifying one of the distinguished candidates. Teh vice-president elect was noted vigorously as from Kentucky, Massachusetts, and Virginia and the president, in the reading of one vote, as being a native of Washington.

FED WINE TO HIS DAUGHTER TILL CHILD BECAME DRUNK

New Haven, Feb. 11—Patrick F. McCarthy, of 58 Ellsworth avenue, was sentenced to ten days in jail on a charge of breach of the peace in the city court today after his wife had testified that she came home and found that her husband had been feeding drinks of wine to their four year old daughter until the child had become drunk. The child was acting oddly, the mother testified and she said McCarthy had admitted giving her rinks. Mrs. McCarthy said her husband failed to contribute much to her support and as she had means of her own she could support the children if her husband would not interfere. McCarthy was ordered by the court to keep away from his home.

GIRL HELD ON CHARGE OF FELONIOUS ASSAULT

New York, Feb. 11.—A 17-year-old girl who gave the name of Blanch Walsh, but admitted that it was not her real name, and an address which has no existence, was held in $5,000 bail on charge of felonious assault, and $1,500 bail on the charge of possessing a revolver, by Magistrate George W. Simpson today.

Max Young, engaged in the millinery business, turned the girl over to the police early this morning on a charge of drawing a revolver on him in his automobile after he had given her a lift.

She refused to give the police any information except that she had come here from East Carabridge, Boston.

FURTHER DETAILS IN ATLANTA PRISON CASE

Atlanta, Ga., Feb. 11 (By the A. P.) —Testimony in United States district court by Graham Baughn, government witness, that after he had sworn out a warrant for A. E. Sartain, warden of the Atlanta penitentiary, on Dec 23, 1924, he had been granted a parole which previously had been denied, late today resulted in the prosecution introducing records containing a grand jury resolution recommending the action to the federal parole board

Baughn, who was convicted in the Savannah rum ring exposure, testified in the trial of Sartain; L. J. Fletcher formerly deputy warden of the prison, and Laurence Riehl, Columbus, O., who was a guest at the warden's house at one time last year. The three men were indicted on charges of conspiracy and bribery as the result of a government investigation of conditions at the penitentiary.

Briefly summarized, Baughn gave the following testimony:

That he arranged to cash a $5,000 check which Mannie Kessler, wealthy New York bootlegger, sentenced to the Atlanta prison, is alleged by the government to have provided Fletcher as a "loan."

That Riehl attempted to sell him a parole for $2,500 early in 1924 before he began serving his sentence in the penitentiary. This proposal was made when Riehl was in Savannah with Father Thomas P. Hayden, then a chaplain at the prison, to collect $10,500 from seven of the men, including Baughn, in return for "soft jobs" at the prison, the witness said Baughn said he never paid the money for the parole, but did pay his share of the $10,500.

That he paid $5,000 to Sartain for the appointment of C. C. Tuten, one of the Savannah convicts, as chauffeur to the warden. Tuten, the witness said, raised the money.

That he and Willie Haar, another of the Savannah men, had lent Sartain $5,000, which the latter, according to Baughn's testimony, did not repay.

WOOD RESIGNS AS HEAD AMERICAN WOOLEN CO.

Boston, Feb. 11.—Cornelius A. Wood, son of William M. Wood, who retired on Dec. 30 last as president of the American Woolen company, announced his own resignation today from the vice presidency of the company. Beyond stating that he had resigned so that he might "carry out other ambitions," Mr. Wood declined to discuss his reasons for leaving or his future plans.

Mr. Wood said that his resignation had been submitted to the board of directors on Jan. 31, but that as yet the board had not acted. He announced that he would remain a member of the board of directors of the corporation.

At the time of the retirement of William H. Wood it was announced that his son would continue with the company, being moved from the position of second vice president to be first vice president.

Wednesday morning at the Normal school assembly Morgan R. St. John, professor of music, continued the talk on music appreciation which he began last week. On the principle that anything must be understood in order to be sincerely appreciated, he outlined the feeling underlying a number of the selections of the Boston Symphony group concert which some of the students are expecting to attend. Pictures of the instruments to be played, clarinet, trumpet, flute and violin, hung on the wall. The girls listened to the prelude to "Carmen," to study the menacing music in it, which Professor St. John explained "fights" the joyous Spanish dance music all through the opera, and the music from the very end of the last act, when the excitement of the jubilant singing crowd from the arena swings most brilliantly and ironically all around the double tragedy with which the opera ends. He played one of Tzkowski's Russian symphonies, a bit from "Rosamund," Shubert's only opera, and "Tryst," a composition by Sevilius, a Finnish musician, and explained how the tunes, the runes and the folk-lore of the country made this music contrast as sharply in places as the long exotic summers of Finland contrast with its desolate winter nights. A protagonist in his time, Wagner was one of the first to break away from the ridiculous kind of opera in which hero and villain, after making a prodigious show of "assault with intent to kill" on each other, suddenly - right-about-faced, assumed a pose before the audience and proceeded to indulge in a long duet setting forth what they were about to do, or supposed to be doing. The music at this time was very simple and intended to be not much more than an accompaniment. Notwithstanding, Wagner was accused of not being able to write a melody. As an example of the fallacy of this idea, Mr. St. John played Siegmund's love song from "Die Walkure."

A large and enthusiastic meeting of the members of St. Paul's parish was held at the church house Tuesday evening, when the men prepared and served a dinner to their women guests. Covers were laid for over one hundred. The meal was strictly the results of the culinary art of the men, who received no assistance whatever during the cooking or serving process. In the arrangement of the table Mrs. Oliver assisted in placing the flower decorations. Charles Cook was chef and his assistants were Hiram Williams, William Johnston, Robert Mitchell and William A. Foote. The menu was roast beef, mashed potatoes, turnip, pickled beets, rolls, ice cream, wafers and coffee. Emil Barnett was toastmaster and a feature of the meeting were several group songs. Brief addresses were made by Rev. Frederick C. Williams, rector, Mrs. Charles Lovett, Mrs. Bert C. Hallock, Mrs. Frederick Williams and Mrs. Gertrude Morrell. The party then assembled in the church, where a program of organ music was given in splendid manner by Miss Jessie Jones. A reel of motion pictures, "The Jack Knife Man," was then shown in the parish house. Round and square dances brought the meeting to a close. Miss Mary Dawson was at the piano.

Rain came Wednesday. It was not a downfall of hot water such as some have been asking for, nevertheless the brief spurts of rainfall assisted materially in cleaning out roads, gutters and sidewalks.

A Ford roadster owned by the Wallingford electrical department, which was stolen from the square in that town early Tuesday evening, was taken over by the local police Wednesday afternoon when found abandoned near Park spring, on upper Jackson street. Officer Arthur Hurley was detailed to bring the machine to a local garage until it was claimed by the owners. It is believed that the machine was stolen by someone desirous of using it to make the trip from Wallingford to this city and that the driver then continued on foot toward Storrs.

The Willimantic Board of Fire Underwriters held its annual meeting at the office of George S. Elliott Wednesday afternoon and elected two new members. Officers chosen were: President, George S. Elliott; secretary, William B. Sweeney; treasurer, C. M. Goddard of Boston. The board voted to hold quarterly meetings with a luncheon and to hold discussions on insurance topics at these sessions.

The meeting of Willimantic lodge of the Ancient Order of United Workmen was held in Labor Union hall Tuesday evening. During the evening the following officers were installed by District Deputy Raymond Clark of Columbia, assisted by Past Master Workman William Burleson and Deputy James Lynch: Master workman, William Costello; foreman, Ethel Simonds; recorder, Eugene Randall; financial secretary, Jennie Randall; treasurer, Loretta Costello; overseer, Gladys Hanson; inside watchman, Alice Hanson; guide, Bert Hicks. A committee of five was appointed to play for a whist. James Lynch is chairman of the committee.

Delegates from the several churches of the Ashford Baptist association attended the three sessions of the state Bible and missionary conference held Tuesday at the First Baptist church here. Rev. H. B. Sloat of Hartford, collector for the denominational fund for Connecticut, presided at the sessions. The speakers were Rev. Dr. P. C. Wright, of New York, formerly of Norwich, assistant secretary of Baptist church work in New York; Rev. Dr. Lynch, medical secretary of Baptist work in the Congo, Africa; Rev. O. P. Campbell of Hartford, in charge of Young People's work in Connecticut; Mrs. Orrin Judd of New York and Miss Mary Howard.

Stephen G. Chontos, character analyst, entertained with a scientific analysis before an audience of thirteen people at the home of Mr. and Mrs. S. L. Cardinal of Ash street recently. The demonstration was most interesting and highly pleasing to those present, particularly in instances when personal facts relative to their individual character were touched upon. Inclinations and faculties were brought out and some of humorous nature, occasioned a great deal of amusement, whereas others relative to confidential advice were listened to with close attention. Present at the seance were Mr. and Mrs. S. L. Cardinal, Mr. and Mrs. Savory of Springfield, Maurice L. Leonard, Miss Alma Cardinal, Miss Medora Cardinal, Miss Loretta Cardinal, Miss Diana Carron, Joseph Brunelle, Joseph Vincelette of this city and Mr. Grady of Storrs.
